It's really like a slap in the face to have my own daughter come home so briefly and then have all the time in the world for Mrs. R. It's not Jim's fault, I know. He and I get along fine and he's never in as much hurry to leave as Kate is.

Maybe it's just the novelty of a new face. Kate and Jim are married only three years and I guess Kate's still getting to know Mrs. R. But even if I'm just "old hat" to her, she ought to put me back in first place.

Kathryn R.: The amount of time we spend with my mother has nothing to do with the strength of my love for her. I'm surprised at this childish show of jealousy.

My admiration for Jim's mother is based on the same reason I'd have for admiring any person I've always tried to emulate. If my mother chose to remember, she'll realize that the teachers I had crushes on and the girls I formed close friendships with were always on the poised, sophisticated side.

While my mother is a dear, motherly persona, her outlook is so limited that her conversation grows terribly boring after a half-hour or so. I've heard it all hundreds of times and well know exactly what's coming when she ratires a topic.

But Mrs. R. keeps things humming and being with her is stimulating and challenging. She reads a lot, takes courses, attends interesting meetings, travels, meets all kinds of people. It keeps us on our toes to be with her.

I can't see how it makes me less of a daughter to enjoy talking about the world situation with my mother-in-law more than omelets with my mother.

The Council: The "easy" answer here would be for Kathryn and Jim to take Mrs. J. along when they flit over to Jim's mother's place, or for them to see the mothers together in Mrs. J.'s living room. But in view of Kathryn's dim view of her mother's conversational prowess, this wouldn't work. Mrs. J.'s presence at the gabfest would be inhibiting.

Kathryn seems dazzled by the pyrotechnics of Mrs. R.'s personality. Mrs. J. has correctly explained her daughter's beguilement as due to the "novelty" of finding such a youthful and fun living in an older woman, a mother-in-law.

But that's only part of the reason for the apparent defection. (We say "apparent" because Kathryn will deny any lessening in her affection for her mother-in-law and attributes the latter's complaint to jealousy.) The other reasons are evident and possibly removable. Kathryn hasn't yet assured her mother sufficiently that as mother, she holds first place in her heart. She must show her mother that her "running off" is an impersonal matter, similar to leaving for a concert or poetry reading.

In addition, Kathryn may be hurting her mother by unfair comparisons and tactic criticism. Her shining-eyed descriptions of her mother-in-law may sound (although she's blind to her own mother's attachments. After all, each mother must be viewed as the "product" of many forces and influences, some of which could not be controlled. Admiration is due each for the extra effort she made out of the raw materials granted her.

Mrs. J., might welcome it's gentle reminder. Kathryn is giving her toward raising her slights higher than local gossip and prejudices, instead of chatting about Cousin Lulu's dog having puppies, why not surprise it's children by telling them latest on the Congo situation? (That'll take some boning up!)

No need to compete with Mrs. R. In a one-to-one relationship, Mrs. J. has her own special talents. But she can move out of the me-not-tal rut she's in. She'll still be Kathryn's sweet mother, but with a dash of ginger added.

Young Couple Honored by Community

ROSLIN — A number of friends, relatives and neighbours met recently at the Roslin public hall to honor Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Edwards (nee Carol Bailey), on their recent marriage.

Carol has grown up in the Roslin community and has been active in community, church and Sunday School, while Sherman, a native of Lakefield has been an active member of his church and Sunday school.

The Rev. J. Nichols, Plainfield as chairman, expressed his best wishes to the young couple.

Mrs. C. W. Slingerland read an address and several gifts were presented on behalf of the community including a tri-lecp, two table lamps and a magazine rack, by Jack Palmer, Paul Colden and Daryl Geen.

Both the bride and the bridegroom expressed their thanks for these beautiful gifts.

Refreshments were served.

CENTENARY W.F.

The Centenary Women's Federation was held recently at the home of Mrs. Harold Hannock. The vice-president opened the meeting. There were 17 members and two visitors present.

Mrs. Sutherland and Mrs. R. Thrasher and Mrs. Fred Meens contributed to the birthday box. There was a favorable report from the bazaar. It was agreed to send contributions to "CARE" "Temperance" and "M. and M."

It was agreed to send fruit baskets to the aged of the community. Cards of thanks were read from Mrs. H. Roblin, Mrs. Peat, on behalf of her husband and Mrs. Aikens on behalf of Marion and Penny.

Everyone was thanked for helping and donating to make the bazaar a success. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nobes send thanks to all for helping with their wedding.

Mrs. P. Sutherland invited all to their Christmas Union Band meeting on December 15 at 2.30 p.m.

Mrs. B. Harder opened the devotional with quiet music and a poem on Christmas. Mrs. R. Nobes read a poem, "Star of Destiny."

The Scripture, Luke 2:8-20 was read by Mrs. M. Nobes with Thelma reading the explanation and a Christmas prayer.

Mrs. P. Sutherland sang a lovely solo, "How Many Miles To Bethlehem," was read by Mrs. A. Christopher. A poem, "Christmas Town," closed the devotional.

Thelma thanked the hostess and the Rev. Richard pronounced the benediction.

Mrs. F. Aikins and the hostess served refreshments.

Sugar Cookie Cut-Outs

By Mary Moore

The recipe I am giving you today is a simple sugar cookie. The main virtue is its versatile texture. You must remember that the dough should be chilled and remain chilled while you cut it out. This means you must roll out only 1-4 of it at a time and keep remainder of dough in refrigerator.

SUGAR COOKIE CUT-OUTS:

4 cups sifted cake flour, 2 1-2 teaspoons double-acting or 2 teaspoons single-acting baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup soft shortening, 1 1-2 cups granulated sugar, 2 eggs, unbeaten, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 4 teaspoons milk (level), egg white, unbeaten, colored sugar, colored icing or other decorating material.

Sift flour with baking powder, salt. Mix shortening, sugar, eggs and vanilla until creamy. Stir in flour mixture alternately with milk. Refrigerate about 3 hours or longer.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

THURSDAY

Lamb Stew with Dumplings; Tossed Salad; Chilled Peaches; Orange Sandwich Cookies (see Wednesday); Tea.

SUNDAY

Scallopini of Veal with Mushroom Sauce; Buttered Rice; Brussels Sprouts; Hearts of Lettuce with Roquefort Dressing; Chocolate Soufflé; Mint-Flavored Brown Sugar Sauce; Coffee.

CHRISTMAS TREES:

On lightly floured board roll out 1-4 of dough to 1-8" to 3-16" thickness and cut out Christmas trees (with "spade" cutter from "fudge" cookie cutter set). Carefully but generously sprinkle with green colored sugar and transfer with spatula to ungreased cookie sheet 1" apart and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 6 to 9 minutes. Do not brown. With spatula remove from pan to cake cooler. Wash and dry cookie sheet and cut out second 1-4 of dough for Red Sugar Balls. This time form dough into long even rod about 2-4" in diameter, by rolling under palms on lightly floured board. Cut into 2-4" lengths. Between palms shape into balls. Dip 1 side of each ball into unbeaten egg white then dip and press into red colored sugar to flatten a little. The egg white picks up enough sugar to completely coat one side. Turn over and place on ungreased cookie sheet, 2" apart and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 8 or 9 minutes.

STARS:

Roll third 1-4 of dough to 1-4" thickness and cut out with 5-pointed "star" cutter. Press 1 silver dragee in each of the 5 points and carefully transfer to ungreased cookie sheet. Bake 1" apart at 400 deg Fahr. for 6 or 10 minutes.

CHRISTMAS WREATHS:

Cut out last 1-4 of dough into 2 1-2" plain round cookies 1-4" thick and bake 1" apart at 400 deg. Fahr. about 10 minutes. Do not brown. When cool, with piping tube frost rim with bright green colored plain icing about 1-4" wide. On this press 8 or 10 red little pellets from cake decorettes to represent holly berries. At centre, if desired, decorate with a piece of thinly sliced citron rind, cut out in shape of tiny holly leaf, and dipped in egg white to make it stick.

Or if desired, this dough may be cut out into big choir boys or angels or any large shapes for which you have cutters — and may be decorated with colored frosting and silver dragees and sugar to represent the character you desire — If you are artistic.

"Lines on Life"

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

One day, a rich but unhappy man visited his rabbi to discuss a problem that deeply troubled him. He had everything and yet he had nothing. He wanted advice to help him get at the root of his difficulty.

The rabbi took him by the hand and led him to the window.

"Look out there," he said. And the rich man looked into the street.

"What do you see?" the rabbi asked.

"People," the man answered with a quizzical and confused look. Whereupon the rabbi took him by the hand again, and this time led him to the mirror.

"What do you see now," he asked.

"Now I see myself," the rich man answered.

But still bewildered by the rabbi's approach to his problem, he cried out: "But what does this have to do with my personal situation"

"Just about everything," the rabbi replied, "In the window there is glass and in the mirror there is glass. But the glass of the mirror is covered with silver. And that's the heart of your difficulty. No sooner is silver added to the wonder glass, and you stop seeing others. "All you can see is yourself. My friend, you had better start looking out the window and forgetting about the mirror, if you want to find a cure to your ills."

There is a pertinent lesson here for some of us. Our lives are without effect because we haven't got a cause. Too many of us are completely wrapped up in our tight little labels, and as a result we're isolated from the main land. We appear to be permanently snowed in and under.

Perhaps we are afraid that if we show some warmth, an interest in others, they may exploit us without end.

Maybe this is the reason too many of us permit our helpful impulses to become dulled, so despite everything we have we remain underdeveloped.

But it is difficult to find a person, actively devoted to some idea or purpose which lifts him out of his own skin, who doesn't actually receive more than he ever could give.

For we are not meant to be lonely, or cancerned. We come to our highest expressions when we feel part of something useful and helpful. People need us, but we also need people.

Once, the tale goes, there was a leaf that pined for the freedom of the birds which flattered prettily. Every day he would watch them soaring on high, singing their songs as they flew. If only he could cut himself loose from the branch that imprisoned him. If only a big wind would come and blow him into freedom, he, too, could soar and climb as he willed.

One day his prayer was answered and a big wind came. Louder and louder it whined until suddenly, with a mighty gust, it blew the leaf free from its mooring. For a fleeting moment the leaf was free. He was overcome with joy and gladness. But it wasn't long before he was flat on his back, an easy victim of the trampling of every passerby. Very soon his life was gone, his strength was zapped and his beauty lost. He died seeking the wrong kind of happiness.

The poor leaf didn't know what some of us don't know, to achieve true happiness we have to be attached to some life-giving force. The moment we cut ourselves off from great causes and concerns, and begin thinking of ourselves alone, we fall prey to our own pettiness.

Like coupons, we are just "not good if detached".

Cocktail Hour

By VIERA WINSTON

The cocktail hour brings forth some of the prettiest clothes of the new sartorial season.

This typical example is a delightful dress that should fit in beautifully in any wardrobe, large or restricted. Of silk faille, it comes in lavender as well as black or dark brown.

The curved-inward, deep V neckline terminates in a small bow and the sleeves are set in. The skirt pleats seem to disappear into a narrowed hemline.

REVIEW OF INTRODUCTION ETIQUETTE

During the coming holidays you are apt to bump into acquaintances that you probably haven't seen since last year! How are you going to introduce them to others that you have met in the meantime?

In our daily contacts, the act of introducing one person another is so important that it is amazing to me how often it is done incorrectly. The accepted rules are simple and easy to learn. The following review of these rules will correct any bad habits you may have slipped into in this regard.

When making an introduction, there are two ways that are considered correct. The simplest, and the best, is merely to pronounce the names, "Mrs. Phillips, Mr. Dow." If you wish to take a more formal approach, it should be, "Mrs. Phillips, meet Mr. Dow" or use the phrase "I want to make you acquainted with." One important point to remember: A man is always introduced to a woman. Her name is always mentioned first. The only exceptions to this rule occur when you present a woman to a high-ranking official (The President or a member of the Cabinet, for example) or an important member of the clergy. In such case it would be "Mr. President, I have the honor to present Mrs. Phillips."

When women introduce one another, the name of the older or more prominent woman is named first because she is the one to whom all the introductions are being made. If their ages are comparable, no distinction is necessary. Be tactful. Do not stress the first name used. These same rules apply when introducing two men. Of course, in either instance, if one is noticeably older than the other, the courteous gesture is to mention that name first.

When presenting a married couple to other, it is simply "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson." If by introducing one person to a group, his (or her) name is mentioned first and oni yonce. The others present are then introduced one at a time.

A husband always presents other men to his wife. He should say "Ruth, Mr. Brown, my wife." The wording "my wife" are addressed to Mr. Brown. A wife introducing her husband, does not use their surname either. "Mrs. Gray, my husband," is said that is necessary.

When acknowledging an introduction, only one phrase is correct. Just say: "How do you do?" Never, "Pleased to meet you" or "A pleasure, I'm sure," etc.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question: My daughter is to be married very soon. It is to be a large church wedding. Relatives and friends from both sides of the family are coming. Some of them from long distance. As parents of the bride, are we responsible for hotel accommodations for all these people who are coming? Do we have to pay the hotel bills and everything for the aunts and uncles and others? — Mrs. J. T. In Joplin, Mo.

Answer: No. Your only obligation would be to take care of any of the members of the bridal party — bridesmaids, etc. If you cannot put them all up yourself, you may ask relatives to help out by taking them in. As for aunts and uncles and other relatives and friends who arrive from out-of town, it is up to them to find for themselves. You are not responsible in any way for their welfare — financial or otherwise.

Club Activities

GILEAD W.G.

The meeting of the Gilead Friendship Guild was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Swan. The president, Mr. Harold Pound, opened the meeting with a carol, "It Came Upon A Midnight Clear."

Business was discussed. The next meeting is to be held at the new hall in the form of a pot-luck supper.

Thank-you letters were read from Mr. and Mrs. Dwayne Mason, Mrs. Bert Grills and Mrs. C. Haynes.

Janet Ross received the offering and Mr. Pound gave a reading.

Mr. and Mrs. Swan took over the program, which included a carol, "Angels From the Realms of Glory"; Mr. Roy Huffman read the Scripture; Bruce Swan gave an accordion solo, "Holy Night," and Mr. Pound read the meditation. All sang "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing. Mr. C. Huffman gave a reading, "What is Christmas, Mommy?" Mrs. Earl Ross gave a solo; George Clare a poem and Mrs. C. Embury read "The Roadside Window" by Ethel Chapman.

Contests were played and lunch served.

Wife Preservers

When selecting maternity clothes, it's a good idea to include a couple of short-dress type of lightweight material. They can be worn by themselves on warm days, or over cotton or woolen blouses from your regular wardrobe on cool days.

MOUNT PLEASANT W. A.

RAWDON— Thirty-one ladies gathered at the church hall, for the December meeting of Mount Pleasant — Rawdon, W.A.

The hall was decorated with an artificial Christmas tree, various festive streamers and tinsel.

The worship centre presented the Christmas Story in picture and was flanked with novel candle holders and red tapers. The president's table was covered with an embroidered cloth and set with green tapers in Christmas holders.

The various wrapped gifts were arranged on a long table and later each lady drew her package.

Mrs. Carleton Potts, president, opened with the W. A. theme song and "The Mary Stewart Collect," in unison. Mrs. Burton Sharpe officiated at the piano.

ELECT OFFICERS

The pastor, the Rev. W. G. Fletcher, conducted the election after the report of the nominating committee was read, by Mrs. Mac Sharp. The new slate of officers were installed as follows: past president — Mrs. Carleton Potts; president — Mrs. Raymond McConnell; 1st vice - president— Mrs. Robert Hoard; 2nd vice - president — Mrs. Clarence Scott; treasurer — Mrs. Kenneth Weaver; secretary —, Mrs. William McAdam; pianist — Mrs. Burton Sharpe; corresponding secretary — Mrs. Ross Jeffs; stewardship secretary — Mrs. Donald Knight, and citizenship secretary — Mrs. W. G. Fletcher. The meeting continued and Mrs. W. McAdam gave her report. Various items were then presented and outlined letters of thanks and proceeds from various functions as follows: Mrs. Ross Jeffs for the rally; Mrs. Robert Hoard for the tea and sale; Mrs. Oscar Merrick, for the barn sale and Hoard's.

It was decided to send five "Care" parcels from W.A. funds. Plans were made to have a pot-luck dinner at the hall late in January. A committee was appointed to purchase a full set of dishes, composed of Mrs. Ross Jeffs, Mrs. Eric Summers, Mrs. Stanley Williams, Mrs. Frank Spencer and the treasurer. A donation was made for the Recreation Hall and it is hoped to have new stage lights for the concert. Two dollars was donated to "Five Oaks," at Paris, Ontario.

Mrs. Milford Wrightman sponsored a vote of appreciation to Mrs. Potts for her leadership, during the last two years.

REPORTS GIVEN

The officers of 1960 then presented their annual reports as follows: the president read Mrs. Fletcher's report, on citizenship; Mrs. Douglas Campbell gave stewardship; Mrs. Robert Merrick, gave literature; and Mrs. Raymond McConnell, outlined the work accomplished at the parsonage. Mrs. Robert Hoard told of the "Friendship Calls," and Mrs. G. Hobble of the cards sent. Mrs. K. Weaver reported of over $1100. in the treasury. Reports were also given for the "Flower Fund" and for the "Shrub Committee."

Mrs. Potts spoke briefly and expressed thanks for the co-operation and she also voiced thanks to Mrs. Percy MacMullen for publicity.

The incoming president, Mrs. McConnell gave a brief message. The program and lunch committee were Mrs. William McAdam, Mrs. Clarence Scott and Mrs. Marguerite McMullen.

PROGRAM

Mrs. McAdam presided over the program which opened with "O Little Town of Bethlehem"; Mrs. Eric Summers read the Christmas Bible Story and offered prayer. Mrs. G. Hubble read "The Gifts of the Wise Men"; Mrs. Clarence Scott gathered the offering which Mrs. J. Holmes collected. The devotions closed with "Silent Night".

The gift exchange followed with Mrs. Will Jeffs providing at the piano for a march.

A long table decorated with Christmas cloth and serviettes was used for the luncheon. Grace was sung and the guests seated, after which the conveners served angel cake, cheese and coffee, and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Remarks Department Store Santa Gets Tired of Hearing

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Remarks a department store Santa Claus gets tired of hearing:

"Don't cry, junior. Just leave the lollipop in his whiskers. Mommy'll buy you another one."

"That do I want for Christmas? I told you when I was here last week. Can't you remember?"

"Better I should get out that cigar, Santa. The doors are open—and there come the little dears."

"This morning we have 300 from the different kindergartens. This afternoon there are 600 from the nursery schools, and tomorrow things really start getting tough."

"I'm from the fire department. Do you have a certificate proving your beard has been flame-tested in accordance with page 7, section 2, paragraph 2, or the city's fire laws?"

"That wuz me brother's list, Santa. Now let me read you mine. It's a lot longer."

GET IT STRAIGHT

"Listen, ya big dope. Last year I asked for a bicycle and you brung me a sled. Don't mess up this Christmas for me."

"When he bends over to pick you up, sis, grab his beard and pull hard. Then we'll find out for sure."

"I don't wanna sit in his lap. I don't wanna sit in his lap. I don't wanna sit in his lap!"

"Oh, darling, he's not God, and he's not Moses. They dont wear red suits."

"P-s-s-t, McGillicuddy, is that you? Your wife asked me to give you this grocery list. And she said to tell you that if Santa C'aus drops off at any bars on the way home tonight, he'll show up for work tomorrow with a black eye."

"McGillicuddy, the store is adopting a new policy this year. We're bringing in six live reindeer. Naturally, you'll be expected to feed and water them each day."

"I wish I had nothing to do all day but sit in a warm department store and listen to children."

"I beg your pardon, but did you sit down on my child's chewing gum?"

"Would you mind telling my son just one more time what happens to little boys who don't eat up all their oatmeal?"

PICTON

Premier Frost Likely to Make Announcement on Bridge

PICTON (Special) — An official announcement concerning the proposed bridge or causeway to connect Deseronto with Prince Edward County will be made by Premier Leslie Frost or Minister of Highways Hon. Cass. Prince Edward County Council was advised at its meeting here yesterday.

The announcement will also include government plans in connection with work on highway 33 from Milhaven to Kingston and to the new 401 highway.

Attending a meeting with the Premier and Minister of Highways yesterday, morning were Hon. W. M. Nickle (Kingston) Norris Whitney M.P.P. (Prince Edward-Lennox), Clarke Rollins, M.P.P. (Hastings East) and J. R. Simonett, M.P.P. (Frontenac-Addington). They discussed the matter of the bridge and highways.

Prince Edward County Warden Arthur Moore told council here that he had received a phone call from Mr. Whitney which stated that there would be an official announcement next week. No details have been released.

The agitation for the causeway to give Prince Edward County an outlet to the east has been under way many years and more recently has been urged by neighboring county councils. Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, mayor H. J. McParland and others, it is felt that, such an outlet will open up an industrial area in the county. Many Sophisticated farmers have had to transport their produce over a ferry to Deseronto canning factories.

Members of county council expressed pleasure that something more definite is to be done about building a causeway or bridge.

TWO CONVICTED

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Two London area men were convicted in Stamford Township magistrates court Wednesday on and charges of false pretences in selling advertising for a non-existent police magazine. Samuel Edgar Houston, 45, of London, and David Howard, 34, of no fixed address, were remanded to Monday for sentencing. Houston was convicted on six counts of defrauding by false pretences, and Howard on two counts.

MARMORA

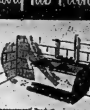
MARMORA — Marmora's Junior fry were out in full force on Saturday afternoon as over many citizens to enjoy the Santa Claus parade.

Leading the parade with a bright note were heralds on horseback with the majorettes and baton twirlers from Belleville, (Brighton and Colborne) and Trenton performing. The Madoc Army Band provided music for the marching. Santa and his reindeer arrived on a truck as Marmora was out of snow although the weather was quite cold.

About 30 floats or decorated cars were in the lively turnout. Those were as follows: Solmes Bros. Contractors, decorated new and an antique car; "Working Well" and Vaughan Glover H.O.A.; decorated cars by S. A. Stephens Ltd., Frosted Foods, Walkers Body Shop; F. R. Loveless; F. Mickle; Jas. Walker Esso Service; the A.O.T.S. of St. Andrew's represented the wise men and F. N. Marette "Good Ship Lollipop". The old "97" train by Marelon Lions was a link of the past. The 4-H Club had a realistic farm scene with the Campbellford Band providing marching music. The knave and queen of hearts with a herald was by Cassidy Appliances; The Snow Queen by Leith Stetson, Jeweller. Marmora Fire Department with Rescue; United Steel Union had the Old King Cole and Fiddlers Three. Little Miss Muffit was present, also a car of bunnies by Uptown Tire with Scouts and Cubs and Cassidy's Furniture were all represented. Clowns, Humpty Dumpty and Woody Woodpecker represented Eaton's, $1. store and Francis Cook Barber and other clowns were from United Steel Union.



Following the parade, children under 10 years attended a free show in the Town's Hall. The Chamber of Commerce, Marmora Canadian Legion and United Steel Union, to be commended for their efforts in making it the best parade yet."

SEED POSSIBILITIES

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian trade commissioner in Paris said Wednesday he is "very optimistic" over Canada's export prospects in France. Andrew Kalewasser told a press conference there are "excellent possibilities" for sales of Canadian lumber, plywood and paper products. There were also chances for sales of mink-spotted Canadian dresses as style-conscious French women liked to buy something different.

FRANKFORD

Lions Club Entertains At Civic Night

FRANKFORD — Tribute was paid Monday night to successful candidates in the field of civic political life when the Lions Club entertained Frankford's Reeve-elect, Frank Rabel, and members of his council, school trustees and commissioners.

Special guests were Reeve Harleigh Hamilton of Sidney Township, Reeve Douglas McMaster of Murray Twp., Earl Sager, Reeve of Madoc Township and Warden of Hastings County, and Eric Denyes Clerk-Treasurer of Hastings County.

The visitors were introduced by Art Duncan of the Bata Shoe Company, and each presented greetings from their councils.

Past-president, Bruce Sarvis, presided as chairman First on the speakers' list was Reeve Hamilton of Sidney Township, who brought the best wishes of the township to Reeve — elect Rabel and the council of Frankford. Similar greetings were presented by Reeve McMaster of Murray Township.

County Clerk Denyes summarized the history of Frankford since incorporation, naming all the reeves who had held office since that time. He recalled military activity in Frankford during the First World War and mentioned many people who had contributed to the town's progress.

Warden Sager spoke of the great advance made in the district's economy by the establishment of the Bata Shoe Company of Canada Limited. Bata's does more than make shoes, he said. It must be realized what their coming has meant to the provision of work and the purchasing power that goes with it, that is felt by all three municipalities affected.

Basically Hastings County is made up of 34 townships and the influx of industry is taken largely for granted.

The establishment of Batawa as a close neighbor to Frankford gives the district a lift at a time when it was most needed. He said that municipal rights such as this provided an opportunity for the officials of the village and townships to become better acquainted with problems of each other and, through this friendly spirit, get things done for the mutual benefit of all.

Past president R. Loucks expressed gratitude for the presence of the guests and for the address they gave, and expressed the hope that they would find their way back to Frankford on many future occasions.

12 SLEW TO DEATH

LAHORE, Pakistan (Reuters) — Twelve persons were burned to death Tuesday when fire broke out in a huge bazaar and destroyed three houses. Six women and two children were among the dead.

Chamber Calls For Revision Of Tax Structure

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Chamber of Commerce called Wednesday for a complete revision of the tax structure as a major step toward solving the country's unemployment problem.

In a brief to the Senate manpower committee, the chamber also expressed concern at mounting government spending which it said is "fundamentally harmful."

On taxation, the chamber, which speaks for some 800 chambers of commerce and boards of trade across Canada, urged specifically:

1. Income tax splitting for married people to ease the tax burden on families.

2. Accelerated depreciation on capital costs of construction undertaken during the winter.

3. Substantial reductions in corporation tax rates to bolster the competitive position of Canadian firms.

4. Tax bonuses for money spent on research, engineering and design.

The chamber is firmly of the opinion that the burden of taxation is too onerous in Canada, and that personal and corporate income tax rates discourage initiative, and that sales and similar taxes add appreciably to the costs of domestic producers, and consumers."

The brief, presented by Leonard Hynes of Montreal, chairman of the chamber's executive council, and Dr. Alex McLeod of Toronto, co - chairman of the chamber's public finance and taxation committee, blamed higher government spending for the high tax structure.

Scoharie

CLUB MEETING

SCOHARIE — The Christmas meeting of the Live Women's Club was held at the home of Mrs. Earl Wellmiss on the evening of December 1st with an attendance of thirty members and visitors and the exchange of Christmas gifts from a secret pal.

A Christmas program and a delicious lunch were enjoyed to close the evening.

Mrs. Charles Fraleigh was present at her daughter's and enjoyed the meeting. It is regretted she has since fallen, breaking her hip, and is in the county hospital. Earle's mother was also present at the meeting and is also a patient in the hospital. Both are wished a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Harry Foster spent Wednesday evening with her grandchildren, Ann and Randy Foster, while their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Foster, enjoyed the Federation banquet in Demorestville.

Many from here attended the conference held for several days last week, at the Pentecostal Church, Picton, where several missionaries and many ministers were present.

Miss Louise Huff, Toronto, was a Sunday guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Huff, Joanne and Larry.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Parliament, Miss Gertrude Parliament, Messrs Arthur and Lyle Parliament and Mrs. Harry Foster were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Foster.

Hugh Parliament is a patient in Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital and he is wished a speedy recovery.

Mr. John Leavitt, Whitby, spent the weekend with his parents and brothers, here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Foster, Miss Norma Foster and Mrs. Harry Foster, attended the Junior Farmer variety night at Murray Valley hall on Saturday evening.

Christmas at Elliot Lake Will Mean More Dismissal Notices, More Vacant Homes

ELLIOT LAKE (CP)—Christmas in Elliot Lake will mean more dismissal notices, more vacant houses and far fewer of the presents found beneath other Canadian Christmas trees.

Once a boom town of spill-level homes and modern shopping areas, Elliot Lake now faces the prospect of becoming the most elaborate ghost town in history.

The work force has dropped from a peak of 10,500 to the present 3,600. It will decline by another 700 when the Algom Quirke Mine closes Dec. 31.

Even employees of the wholly Elliot Lake Standard, which survived the gradual decline of the community until now, have been given notice.

More than half the population has left. From a high of 15,000 residents, it has dwindled to 7,000. Several businessmen have credited a bonspiel here slated for January and February.

Ralph Snepd, town trustee and manager of a brokerage firm, said 218 houses and 100 apartments are empty, with more becoming vacant every day.

A survey by the Standard showed Christmas buying here is down 30 to 60 per cent. And most of the luxury items being left on the store shelves by Santa.

Elliot Lake has had a true boom-and-bust history, short as it is.

It is only seven years since Toronto prospector Franc Joubin discovered uranium ore — the largest known deposit in Western countries—on Elliot Lake, a tiny lot miles from both Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie in Northern Ontario.

Production started about a year later and since then Elliot Lake has produced about two-thirds of Canada's uranium and nearly a quarter of the world supply.

Nearly 2,000 homes and 500 apartments were built, six private schools and one high school went up, three hotels and two more being opened and one, the federal and Ontario governments invested millions of dollars in public services and mortgage guarantees.

At the height of the boom, Elliot Lake workers were drawing some of the highest mining salaries in Canada and uranium was being mined and processed by a dozen of major companies.

The bust began in November, 1959, when the Atomic Energy Commission in the United States cancelled about half the orders being by placing orders for deliveries from 1967 through to 1982. It did not set aside the mining for Canadian uranium ore beyond 1963.

The Canadian government permitted exports to the United States to fulfil deliveries until 1966, but the volume of ore to be delivered remains unchanged.

By 1966, there is unlikely to be work for 1,000 miners.

Boy of Fourteen Sent for Trial On Murder Count

SUDBURY (CP)—A 14-year-old boy was ordered Wednesday to stand trial for murder in the shooting death of Rose Yensen, mother of three children who was stabbed 12 times in her nearby Capreol home last Sept. 26.

Anthony Wayne Yensen of Capreol, 18 miles north of Sudbury, was committed for trial by Magistrate Anthony Palmetta after an open preliminary hearing. The trial will be held at the spring assizes, which open here Jan. 23.

Yensen will be the first juvenile tried for murder in open court in Ontario since Stephen Truscott, 14, of Clinton, Ont., was convicted of killing a 12-year-old girl last year. Truscott was ordered to be hanged but his sentence was later commuted to life imprisonment. Yensen's case was transferred to adult court from juvenile court at an earlier hearing.

FIND 12 WOUNDS

Dr. Jean Kennedy, 41, was stabbed once in the heart and 11 times in other parts of her body. Her body was found in the kitchen of the home while her children, Yensen's ages, from five to seven, slept. Yensen's parents occupied the other half of the home in which the Kennedys lived.

Hensen, a solidly-built young chief said he was probably to have the emotional and mental stability of an eight-year-old, testimony through the hearing. His aunt, Mrs. Lucy Smoley, periodic smiles as he listened to the evidence.

John Parker, with the attorney-general's laboratory in Toronto, told Magistrate Palmetta Yensen's jacket and trousers were the same size as that of Mrs. Kennedy. The boy's blood was of another group.

Dr. Tyrus Lewis, a Sudbury psychologist called by defence counsel Vernon Little, testified that it "difficult to understand how this child could carry out an aggressive act of this nature."

Dr. Lewis said the boy "was the third youngest of 11 children."

WAS ALWAYS GENTLE

"He had congenital club feet . . . there is no history of convulsions. He was always quite the child except when mocked by other children."

Dr. Dixon said Yensen's intellectual development was that of an eight-year-old. He "lives in

Denis Roberts, a psychologist at Sudbury General Hospital, was also called as a defence witness. He said the boy was "within the level of a mental defective in regard to language comprehension."

But Yensen was both "co-operative and friendly" but "found difficult boy to test."

Yensen's husband and the victim, testified earlier that he became interested in visiting his wife's body shortly after midnight Sept. 25. An autopsy showed Mrs. Kennedy had been dead from two to four hours before that and his wife had nevertheless planned to him "about young Yensen coming over to the house."

The boy was visited briefly by his mother during a recess in the hearing. Mrs. George Yensen said her son wanted "nothing in particular—only affection."

Brockville Man Shoots Moose, Is Fined $75

MONT LAURIER, Que. (CP)—Magistrate Taylor Pudford, of Brockville was fined $75 and costs Wednesday for possession of a moose killed in a restricted hunting territory.

He was handed guilty to the charge. He and Arthur Fell, also of Brockville, had been charged that they were a distinguishing mark of Mr. Small.

But nothing really new has gone into the file since the day Mr. Small deposited the $1,000,000 in his bank-finished, visited the office in the Old Grand Opera House, bought some newspapers and then dropped out of sight.

If he is alive today, he is 94. One of the few still living who worked on the investigation intially is Ex-Sergeant Fred Dickson, chief constable here in 1919.

Mr. Small's wife died in 1933, leaving an estate of $2,000,000 which went mostly to charity.

Another person close to Small, his long-time secretary, John Doughty—died in 1949. Doughty disappeared about the same time as Small, along with $105,000 in bonds from his employer's safety deposit box.

Captured in an Oregon lumber camp, Doughty went to jail for four years and nine months for theft after feeding police to the cache of bonds. He was charged, too, with conspiracy to kidnap Small, but this charge eventually was dropped.

MOSLEMS DEMONSTRATE IN ALGIERS —A red hand was added to the star and crescent flag of the Algerian nationalist rebels as Moslem demonstrators waved flags during a pro-government demonstration in Algiers as they swarmed out of the native Casbah quarter in renewed rioting. French forces resorted to guns, tear gas and concussion grenades to turn back the screaming nationalist demonstration. (AP Wirephoto).

Clash Expected Over Govt's. Decision to Seek Increased Revenue by Boosting Taxes

QUEBEC (CP)—A clash is expected in the legislature this session between government and opposition forces over the administration's decision to seek increased revenue from the Quebec personal income tax.

The government introduced two bills in the legislative assembly Wednesday increasing the corporation profits tax to 12 from 10 per cent and reducing the basic exemption on the provincial income tax to $2,000 from $3,500 for married persons and to $1,000 from $1,500 for single persons.

The bills were given first reading and Premier Antonio Barrette and Jean Lesage gave no details to assembly members after Opposition Leader Antonio Talbot exclaimed "it's not true" when the government leader started explaining what the government planned.

Premier Lesage has said if the opposition wants to slow down passage of the bills increasing both the personal and the corporation income taxes, the holiday recess originally planned for Dec. 16 might have to be postponed to Dec. 23.

The government plans to have the bills in force retroactively to operation by Jan. 1. That is the date on which the personal tax increases, which will provide additional revenue for the province estimated at about $12,000,000.

The yield of the increase in the corporation profits tax is estimated at about $12,000,000, this increase in the personal income tax field all present deductions and exemptions provided for in the federal income tax system as well as apply in the provincial act. In addition the bills list items which now figure as deductible items in the federal act will also become deductible in the amended Quebec law.

The main other change affecting a large new category of provincial taxpayers is in personal income tax.

This apparently is designed to spread over as wide an area as possible the additional cost to the government of payments of its hospital insurance program.

Whenever the increase is slight and for persons who have a taxable income up, to $9,000 the additional tax is $60 plus 20 per cent $40 annually. The increase is sharper in the higher income brackets.

Police Finally Close Books On Missing Ambrose Small

TORONTO (CP) — A file of yellowed papers was discarded Wednesday, and that finally closed the books on the mystery of missing millionaire Ambrose Small, one of North America's most baffling cases of the century.

Ambrose Small, Toronto theatre magnate, vanished 41 years ago this month. He disappeared in 1919—the day that he received a $1,000,000 cheque for some of his properties.

Since then, the search has puzzled investigators around the continent, continental Europe and the British Isles, spurred by thousands of reported clues.

Scores of claimants have sent up to Small, resurfaced from mysterious territory.

Each has ended sullenly to the charge. He and Arthur Fell, also of Brockville, had been charged that they were a distinguishing mark of Mr. Small.

But nothing really new has gone into the file since the day Mr. Small deposited the $1,000,000 in his bank-finished, visited the office in the Old Grand Opera House, bought some newspapers and then dropped out of sight.

If he is alive today, he is 94. One of the few still living who worked on the investigation initially is Ex-Sergeant Fred Dickson, chief constable here in 1919.

Bennett Divorce Will Be Probed By Roberts

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Roberts said Wednesday he will investigate the divorce of Amy Bennett, 65, granted last year by the Ontario Supreme Court.

Mr. Roberts said that any that he could not upset the divorce, made absolute by the courts. The husband, a 70-year-old salesman, had since remarried.

The statement followed a column by Pierre Berton in the Toronto Star, which raised the the address given as that of the petitioner does not exist. He added that he had a sworn statement to the effect that the woman in the picture is not the woman discovered by witnesses in the alleged adultery.

Mr. Roberts said that any further proof or evidence relating to the case would be in the field of "perjury or misleading the court," and added that he has taken steps to have an investigation made.

RELY ON BAILIFF

Mr. Justice C. D. Stewart said he must rely on the bailiff's affidavit. He swears the person named as co-respondent is the person he served. It is his responsibility to make sure the identification is correct."

Mr. Justice Stewart heard the divorce petition and granted the decree.

Mr. Bennett, a household goods salesman, said he had known the co-respondent, Martha Crossman, for only three years and said "it was absolutely a crime" that the wrong address was given.

"It's impossible she's mixed up in some shenanigans," he said.

U.S. Businessmen Worried Canada May Grab Big Market

BY HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff

United States diplomats are moving cautiously in their attempts to enlist Canadian sympathy for the American economic squeeze on the regime of Cuba's Fidel Castro.

The kid-gloves approach appears to stem from fear that Canada if provoked, might take some sort of retaliatory action against American firms there.

American businessmen are worried that Canadians may grab a big market in Cuba while the American embargo against exports to Cuba continues.

The U. S. commerce department—despite Canadian denials—is worried about reports "hoodlum" embargoed American goods to the Caribbean country are profiteering the purposes of the embargo while American exporters lose their market.

And the state department is concerned that it may damage U.S. economic success against Castro, it may have widening ill-feelings between the U.S. and her Latin and Canadian friends.

Commerce Secretary Frederick Mueller has written United States Secretary Christian Herotor expressing concern about the embargo but that the state department said this was an exaggerated fear of Canadian intentions.

American diplomats appear anxious to brush over the Herter letter altogether.

One diplomat said Herter was worried only about big boot-legging. Only of late economists apparently told Mueller. Canadian trade was of little matter to the attention of Canadian officials. Mueller, who apparently cautioned Mueller about the existence of anti-American sentiment in Canada and expressed concern about raising the question of ban about Canadian sales to Cuba.

UN Backs Afro-Asian Motion For Liberating All Colonies

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) Soviet Premier Khrushchev's attempts to nail "colonialists" to the moat were backed by the General Assembly of the United Nations Wednesday but he won a point that counts.

A 43-nation Afro-Asian resolution was passed overwhelmingly demanding immediate steps toward independence of dependents and colonial territories. It didn't try to set deadlines as the secret draft sought to do.

Canada stepped in the conciliation arguments—it was the 13th meeting in a tedious debate—by challenging the Russians to give subject peoples the right to self-determination.

Prime Minister John Diefenbaker raised this subject in his address to the assembly Monday and Wallace Nesbitt, vice-chairman of the Canadian delegation, returned to it Wednesday although he noted that Khrushchev had been present to hear Diefenbaker's speech.

ASKED ELECTIONS

Khrushchev was present at the assembly session when Nesbitt proclaimed liberator of the colonial peoples," Nesbitt said. Diefenbaker had asked for free elections to those nations under his dominion and control. "I ask the premier—to give them the opportunity in free elections to express by agreement they want under genuinely free conditions."

Nesbitt said so, Khrushchev could show that he really wanted the right of self-determination for peoples in all its forms and conditions. Nesbitt said:

While Canada voted in favor of it, the United States did British Guiana and the Afro-Asian resolution — which was carried by 67 votes to 0 with nine abstentions.

Nesbitt said the Western great powers abstained, David Ormsby-Gore of Britain remarked that he saw much to admire and much worthy of support.

Ormsby-Gore said the sponsoring countries apparently appreciated that Britain was doing its best to assist new countries in reaching maturity and this was in contrast with the Soviet attitude which was "an extraordinary collection of historical fiction."

ASK DRIVER TRAINING

TORONTO (CP)—Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Frederick Gardiner said Wednesday efforts will be made to institute driver education and training courses in secondary schools. Mr. Gardiner said that the Metro Police Commission and the Metro Toronto Traffic Safety Council will make a combined ascend to the ministries of education and transport for the establishment of the program.

"A Jest a Second"

Witnesses Plead Nothing Be Done to Stop the Flow of U.S. Publications to Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Witnesses appearing before the royal commission on publications Wednesday pleaded that nothing be done to stop the flow of United States magazines into Canada.

Most of them, however, have urged that the government make the Canadian publisher better equipped to handle the top-heavy competition.

The commission, under chairman Gratian O'Leary, is inquiring into the health of Canada's periodicals. A recommendation will go to the federal government.

Witnesses have agreed that U.S. competition is a threat to Canadian efforts, but few have come up with concrete solutions.

Wednesday's witness was Hall, president of the University of Toronto, and Arthur Smith, Q.C., as chairman of the Canada Council urged that "nothing be done to impede the free flow of ideas."

NEEDS POSITIVE ACTION

The solution required "more than negative action by government; we need positive action to help Canadian business . . . a deliberate policy of encouraging a Canadian periodicals."

He asked that any "economic difficulties now facing the Canadian periodicals with respect to U.S. publications competition, should be removed."

Harold Jarvis, chairman of Canadian Art Magazine and former director of the National Gallery told Commissioner O'Leary that of a free society and . . . not Supreme Court. "Nothing is more important but highly destructible."

He cited cultural non - profit magazines should be exempt from federal sales tax, have second-class mail privileges and use government-owned mail transport to send out promotional matter.

WANTS INROAD IN U.S.

Wilson MacDonald, head of the journalism department at the University of Western Ontario in London, Ont., suggested Canadian publishers are sufficient strength to make an inroad in the U.S.

He suggested the federal government make funds available through the Canada Council to learned societies and universities for assistance in exciting cultural periodicals and publications of others.

Marcus Salmond, president of Monetary Times Publications, Limited, said as publishers of financial and industrial journals . . . We cannot see that the Canadian business press has been unduly affected by foreign competition . . . We take no action against U.S. publications in Canada might reflect against Canadian business publications that sells ads to U.S. industry."

His organization's circulation is spread over a wide area and is made up of some 30,000 subscribers.

New Hearing For M. Feener Set for Jan. 13

TIMMINS (CP) — Crown Attorney S. A. Caldbeck announced Wednesday that January 13 has been set as the date for the new preliminary hearing level for Owen (Hickey) Feener, 33, on a charge of murder.

Feener was charged Oct. 8 with the knife-slaying of Kay Chouinor, 26 of Timmins. Her mutilated body was found on a bush road, 12 miles from here five days after she was reported missing.

Last Friday in Toronto Mr. Justice D. C. Wells of the Ontario Supreme Court ordered a second hearing for the handsome miner on the grounds Feener was not asked if he wished to call witnesses at the first hearing October 28 before Magistrate W. S. Gardiner.

Magistrate Gardiner will preside at the new hearing and Mr. Caldbeck will appear for the Crown. The same evidence will be presented as at the original hearing but this time Feener will be represented by counsel and by no lawyer as the first one.

Feener now is in jail at Haileybury.

Plan Service In Cathedral For Hurt Miner

TORONTO (CP) — A special church service was to be held today at St. James' Anglican Cathedral for miner Alan Rear, fighting a battle for life ever since he was severely injured in a gold mine collapse Nov. 19 at Manitouwadge.

Officials of the downtown church have invited people of all faiths to attend the service for the 30-year-old British miner who has been in a semi-conscious state for almost a week.

Little change has been reported in his condition. Internal bleeding continues to complicate his battle to pull him back on the artificial kidney today. The machine has performed the function of most of his malfunctioning kidneys.

Provincial Marketing Plan For Eggs Adopted by Assoc.

TORONTO (CP) — About 250 representatives of Ontario's egg industry Wednesday approved in principle a plan for provincial marketing of eggs in the province.

A general meeting voted in favor of a report by the Egg Marketing Committee, set up eight months ago at the request of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture's Association to study the possibility of provincial marketing plan for eggs.

The committee report now will be put to a vote of the 20,000 producers being voted upon by Ontario egg producers.

Under the plan, the egg marketing agency would establish minimum prices and set a minimum price each week for eggs. The prices would be cash to the retail outlets.

HAS SEVERAL IDEAS

The executive of the plan was to provide more competition at the top level and also at the ground level, as well as trying to prevent wide fluctuations in prices.

The plan would enable the egg marketing agency to supervise grading stations as sub-agents. The stations would be required to report to the agency with any information it required.

Any person or group shipping eggs from Ontario for export or for processing would be required to be required to provide the agency with information.

A licence and levy fee would be deducted from sale of each dozen eggs by the grading station and forwarded to the agency. The licence fee would be used for operating costs, the levy for establishing the market when a surplus occurs.

All eggs not sold by the subagents would be offered to the agency who would either have them processed or try to sell them elsewhere.

Accused Elects Trial by Judge

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Mrs. Inga Saviniki, accused of throwing nitric acid over the head and face, of a Nipigon doctor Nov. 4, elected trial by judge alone when she appeared.

Preliminary hearing is scheduled for Dec. 21.

Mrs. Saviniki told Nipigon housewife was arrested a few days after Dr. E. R. Somerleigh and nitric acid splashed on his face.

Dr. Somerleigh has been in a Toronto hospital for plastic surgery and skin grafting operation.

Mrs. Saviniki told: "I'm glad he's finally going ahead with this thing. It has been so long. She has been in custody since Nov. 8.

House Briefs

HAS NO SUCCESS

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons opposition sought without success Wednesday to learn when the government plans to recommend letters patent to the Letters' Association to study the possibility of provincial marketing plan for eggs.

MOVES LENDERS' BILL

Senator David Croll (L — Ontario) reintroduced a private bill in the Senate which would require money lenders to disclose to the borrower details of the cost of loans in a lump sum and in terms of interest. The bill received first reading.

REVENUES INCREASE

Revenues from the Montreal Jacques Cartier Bridge, subject of governmental prosecution of a Commons committee study, have increased since automatic coin collecting machines were installed last year, Transport Minister Balcer told the committee investigation of the bridge revenues Wednesday. A substantial increase developed after machines replaced less toll collectors last September.

APPROVES BILL

The Senate gave final approval to a government bill to increase from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 the limit on loans to provincial vocational training programs.

STAGGER LAYOFFS

Transport Minister Balcer said the layoff of 1,000 Trans-Canada Air Lines pilots will be staggered from February to August. He said in a Commons reply that every major airline has been faced with the same problem of layoffs with conversion to jets.

PRODUCTIVITY

...ublic — to include university membership.

Its aim as set out Tuesday by Mr. Diefenbaker, elaborating on remarks at an October meeting of conference spearheaded the conception patterned on the British Productivity Council, would be more efficient use of men, materials and machines.

Industrial research, exchange of technical information, readjustments in the working force caused by automation and other subjects would come within the council's range—for specific industries and areas or generally.

Mr. Pickersgill attacked the bill as containing "every kind of vagueness . . . except an appeal to motherhood."

CCF Leader Argue asked where the materia will be if efficiency is improved, and complained the bill is "exceedingly limited in scope." The council would lack even the power of inquiry. Could it even make recommendations to the government?

It should be able to do so, said Mr. Starr, and these would be welcomed.

Mr. Pickersgill said the British council was established in 1948 to deal with a post-war problem including labor shortage. Canada's current problem was unemployment.

The Progressive Conservatives majority defeated two amendments. One moved by Arnold Peters (CCF — Timiskaming), supported also by the Liberals, would have added marketing supports to council powers.

A second by Chesley W. Carter (L—Grey-Bruce), supported also by the CCF, called for council-sponsored meetings of industry, labor and consumers.

SAYS COULD EVADE

Murdo Martin (CCF — Timmins complained that companies could collect income tax exemptions by donating to the council, a method of tax evasion. On top of that, the taxpayer would be required to match these tax-exempt company donations.

Miss LaMarsh raised the prime minister's reference Wednesday to the desirability of Canadian subsidiaries of foreign firms shifting more industrial research to Canada. Was this a "pious hope" or would the council actually have power to shift such research?

Mr. Starr said he didn't think it was right for Miss LaMarsh to wait until the prime minister was absent from the Commons to ask Mr. Starr to interpret the prime minister's remarks.

Miss LaMarsh said she could understand how even a cabinet colleague would have trouble understanding what the prime minister had in mind at times.

J. R. Garland L—Nipissing urged that the railways be well represented on the council. No field of industrial human relations in Canada was more in need of assistance in view of...

...large-scale labor dislocation caused by technological change.

Mr. Peters said the productivity council will be useless unless it is accompanied by legislation providing for disposal of increased production from greater productivity.

The government should also be honest and say that the long-range program and no immediate solution to unemployment. In fact, it might aggravate it.

Car Licences, Permits Will See no Change

TORONTO (CP)—There will be no change in the fee for motor vehicle operators permits and licences in 1961, Transport Minister Rowntree said Wednesday.

Automobile licence fees range from $8 to $25, depending on horsepower; the permit fee is $2.

Ontario's new licence plates, white lettering on black, will go on sale after Jan. 1.

Mr. Rowntree at his first press conference since becoming minister Nov. 21, said 81 driver examination centres have been opened across the province, with an additional 21 centres to be in operation by April 1, 1961.

After this date, department-operated driver examination centres will cover the entire province.

Ontario's demerit point system is under systematic review, Mr. Rowntree said, but if any changes are contemplated they will not be instituted until next April when the system completes its second year.

He said any program to re-examine periodically each of Ontario's 2,300,000 drivers will be "a long way off."

STIRLING

St. Andrew's Church Holds Carol Service

STIRLING — On the evening of Dec. 11th, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, was a bower of beauty, for their special carol service.

Evergreens were used prominently and a tall lighted Christmas tree with a large star at the top, was most beautiful. The church entrance was decorated with greenery, and a "Star of the East", a lighted church set on the pulpit and below was the cradle and the babe in the manger. The windows were brilliant with electric candlelight and baskets of Christmas flowers added to the festive beauty.

Mrs. Harry Morrow officiated at the console of the organ. The processional hymn was "Come All Ye Faithful", followed by four Christmas carols.

The Rev. F. C. Crook, Stirling was the special speaker and he centred his Christmas message on the theme "Westward Ho". The full choir rendered three anthems "Thy God Reigneth, "Glory to God", and "The First Christmas Morn."

The Misses Linda Anne Morrow, Janet Johnston and Judi Cook sang as a trio "Safely Sleep Little Babe". Mr. Clayton Tamnoon read two appropriate Christmas selections which interspersed the music. Mrs. H. Brown rendered a vocal solo, "O Holy Night". A trio "Down of Redeeming Grace" was contributed by Mrs. Walter Warren, Mrs. George Hessmann and Mr. William Reynolds.

The service closed with another group of four carols and the processional hymn, "As of Gladness Men of Old".

Johnstown

JOHNSTOWN — A successful candle-light tea and sale was held at Glen Miller Hall, on Friday evening, sponsored by the Johnstown Women's Association.

The president, Mrs. C. J. Arnot welcomed the guests at the door with Mrs. William H. Harry, at the ticket table.

The large tea table, was dressed with a white cloth with red poinsettias and candles in them were candled and a candelabra and a yule log in the centre with a peach and wax rose pleasing.

Mrs. Fred Meyers and Mrs. Ernest Death, of Johnstown W.A. served tea the first half hour. Mrs. B. Morton and Mrs. C. Whitney of North Trenton W.A. poured tea the 2nd half hour, with Miss Carrie Miller and Mrs. A. Wilson of the guild of Christ Church, Glen Miller taking a turn later. Mrs. Maurice Mallory and Mrs. Arnold Sickle of Frankford W.A. stood by ready to help.

Each of the small tables with their white cloths and candle in the centre with decorations of holly and berries looked quite festive. Those serving were Mrs. Moreland Harder, Mrs. Winfield Harder and Mrs. Douglas Harry.

The candy table with Mrs. Clayton Curtis, in charge was a favorite stopping place for many, while others explored the variety table, where there were all kinds of Christmas articles for sale. Mrs. Arnold Harry and Mrs. Kenneth Sickle were in charge of this table.

Mrs. Kenneth Gere was convener of the "ouch and Take" table.

Mrs. Earl Sickle and Mrs. Frank Johnson with Bonnie Clegg helping, were at the bake table, where al lkinds of goodies were for sale.

The president of the Y.P.U. Miss Thelma Sickle and her helpers, Beverley Clegg, Darlene and Pat Harder, Joan Vandervoort and Dalyn Harry had a table off their own and made a nice amount for the organization.

In the kitchen, Mrs. Alec Vandervoort made the tea while Mrs. Everett Clapp, Mrs. Glenn Sickle and Mrs. Alva Meyers assisted wherever needed.

Henry Ford Will Be President

DETROIT (AP) — The Ford Motor Company has announced that Henry Ford II, board chairman, will resume the company presidency Jan. 1.

The company said in a statement that Ford will act as both board chairman and president for at least "the next several months."

The announcement came a day after the naming of Robert S. McNamara, Ford president, as U.S. secretary of defense by President-elect Kennedy.

N. Zealand's Prime Minister Jacka Holyoake Rose From Humble Start to Key Post

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

WELLINGTON (CP) — Keith Jacka Holyoake, New Zealand's new prime minister, has made the traditional rise from boy to national leader. But even now, after 38 years in politics, Holyoake is just becoming a nationally familiar figure. The public has found it hard to know him well.

He has long had the attributes of a successful politician, but the sure touch of leadership has come only lately.

Holyoake became prime minister when his National party defeated former Prime Minister Walter Nash's Labor party in the November election.

Descended from a pioneer New Zealand family, he was born in 1904 and was obliged to leave school at the age of 12 to work on the family farm. But he continued his education by correspondence and with the aid of his mother, a former school teacher.

His early showed an ambition to enter politics and practised speeches on the farm workers. He soon became a committee member of various farming organizations and eventually graduated to their national executives.

That led to national politics and he won a seat in Parliament in 1932. He lost it in the Labor landslide of 1938, but returned to Parliament in 1943 and has held his seat ever since.

Holyoake became deputy leader of the National party in 1947 and when the party gained office in 1949 he was appointed minister of agriculture. He was a conspicuous success.

Shortly before the 1957 general election the prime minister, Sir Sidney Holland, became ill and Holyoake was the obvious chofce of a young, vigorous leader to fight the campaign.

GOVERNMENT OUSTED

But he was prime minister for only two months. His colleagues failed to grip the voters and National was defeated by Labor.

The failure was not entirely his fault, but critics said his personality had not appealed to the average New Zealander. Holyoake is a handsome, solidly-built man of middle height, speaks in a deep well-modulated voice and dresses carefully in dark double-breasted suits. He looks like a diplomat.

Political organizers maintained that his neat manner and carefully prepared speeches made little impact on the casual, informal New Zealander. His more severe critics accused him of being haughty, condescending and vain.

Yet those who know him privately say he is a natural man of simple tastes, happily married with a family of two sons and three daughters. Those who have worked with him say he is not at all arrogant and, indeed, is always ready to take advice and to delegate authority.

EMERGES AS LEADER

These were the traits which failed to come across at the 1957 election. Three years in opposition made him a more mature politician, with a far firmer grasp on strategy, and in the latest election campaign he emerged as the clear leader. He put the National party case simply, forcefully and convincingly.

New Zealanders for the first time began to feel that here was a real leader. He dictated the course of the campaign. He forced Labor on to the defensive in explaining its tax policy and, by making the campaign centre on this issue, played a big part in the National victory, provisionally announced as 46 seats to 34 held by Labor.

Politically, Holyoake is a liberal kind of Conservative, willing to countenance a full welfare state structure, but in favor of giving private enterprise as much freedom as possible in business.

Now, at the age of 56, Holyoake has a second chance as prime minister. He is better equipped for the task and New Zealanders will be watching closely to see what he makes of it.

Bay of Quinte Basketball

High flying Belleville Crawford Metals continued along the undefeated path in Bay of Quinte basketball league action last night by whipping Picton Prospects 138-48 in the Picton gym.

Meanwhile in Trenton, the Wilsons tightened their grip on second place by downing Northern Electric of Belleville by a 74-39.

Scoring leader Ted Batchelor had another big night for Crawford Metals, increasing his lead over the rest at the loop sharpshooters with a 43-point performance. Crawford were ahead all the way in front 40-20 at the half way mark in the game.

Bill Green, with 27, and Bert Faulkner with 23, also starred on the winners' attack while Phil Bennett contributed 11 points.

Hopkins topped Picton's scorers with 11 while Elson and Fawcett had nine each and Laundry eight.

CRAWFORD METALS (138), Batchelor 43, Green 27, Faulkner 23, Aldarde 8, Bennett 11, Rogers 4, B. Green 2.

PICTON PROSPECTS (49): Hopkins 11, Elson 9, Fawcett 9, Scott 4, Laundry 8, Sinclaire 6, Dingman 2, Bryant, Reynolds.

Habs Doug Harvey

36—And Still a Star

By W. R. WREATHLET
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—Doug Harvey, rated one of the greatest defenceman ever to play in the National Hockey League, will be 36 years old next Monday. Retirement is the furthest thing from his mind.

"I don't feel any different now; I feel just as good as I ever did, and I'm not kidding," said the hefty, good-natured defenceman of Montreal Canadiens Wednesday. He now is in his 14th season.

"I'm not going to try to forecast how long I'll play or when I might retire. Why should I? I still like to play, I still get as much fun and kick out of it as I ever did."

So far as Harvey is concerned now, he simply is going to keep right on playing "as long as I don't get fed up with travelling and don't put on too much weight."

He likes travelling. He has no weight problem. His playing weight is 186 or 187 pounds.

Few people know that Harvey had an extremely painful toe injury throughout the first month and more of this season. Only the more severe injuries keep him out of a game. The most games he has missed in one season of the long NHL career is four.

NHL president Clarence Campbell acclaims Harvey as a player and a leader.

"I think the resurgence of the Montreal team the last few weeks can be attributed to Harvey," said Campbell. "He is the fellow that has carried the mail."

Said coach Hakey: "Harvey is so far ahead of everybody else as a defenceman it isn't funny."

Harvey's explanation of the team's early - season slump is similar: "We weren't digging and we weren't checking. Now we're doing it."

Harvey has been named to the NHL's first all - star team eight times and to the second team once—the season he missed most games. He has won the Norris Memorial Trophy — as the league's top defenceman—five of the seven seasons it has been awarded.

Will Tell Ti-Cats First

For Once Leaf Boss Is Silent

TORONTO (CP) — George (Punch) Imlach, manager-coach of the National Hockey League Toronto Maple Leafs, said Wednesday night he has "no comments" on prospects of a meeting today in Montreal with NHL president Clarence Campbell.

The meeting, if it takes place, would be to discuss remarks attributed to Imlach following his team's 6-3 loss to Canadiens in Montreal Dec. 1.

The Leaf coach objected to the officiating, and was quoted as saying the game's three stars should have been awarded to the referee and two linesmen.

"I always get chumped when I go to Montreal," Imlach said. "This isn't an official visit; any way, I'm not saying anything yet."

MONTREAL (CP)—When Sam Etcheverry decides whether or not he will play with Hamilton Ti-Cats next season he will tell Hamilton general manager Jake Gaudaur know first, likely next week.

The matter was cleared up Wednesday in the wake of a new crop of reports surrounding the startling trade announced by Montreal Alouettes last Nov. 30. The trade involved Etcheverry and Hal Patterson for the Cats' Bernie Faloney and Don Pagnutti.

The latest reports, both showing in print in Montreal, have Etcheverry talking business with New York Giants on a recent trip to New York and of "going to the Eskimos."

Sam flatly denies the first. The second is a columnist's guess that has nothing to do with Edmonton Eskimos. Sam will see Eskimos all right, but as a member of an entertainment party which leaves Friday night for Resolute Bay in the Northwest Territories. He will return Monday night.

WILL VISIT U.S.

"I went from Friday Etcheverry plans to leave for his Albuquerque, N.M., home for a one-month visit.

"I promised Jake I will tell him what I plan to do first," said Etcheverry. "I'll call him some time next week."

Of the reports about his New York journey, he said:

"I took my wife on a shopping trip. We bought some things for delivery to Albuquerque. I also did some business for my father-in-law."

He said he was not the guest of the National Football League Giants and did not discuss his football future officially with any officials of the Giants.

A couple of other things: Etcheverry's home in Montreal west has just been put up for sale and splits reports otherwise. His employers, a soft drink company, are interested in him staying in Montreal.

He is not figuring on retiring from football—"I feel I have at least three more good years in me."

Later: speculation has it that Sam will play with the Tiger-Cats, but he's keeping his own counsel on that matter.

Barons Bump Bears 3-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons impressed thanks today that Hershey Bears also are in the American Hockey League.

They defeated the Bears Wednesday night for the fifth straight time this season as they strengthened their hold on second place in the league race with a 3-1 decision.

With less than two minutes remaining, the Bears lifted goalminder Al Miller, Tex Stringfield checked and Cleveland's final tallied by Fred Glover with 22 seconds remaining. Miller then fired into an open net.

Hershey took a 1-0 lead at the 13-second mark of the game on Pete Conacher's goal. The Barons bounced back in the next period with two fast goals by Moe Mantha and Cal Gardner.

Wings, Royals Both Spin Win Skeins

Two weeks ago, a game with Hamilton Red Wings meant two points for opposing teams. Today it's a different story.

The Wings have picked up nine of a possible 10 points in their last five Ontario Hockey Association junior A games and moved from the league cellar into a tie for fourth place with Peterborough Royals.

Before their current win streak was launched—it is the longest unbeaten record Hamilton has posted in three years — the Red Wings had won one, lost nine and tied four.

During the winning splurge, Wings scored 32 goals while allowing 12.

Tonight Royals are on a five game unbeaten splurge. They have scored 34 goals with 14 against.

A break - down of the games played to date in the seven-team loop, show the third place Toronto St. Michael's college majors have the best record of games played at home. In nine games, they have won five, lost two and tied for points.

Away from home, the league-leading Guelph squad produced the best record. In nine games it has won five, lost two and tied for eight points.

Other clubs at home, Guelph, Niagara Falls Flyers and Peterborough each have 10 points, while Hamilton gained eight and St. Catharines and Toronto Marlboros six points each.

On the road, Niagara Falls have 11 points, St. Michael's eight, Hamilton, St. Catharines and Marlboros seven each and Guelph four.

Tonight Toronto Marlboros meet Hamilton and Peterborough play host to Guelph.

Minor Hockey

In a juvenile hockey game, played earlier in last night's Junior "B" game here, the Bombers secured a 5-4 victory over the Eskimos.

Trayden Scott topped the Bombers snipers with three goals and one assist while Dennis Sinclair and Don Vance each had two goals. D. Reid, N. Richards and Trudeau added the other goals while Bobby Duggan collected four assists. D. Forsythe (2), Norm Richards, Chapin and Sinclair one each.

All the Eskimo goals were unassisted and went to Jerry Jones, Bobby Boyle, Don Goodfellow and Jim Jarrett.

Strike Set For Jan. 14

LONDON (AP) — Professional soccer players of the north of England Wednesday lined up with the south and voted for a strike Jan. 14 unless demands for more pay and better contracts are met.

Players of the Midlands met in Birmingham today and are almost certain to back the strike action.

There never has been a strike since league competition was formed in 1888, providing regular soccer games every Saturday. The Footballers' Professional Association—a union of 2,700 pro players—is backing the move. The players want freedom to negotiate their own terms, a percentage of transfer fees and abolition of the maximum weekly wage of £20 ($56).

The chiefs of 92 English League clubs offer to increase the maximum to £30 ($84) and have made no concessions about playing contracts. Approximately 12,000 persons watch league soccer every Saturday. A total of nearly 14,000,000 persons try to get rich quick in the weekly pools based on the matches. Operators of the pools said they would carry on with results based on Scottish matches if English contests are halted.

Washington, LA Complete Huge Draft

Now Seek Trade Marts

By BOB GREEN

BOSTON (AP)—With a major trade accomplished—the selection of players in an unprecedented draft—the new Washington and Los Angeles American League teams today investigated basketball's trading market.

Both general managers, Fred Haney of Los Angeles and Eddie Doherty of Washington, said they are eagerly seeking trades to strengthen the squads which, for the most part, were chosen at Wednesday's historic session.

Doherty said he plans to talk with several clubs today in an effort to obtain another starting pitcher and an infielder.

Haney huddled with Art Ahrens, a St. Louis Cardinal official, immediately after the draft meeting and said he wants to talk with several other teams.

The Angels now have 'amateurs' each plucked 28 players off the rosters of the other eight American League clubs, paying $75,000 for each player.

CROSS-TRADE LEAGUERS

Los Angeles also picked up two minor leaguers and Washington three, in the total of 28 players chosen by the other eight teams.

The Los Angeles list:

Pitchers—Ed Lee and Duke Maas of New York, Jerry Casale and Fred Caligiuri of Detroit, Truman Clevenger of Minneapolis-St. Paul, Bob Cain and Aubrey Gatewood of Detroit, Ken McBride of Chicago, Ron Moeller and Dean Stone of Washington, Bob Davis and Ned Garver of Kansas City.

Catchers—Ed Sadowski of Boston, Bob Rodgers of Detroit, Bob (Red) Wilson of Cleveland, Earl Averill of Chicago, Infielders—Eddie Yost of Detroit, Ken Aspromonte and Dave Lesk of Cleveland, Ken Hamlin of Kansas City, Jim Fregosi of Boston, Ted Kluszewski of Chicago, Don Hoak of Baltimore, Julie Becquer of Minneapolis-St. Paul.

Outfielders—Bob Cerv and Ken Hunt of New York, Jim McAnany of Chicago, Faye Throneberry of Minneapolis-St. Paul.

The Washington list:

Pitchers—Bobby Shantz of New York, Dave Sisler and Pete Burnside of Detroit, John Klippstein and Carl Mathias of Cleveland, Dick Donovan and Ed Hobaugh of Chicago, Hal Woodeshick, Ernie Maestri and Rasty Hernandes of Minneapolis - St. Paul, Tom Sturdivant, Boston.

Catchers—Pete Daley and Butch Dotterer of Kansas City and Gene Green of Baltimore.

Infielders—Billy Hitchcock of Detroit, Dale Long and Marion Fricd of New York, Jim Mahoney of Boston, Bob Johnson of Baltimore, Hector Rodriguez of Kansas City, Billy Klaus of Baltimore, Johnny Schaive of Minneapolis-St. Paul.

Outfielders — Willie Tasby of Boston, Gene Woodling of Baltimore, Chuck Hinton of Baltimore, Marty Keough and Jim King of Cleveland, Joe Hicks of Washington.

TEAMS GOT $225,000

Some of the eight "old" teams in the league put 15 players—generally veterans and youngsters—in the pool. Each lost seven and received $225,000.

Both field bosses said the biggest gains they made were in the pitching department. Nine of those chosen won more than seven games in the major last year.

In all, Los Angeles picked 12 pitchers, four catchers, eight infielders and four outfielders. Washington's list showed 11 pitchers, three catchers, first baseders and six outfielders.

Doherty won the toss for the pick of the outfielders in the pool of 120 players selected by the other eight teams.

The Los Angeles list:

Pitchers—Ed Lee and Duke Maas of New York, Jerry Casale and Fred Caligiuri of Detroit, Truman Clevenger of Minneapolis-St. Paul, Bob Cain and Aubrey Gatewood of Detroit, Ken McBride of Chicago, Ron Moeller and Dean Stone of Washington, Bob Davis and Ned Garver of Kansas City.

Orders Legislation Drafted

To Sweep Hoodlums From Boxing

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Estes Kefauver has called for swift action by Congress to ban pro professional boxing in the United States from the strangling hold of racketeers.

Adjourning Senate investigation hearings until some time next month, Kefauver said Wednesday a federal boxing commission is urgently needed to sweep hoodlums out of boxing.

He ordered his staff to start drafting proposed legislation at once. He told his Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee that if Congress does not act speedily "the sport might very well pass from the American scene."

Kefauver proposed that the commission stay in existence for the next three years and license everyone who participates in interstate matches. Its powers would include boxer, managers, promoters and even men in television who engage in boxing promotions. Kefauver suggested a tax on fences.

WOULD PENALIZE

Anyone participating in such a match without a licence, in undercover deals or otherwise, would be subject to criminal penalties.

The hearings featured testimony of behind-the-scenes control of boxing by gangsters. Kefauver said the 1951 year showed monopolistic control by the underworld of nearly all major bouts.

In a dramatic windup, New York mobster Frankie Carbo, 56, was brought from his prison cell in Rikers Island, N.Y., for questioning about his role as an underworld monarch of boxing. He invoked his constitutional right not to testify against himself and refused to answer questions.

Carbo refused to say whether he had any connection with the fight business. Nor would he say whether he had threatened anyone in the business with bodily harm.

Those were among 30 questions he declined to answer with perfunctory repetition of a statement typed on a slip of paper he pulled from his pocket the moment he appeared.

IS SERVING TERM

The silvery-haired Mr. Gray of gangland is serving a two-year sentence for acting illegally as an undercover manager and matchmaker.

Carbo stared stonily ahead for most of his half-hour in the witness ring but he broke the icy atmosphere at the finish. With a chuckle, he told Kefauver: "There is only one thing I want to say. I congratulate you on your re-election."

Kefauver, who previously had pledged he would retire, told Carbo he cried for contempt of congress, joined in the laughter.

"You look like a pleasant man," Kefauver said.

There are no set limits for punishment for a person held in contempt of congress. Any recommendation that Carbo be held in contempt would have to go to the Senate, which would draft a citation. The citation would then go to a regular court for trial and rule on the matter, and set punishment.

WILL PLAY AGAIN

MONTREAL (CP)—Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen will rejoin the senior Ontario Rugby Football Union next season, as a farm club of Montreal Alouettes, the Big Four football club announced Wednesday. The Dutchmen dropped out last season.

Coach Perry Cole of the Als said Bob Celeri will coach the Dutchmen. Celeri, now retired, is a United States quarterback who played with Kitchener-Waterloo and Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Big Four.

The Als have obtained a number of homebred performers from the Dutchmen in past years, including Ed Learn, Jimmy Copeland and Dave King.

Chisox Win American Loop Field Title

BOSTON (AP)—Chicago White Sox won the 1960 American League fielding championship—their fourth in five years—official league statistics released Wednesday show.

The White Sox, who also took the team title in 1956, 1957 and 1959, edged Baltimore's young Orioles by a hair, .9819 to .9817, for this year's crown.

Luis Aparacio compiled a .979 average, leading the shortstops for the second straight year, while Sherman Lollar led the catchers with .995. Lollar, who was second in fielding last year, made only three errors in 412 total chances.

Nellie Fox, the White Sox' sparkling second baseman and the leading fielder at that position a year ago, had a .983 average. The only player under Boston's Pete Runnels, the league's leading hitter.

In addition, the White Sox led the league in double plays with 175.

As a team, Baltimore made the least errors—108, while Washington executed the only triple play.

LIGAMENTS DAMAGED

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Plante, Montreal Canadiens' goalie, learned Wednesday that the injury to his right leg is not damaged ligaments. There had been some worry that Plante had cartilage trouble, but special examinations showed otherwise. Plante was ordered to exercise and to take treatment from club chiropractor Bill Head. There is yet no indication when Plante will return to action.

Between Brawls and Battles

Juniors Down Whitby 6-2

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Belleville McFarlands pulled into a first-place tie with Peterborough Canucks here 454 fans here last night when they took time out from brawling to down the Whitby Hillcrests 6-2.

The Macs built an early 3-1 lead and never looked back in the wild, penalty-riddled affair. Referees Leo Goyer and Tim Williams spent most of the night with their thumbs in the air as the Macs and Hillcrests divided 128 minutes in the penalty box.

The clubs split 30 penalties, each drawing a game misconduct, two misconducts, three majors and eight minor penalties, all but two of the majors coming in the first two periods.

The clubs picked up several injuries each with a shoulder separation to Rick Switzer of Whitby and a fractured cut inside Macs defenseman Gary Reid's mouth.

Switzer suffered his shoulder separation when Mac Hunter charged him into the boards at 11.35 of the first period. Hunter drew a double minor for charging and boarding and after that the lid blew off.

The Macs seemed determined to rough the Whitby club up but good in the first period and the Hillcrests got hot under the collar. L. Bobbie and Lyon Middleton drew misconducts when Middleton was caught slashing at 13.48.

The parade continued with Reid getting it for tripping at 15.05 and Mavety for charging at 15.47. Elmer and Westfall mixed it up in a spirited fist fight, good for majors, at 17.41, and Shearer drew a slashing minor at the same time, Roberts was called for tripping at 18.09, the 12th penalty of the period.

Shearer, Mavety and Westfall drew minors before the main bout took place at 14.32 of the second period. Murray and Bobbie drew fighting majors, Hunter a misconduct, Asselstine and Westfall minors, with police, fans and team officials finally going onto the ice to break it up. Then Mavety and Westfall received the battle upon entering the penalty box and got tossed out for good with game misconducts. Bobbie received a five and Hall ended up with a minor and a misconduct at 15.32 of the period.

In a quiet third stanza, the only penalties went to Mac Hunter and Tripp for fighting in the game's final minute.

Turning to the scoring department, Don Forsythe was the Belleville sparkplug with the three goal hat trick, his first markers of the year. Paul McGill had a goal and two assists for the work horse

FIRST PERIOD

"Pug" Keller threw assists and Moe Hunter two. Cory Reid and Pete Weston also drew assists.

Belleville opened the scoring who stood out behind the Mac defense and Mavety got the heave-ho, McGuire, adding misc to his major. Forsythe were three of the best for the winners.

Harvey Burke and Elmer Tran were the Whitby marksmen. Pete Shearer and Steve Westfall drew assists on Burke's goal.

The Booster Club's three-star selection was Forsythe, Keller and Burke.

Forsythe's first two goals, coming in a space of 13 seconds, made it 3-0 for the Macs early in the first frame and Whitby had high hopes for victory. He made it 4-1 in the second, but McGill and McGuire got the others.

Whitby: Topping, Ashby, Burke, Hackett, Switzer, Roberts, Morrison, Burke, Middleton, Middleton, Westfall, Kadwell, Bobbie, Tripp.

Belleville: Moxon, Asselstine, Reid, Mooney, Weston, Smith, McGill, Forsythe, Hunter, Keller, Murray, Bobbie, O. Hall.

Will Seek Canadians In U.S.A.

EDMONTON (CP)—Edmonton Eskimo president Gordon Wynn Wednesday night said the Western Interprovincial Football Union team is "going to make every possible effort to get Canadian players from the United States" for the 1961 club entry.

Wynn said manager Joe Ryan "has more than 500 letters to U.S. college players asking if they or their parents were born in Canada."

Wynn said the club also has an advertisement in a California newspaper to the same effect.

He said, "we hope one of the Canadians now signed will be classified a Canadian."

Under Canadian Football League rulings, a player who was born in Canada or whose parents were can be classified as a Canadian rather than a U.S. player.

Edmonton announced the signing Tuesday of guard Pat Dye and halfback Bobby Walden from the University of Georgia. Wynn said other players have been signed but their names cannot be announced yet.

Senior Hockey

CHATHAM (CP) — Chatham Maroons made their return to OHA senior hockey league play a successful one here Wednesday night as they upset league leading Windsor Bulldogs 5-4 in overtime.

Maroons recently returned from 81-day goodwill tour of Russia and Sweden.

Fred Pletsch forced the overtime period when he scored with ten seconds remaining in the third period, after playing coach Ted Power had pulled goalie Al Bennett in favor of a ninth attacker. The move paid off as Pletsch took a pass from Power and beat Windsor goalie Ross Childs.

Power and Joe Malo led Chatham with two goals each, while single goals went to Earl Flowers, Ed Risch, Marv Arthur and Pletsch.

Leo Bendo, who accompanied the Maroons on their goodwill tours, and Bill Mitchell scored two goals each for Windsor. Joe Zorica and Bob Brown added the others.

Goalie Al Bennett of Chatham turned in a good performance, particularly in the overtime period when he blocked seven saves in the game while Ross Childs stopped 32, including one in the overtime period.

Windsor still leads the league MacGill and Cliff McArthur with 25 points. Chatham is fourth with 18.

Hockey Hints

By Lloyd Percival

"CHECK THEM EARLY"

When Milt Schmidt, present coach of the Boston Bruins, was playing hockey in the N.H.L. he was one of the most effective players in the history of the game. A great skater, puckcarrier and playmaker, Schmidt was even more successful as a forechecker. To get past the Boston rear and out of the defensive zone was always an extra tough job. Many of his Boston players have developed the same knack.

To forecheck well you must not only be agile and quick with your stick, you must also be determined to sustain a dogged pursuit, chasing again quickly if you miss your first check. Too many young players are inclined to make one effort and consider the job done if it misses. You must be dogged and willing to keep digging hard. Schmidt often used an approach that was very effective. He would move in on the puckcarrier and coast as he got close. He would then take a check by moving his upper body to one side. This would often force the puckcarrier into a defensive move for which the centre stay would be ready.

Just as launching a tackle a block too soon is a common error in football so is making your check too soon in forechecking in hockey. Get close to your man, don't use long range poke with your stick. Above all be careful about getting behind the goal. If a player has the puck there not him when he tries to come out. Go behind for a loose puck but otherwise be careful in this area. Royals Edge Beavers 2-1, Kingston Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fred (Skipper) Burchell is a fiery, diminutive centre for Montreal Royals who seems to score goals as easily as his team-mates have been losing games this season.

Wednesday night Burchell fired a winner for the Royals as his tie-breaking goal on a smart breakaway in the third period gave Montreal a 2-1 victory over Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers in the Eastern Professional Hockey League. It was the 23-year-old Montrealer's 17th goal, five more than he scored in all of last season.

In other EPHL action, Stan Maxwell scored twice to lead Kingston Frontenacs to a 5-4 win over Sudbury Wolves.

Kingston's victory lifted the Frontenacs out of a three - way tie with Sudbury and Kitchener into sole possession of third place with 28 points. Montreal, winning only its seventh game, still languishes in the cellar with 20 points.

At Kitchener, substitute goalie Claude St. Cyr held off a late Beavers' rally to preserve the win for the injury - stricken Royals playing with a makeshift lineup. He filled in for Charlie Hodge, called up to replace the injured Jacques Plante of the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens.

More defensive lapses and more problems face New York Rangers coach Alf Pike.

The Rangers have a potentially good power play. Pike was saying after the present National Hockey League season got under way. "But we're giving away that puck much too often when we should be controlling it. It's costing us goals."

The script was repeated in Chicago Wednesday night and it cost the Rangers a chance to close in on the fourth-place Black Hawks.

The first period when Hawk rookie Reggie Fleming stole the puck from Andy Bathgate, skated in alone and scored his first goal to start Chicago on its way to a 4-0 triumph.

The victory was only the Black Hawks' second in their last 10 games.

How About A Few Old Pros?

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Ontario Hockey Association says any team that beats Russia in the world hockey tournament will have to be young, strong and fast.

Ken McMillan, who toured Russia and Sweden with Canada's Chatham Maroons, said at least two Russian teams could walk off with Canada's Allan Cup.

He said IZ-Trail, B.C., Smoke Eaters want to beat the Russians in the tournament they will have to be strengthened.

During the tour Chatham won one game, tied one and lost five against the Russians.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Portland Buckaroos waded to their seventh straight Western Hockey League victory Wednesday night by beating Winnipeg Warriors 6-3.

The win strengthened the Buckaroos' hold on third place in the league race. They have 27 points, six behind the leading Calgary Stampeders and four behind Vancouver Canucks.

Edmonton Flyers and Seattle Totems missed chances to move out of a tie for fourth spot when they suffered defeats. Victoria Cougars blanked the slumping Flyers 4-0 while Seattle was defeated 4-3 by Spokane Comets.

Bill Folk, Colin Kilburn and Max Macklyk put Spokane out of reach before Marc Boland scored Seattle's only goal.

Darryl Sly To Join Smoke Eaters

KITCHENER, (CP) — Darryl Sly, a school teacher in nearby Elmira and a player for the Terriers of the Ontario Hockey Association senior series, said Wednesday he will join Trail Smoke Eaters at the end of the month.

Sly said he has obtained a three-month leave of absence to play for a berth with the British Columbia club. Canada's representatives at the world hockey tournament in Switzerland March 3-12.

But Sly may appear in a Toronto Maple Leaf uniform before heading for Trail. The injury-riddled National Hockey League team has obtained the Galt team's permission for him to dress for Saturday nights game against Boston Bruins.

With Galt, Sly has been playing both right wing and defence, but with the Smoke Eaters he'll likely be behind the blue line.

Smoke Eaters have also signed Walt Peacosh, 23, who was with the Inter-duffel Pontiacs Mts of the Okanagan Senior League.

Easy to Abandon Child If Causing Script Trouble

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Pete and Gladys Porter have coolly and deliberately abandoned their baby girl. But before you condemn them or call the authorities, listen to their excuse: The infant girl was giving them terrific script troubles.

Viewers with long memories will recall that Pete Porter was a selfabsorbed young man divorced into Spring Byington's house in the December Bride series. Now Pete, played by Harry Morgan, is the star of his own series, Pete and Gladys, his wife, who was often referred to but never seen, has materialized as the shape of pretty Cathy Williams.

The Porter baby was born on December Bride, and Pete brought the news, so the baby was as faceless as his wife.

"Even at the height of the new serials, the baby presented plot problems," confessed Morgan. "We solved it temporarily by explaining that the baby was staying with Gladys' mother until Pete and Gladys got settled in their new home."

But now they have quietly abandoned the poor child.

"We just had to cut her out," he said. "She just made things too complicated."

Well, that's television for you.

Will Adjourn From Dec. 21 To January 16

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament will adjourn from Dec. 21 to Jan. 16, Prime Minister Mackenzie announced Wednesday in the Commons.

Mr. Diefenbaker noted that a Liberal party rally will be held here Jan. 8 to 11 and asked why it could be wanted to assure the fullest attendance at it.

He said that in "ordinary circumstances" Parliament would have reconvened earlier than Jan. 16 after the Christmas recess.

Liberal Leader Pearson said that if the government had important legislation the rally would not stand in the way.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he understood the rally would deal with unemployment and the government would be glad to have ideas from it.

"You need them," shouted Mervyn Hardie (L.—Mackenzie River).

Venezuela Irked By Canada Trade With Trujillo

CARACAS (CP)—The Venezuelan foreign ministry has asked its ambassador here to verify statements by a Canadian trade commissioner that the political climate of the Dominican Republic is ripe for Canadian exporters to negotiate more trade and business.

(W. B. McCullough, Canada's trade commissioner in the Dominican Republic, told an Ottawa press conference recently the Dominicans feel "they want to buy from Canada instead of in the United States." He said many Canadian firms are looking closely at the list of products which the U.S. has said there, with hopes of securing a foothold to place U.S. firms.)

At the same time, The Associated Press quoted political sources here as saying that El Caribe newspaper has ties with over Caribbean markets which the United States, for political reasons, ceases to supply. It is possible Canada will lose other markets in Venezuela, the sources said.

The foreign ministry said it would refer to official declarations until it receives the information requested from its ambassador in Ottawa, Dr. Eduardo Egaze.

The Venezuelan government is as avowed opponent of the Dominican regime of Rafael Trujillo.

Organization of American States, of which Canada is not a member, voted recently to impose economic sanctions on the Dominican Republic.

The political sources here were quoted by The AP as saying any Canadian industry that disregarded OAS plans to deal with problems in its area could be considered as unfriendly act.

Acting Only One Career In Life of Greer Garson

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I became an actress because living one life in movies was boring. Now I'm living more than one life, and acting is only one of them."

This was how Greer Garson described the current state of her career. It is a career that has been marked by brilliance. Her movie portion of it has been the best work this year.

She looks a five-year absence from the screen to portray Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in Eastman at Campobello, a role that may well win her a nomination for her second Academy Award (First: Mrs. Miniver, 1942).

She explained her absence: "When I was at MGM, it was like home to me. I had only my mother then, and the people at the studio were family."

WAS UNHAPPY

Greer grew unhappy with the quality of films she was given and left the family homestead. She had married Texas Buddy Fogelson and now there were new interests in her busy life. They lived much of the summer on the Mexican border, along the Santa Fe Trail, spent part of the winter in Palm Beach, where she oversees his business holdings.

"The acting part of my life didn't take the same importance that it had before," she remarked.

The actress admitted that she also faced a problem in her desire to "get out of ruts/lines and habits," by which MGM had catalogued her. She had fallen into it by accident.

"When Mr. Louis B.) Mayer saw me on the stage in London (First) Mrs. Miniver, 1942), he signed me for three pictures. I was playing the part of a series of rather dashing females," she said. "But the first role they gave me was as dear Mrs. Chips and from then on, I was stuck."

FENN. MINER

Nic Adams of TV's The Rebel had married Texas Buddy was born Nicholas Adamshock, Fogelson and now there were son of a Pennsylvania miner.

Dublinski Seeks Job With Tigers

HAMILTON (CP)—Tom Dublinski has applied to Hamilton Tiger-Cats for the dual position of insurance quarterback and backfield coach with the Big Four football league club.

Dublinski met general manager Jack Gladstone earlier this week and declared he was in his best condition since the 1956 knee injury and his 1957 head injury.

"I've been running a backfield most of my life," he said. "And what better place to start coaching a backfield of my older John Trimble?"

Gladstone said he has given no serious thought to hiring a backfield coach, since Isadore Sharpe left to retire December to make himself available for head coach duties at Regina Rough Riders of Calgary.

"We won't do anything about it until after the coaches' conference in the U.S. next month," said Gladstone. "I don't know anything about Dublinski getting the job."

Trimble said he and assistant coach Hank Bullough have been signing the United States for prospects at linesmen. He was impressed with the entire University of Mississippi line.

THE PARKDALE

This group have a "going up" ceremony annually - to which parents are invited. Mostly mothers attended this year, of course we realize somebody has to look after the store.

Cubmaster Jim Hultquist explained that Cubbing is based on Rudyard Kipling's "Jungle Tales." When a boy joins, he is given a white neckerchief, symbolical of the white paint of the jungle boys. A little later, when progress warrants, he is promoted from "New Chum" to a Cub and his white neckerchief is replaced by a colored one, which in the jungle would be colored beads, the colors being the group colors. When he has been eye opened he is given one star and if he passes his tests he is presented with a second star - also when both his eyes are open. The entitles him to wear a "Leaping Wolf" badge on his scout uniform.

The VIP's of the ceremony were Cubs Steven Millar, Billy Hunt, Phillip Glover (Second Star Cubs) and Dowpey Parliament, Larry Pope and Don Reddell. Akela Hultquist in a brief but sincere farewell to his Cubs expressed the hope that they would be as good Boy Scouts as they were Wolf Cubs. He also pointed out how proud Akelas were when their Cubs became Scouts.

Scoutmaster John Foster welcomed the new Scouts and introduced them to their patrol leaders and boys in the patrols. He then informed them that they are now members of the best Sea Scout Troop in the district, to which sentiment we all agree. Boys who became Scouts last year were all awarded their first year star. .

SCOUTS' GOOD TURN

We are always happy to report good turns and although it was not announced we overheard that Parkdale Scouts had donated 183 toys to the Kiwanis Club for distribution to less fortunate children.

Mr. Harry Hutt awarded prizes to Sea Scouts Dave Spring, Tommy Schofield and Greg Michaud for their work in raising funds for the Christmas Tree. Mr. Dillon received praise for his work as badge chairman and Mr. Cannon was commended for his group committee activities on paper drives, etc. Scouts Don Doyle, Don Mullin, Jim Pope and Paul Fudge carried the highest points during the year.

BADGES

Swimmers' badges were presented to Sea Scouts Lloyd Lewis, Greg Michaud, Wayne Brooks, Don Reddell and Cub Don McMillan.

Visitors were invited to stay for refreshments donated and served by the Cubs and Scouts. Parkdale has a very faithful and useful auxiliary but this meeting the boys take over and the ladies enjoy themselves as guests. We noticed Mrs. D. C. Galsworthy, president of the Boy Scouts Auxiliary among the visitors. Parkdale has 43 Cubs and 30 Scouts under the leadership of S.M. John Foster, A.S.M. Harold Frederick, C.M. James Hultquist, A.C.M. Douglas Reynolds and A.C.M. Mrs. Jacqueline Hultquist.

We were very pleased to be invited to this enjoyable evening and hope to be present at the launching of your new vessel. Congratulations are in order for the efficient brevity of the ceremony and the smartness of your boys and leaders.

FARMING

Mr. Lew Andrews wishes us to announce that there will be no swimming on Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve, December 24 and 31.

Cuban Refugees Threaten To Boycott Canadian Goods

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — Cuban refugees say that if Canada persists in doing business with Fidel Castro, Canadian goods may be barred from Cuba if ever Castro is overthrown.

Hector Esteves, head of a group called the Committee for Anti-Castro Organizations, said a telegram to this effect was sent to Prime Minister Diefenbaker by Abel Mestre, a refugee who is forming a living in Miami. About 100,000 Cuban refugees are reported to be in Florida.

"Canada is highly respected by Latins," said Esteves, a former accountant in the Castro regime who fled Havana six months ago. "We only ask that Canada think not so much about the money in trade, but of the terrible things that Castro is doing to the Cuban people."

PICKETS REGRET

The slim, 30-year-old Esteves joined Dr. Ramon Escandon, a 39-year-old Cuban doctor, in leading a 60-man picket force in front of the Canadian Embassy Monday. A bigger demonstration is planning for next Sunday.

Canadian Ambassador Arnold Heeney granted Esteves and Escandon an interview Tuesday. He gave them a copy of Diefenbaker's Dec. 12 statement in the House of Commons in which he said he saw no valid objection to trade with Cuba though he had regretted the direction of encouraging bootlegging of American goods and barges against shipment to the tiny Caribbean country.

Both Escandon and Esteves said the Diefenbaker statement is unsatisfactory. They are particularly concerned over a statement by Cuban Economics Minister Regino Boti that he wants to boost purchases in Canada by $150,000,000 and figure Canada is about to cancel some big trade deal with Castro.

WILL DEMONSTRATE

"Unless Mr. Diefenbaker issues a statement in the newspapers saying he will not increase trade with Cuba, we will carry on demonstrations against Canada here, New York, Miami, Chicago and other places where there are Canadian offices," Escandon said in an interview. He heads a group called the Anti-Communism Pan-American Association.

All of these various committees and associations are united in their opposition to Castro, Esteves said. Many of them are composed of professional and government employees who fled Cuba in recent months. Esteves said he at first supported Castro but could not swallow new orders turning farms co-operatives into Communist - type collective farms.

The pickets distributed leaflets saying: "The people of Cuba hopefully look upon Canada to make a careful revision of her business deals with the government of Cuba."

"To do business with Castro is to wage war against the people of Cuba, Latin America and the United States."

CARRY PLACARDS

Escandon said placards carried by the pickets showed Castro and Diefenbaker shaking hands. This photograph was first sent to another showing Cubans being shot by Castro forces in Havana. Another placard claimed Canada was helping international communism by doing business with Castro.

"We hope to get in touch with the Roman Catholic Church in Quebec to help us," Esteves said. "We know the Catholic Church in Canada is strongly opposed to communism. It may be able to do something to intervene with the Canadian government."

SENTENCE REDUCED

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Mann, 44, sentenced May 20 to 13 concurrent life terms for burglary and housebreaking, had his sentence reduced Tuesday to 10 years by Ontario Court of Appeal. Mr. Justice K. G. Morden said he agreed with Magistrate Fred Thompson, who originally passed sentence, that Mann was a menace to society. However, the proper course would have been to charge him as an habitual criminal and sentence him to preventive detention.

Stirling

STERLING — The village is nicely decorated for the Christmas season. A large evergreen tree is all aglow with multi-colored lights which beam a welcome to one and all. This tree is in a central location where highway 14 comes at the creamery corner; a strip of colored lights cross the streets at this point, making an attractive appearance.

The Royal Bank has its doorways entwined with evergreen boughs and lights making a colorful picture opposite the lighted tree. Several store-keepers as well, have gone 'all-out' with novel decorating ideas and everything is in readiness for Santa's visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Alloo Hadley left Montreal by plane for Scotland. They will attend the royal machinery exhibit in Rad-land.

Messrs. Burton Saleman and Robert Eaton are patients in the Belleville General Hospital.

Miss Hettie Unger, Picton, was guest speaker at the W.M.S. W.A. morning service at St. Paul's United Church on Sunday. She gave a message on Candidate Work in the Woman's Missionary Society and urged a larger role to choose service in the church as their vocation. Mrs. Charles Davidson, president and Mrs. James Rough, read the Bible lesson.

Mrs. George Carlisle, 1st vice-president of Bellevile Presbyterial, offered the prayer and introduced the guest speaker. The junior Choir furnished the special music for the service. Miss Unger was a dinner guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davidson.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brooks visited their daughter, Mrs. Morris Pulver and two grandchildren at the Belleville Hospital on Sunday afternoon. The babies were born on December 3rd, a son and a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Morris Pulver, nee Wayne Brooks, of Rockerville, Mae's grandfather, the late Mr. John Green and his sister, the late Mrs. Emily Gibson, of Rawdon Township were twins in 1881 and this is the first in the family since that time.

Mr. and Mrs. George Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. George Heasman attended the Peterborough Federation of Agriculture banquet at noon on December 8, at Assumption Hall, on Highway No. 7. A special address and program followed the dinner.

On Friday evening Bethel W.A. catered to 200 guests at the Stirling Community Hall on the occasion of the Elaine Christmas party under the supervision of the Unicit officiate.

Mr. and Mrs. George Carlisle entertained on Saturday in honor of the 75th birthday anniversary of her mother, Mrs. M. R. Neal, of Belleville. The guests included her two sisters, Mrs. Bert McCoy and Mrs. Thomas Frost, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Everett Heath, all of Bonarlaw.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Tucker, Mr. Carleton Wright and Mr. and Mrs. A. Caskey were recent guests at the home of Mr. Harold Silliş and sons, at Bonarlaw.

124 PERISH AS TWO AIRLINERS COLLIDE

Lion Of Judah Battles Rebel Forces

Haile Selassie Finding Support In Most Regions

Addis Is Only Province Where Rebels in Control

LONDON (CP)—Haile Selassie flew back to Ethiopia today as troops loyal to him were reported gaining ground in Addis Ababa in fierce fighting with forces trying to push through their coup d'etat against the emperor.

The Ethiopian Embassy in London said the emperor had left Khartoum, in the Sudan, for Asmara, the capital of Ethiopia's Eritrea province.

His return to his country was delayed when his plane developed engine trouble and had to stop at Port Lamy, capital of Chad in north central Africa. Another plane was sent from Khartoum to pick him up.

Asmara is governed by Haile Selassie's son-in-law, Gen. Abye Abebe, and is a stronghold of support for the emperor. Abebe reported today that all troops in Asmara are loyal to the emperor. He said that supporters of the emperor throughout the country are forcing his opponents to surrender.

CLAIMS COUNTRY LOYAL

He said all Ethiopian provinces with the exception of Addis, in which the capital is located, are under the control of forces loyal to the emperor.

The crew of an Ethiopian airliner which arrived in Khartoum from Asmara reported that bitter fighting was going on in Addis Ababa and that troops in Asmara were ready to march behind the emperor into the capital.

Abebe reported by telephone that there were 10,000 soldiers and sailors loyal to him in Asmara "all loyal to Haile Selassie."

Abebe also reported in a telephone interview by the Ethiopian Embassy in Bonn that loyal Ethiopian troops are forcing Selassie's opponents to surrender and the country will soon be under the emperor's control again.

SAY AIRPORT CAPTURED

The crew of the airliner which arrived in Khartoum said the imperial guard had captured Addis Ababa airport from the rebels and that fighting had increased tremendously in the capital yesterday.

Reports that Selassie had returned to Ethiopia came earlier from several sources but at the time were not confirmed.

The Ethiopian King of Kings returned from South America after a 10-day visit and her parents said Addis Ababa announced that the Selassie dynasty had broken out.

Other broadcasts and diplomatic reports indicated powerful forces were lining up to resist the revolutionary government. Fighting was said to be heavy in his eldest son two days ago.

The report of the return of the emperor came from Asmara.

Pro-West Forces Faces Isolation In Laotian City

VIENTIANE, Laos (Reuters)—Troops of American-backed Gen. Phaoui Nosavan today appeared to be taking control of the major section of Vientiane, including the airport, in their battle against the pro-Communist forces of Capt Kong Le.

Military observers believe the airport holds the key to Phoumi's success. Bridges are down between his Vientiane forces and the main body of his troops at Paksane and he needs the airport to keep up a supply line.

The observers also believed that artillery from both sides had "severed in" on the airport site. They said the runway may no longer be in usable condition.

Fires blazed all over the city after three days of fighting. The number of known casualties for the three days stands at 330 dead and wounded.

Phoumi threw a cordon around the heavily-crowded market area where a group of Kong and Pathet Lao pro-Communist troops were rounded up.

FIRES SWEEP SHACKS

Two fires swept the wooden shack slums of Vientiane and the Chinese shopkeepers in the eastern sector of the city Thursday night, making thousands homeless.

Kong's troops fired over the town with howitzers in the direction of Phoumi's emplacements Thursday night but military observers said retiring pro-Communist forces were certain only howitzer fire by 10 p.m.

Military specialists in Thailand said the accuracy of some of the fire by Kong's Russian howitzers indicated they were being manned by advisers other than Laotians. Both new arrivals in Bangkok from the scene of the fighting said they saw no evidence of uniformed Russians or Chinese assisting Kong's forces.

The Thai observers said the howitzer gunners might well be Communist North Viet Nam troops, trained at the artillery school at Dien Bien Phu — where Communist guerrillas captured a French garrison after a 55-day bloody siege.

The American Embassy in Vientiane burned to the ground Thursday when its roof caught fire from a blaze next door. Lack of firefighting equipment hampered efforts to save the building.

Refugees continued streaming out of Vientiane with belongings slung on shoulder poles. A few dead were lying by the side of the road Thursday.

Supplies of bread, rice and water are being put out in Vientiane.

Four Britons on a medical mission in Laos were helping to pick up the wounded and tend them in hospital.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: — The cold weather that invaded Northern Ontario Thursday and covered southern regions this morning, bringing strong northwesterly winds, snowflurries and sharp falls in temperature. The cold spell will continue in all parts of the province today and Saturday, with a promise of variable amounts of cold and sunshine and scattered snowflurries in most regions. Heavier snowfalls will be confined to the snowbelt area south of Georgian Bay and Lake Huron.

BILLION-DOLLAR MINERAL OUTPUT IS PREDICTED

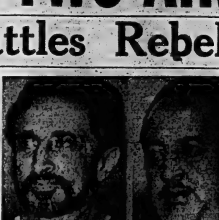
'Roads to Resources' Program Approved

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's vast, untapped mineral wealth and the route by which it should be transported to the North held the attention of the Ontario legislature Thursday.

Mines Minister Maloney, speaking on estimates for his department, predicted more than $1,000,000,000 in mineral production for Ontario in 1961.

In addition to the department's ordinary expenditures of $1,886,000, the House approved $1,550,000 as a capital outlay for Ontario's share of the federal-provincial "roads to resources" program, designed to open broad areas of the North to access and development.

Premier Frost said Moosonee at the southern tip of James Bay is the logical site for an ocean port within five years if Canadians show enough interest.



He said the growth of the national gas industry has opened up an entirely new area of mineral wealth and industry, particularly in the North.

LIBERAL DISAGREES

Liberal Leader Winkler over disagreed with the premier's predictions. He said development of Moosonee could come later—the big task now was to provide money and human resources to establish mineral areas where there were populations. He suggested subsidized freight rates, transportation costs and hydro-electric power to assist the development of new mining areas.

Alan Rose, Injured Miner, Loses 3-Week Fight for Life

TORONTO (CP) — The heroic struggle for life of British immigrant Alan Rose ended Thursday night.

He died at 9:30 p.m. in Toronto General Hospital, almost a week after doctors had given up all hope of saving him.

Rose, 36, had been in hospital 23 days after he was trapped for 80 hours by a mine cave-in at Timmins, in Northern Ontario. Doctors said only his rugged constitution kept him alive so long.

His wife Shirley, flown here from Manchester, England, after the accident, was at his bedside when the end came. Doctors said she "took it like a brick." It was reported she would take the body back to England for burial.

The immediate cause of death was hemorrhage of the bowel due to kidney failure, also complications of infection. During his stay in hospital, Rose had been attached to an artificial kidney a record nine times.

Death came only a few hours after 1,000 persons had knelt in St. James Anglican Cathedral here at a special service ended Thursday for Rose.

Mrs. Rose, who had gone alone to the Church of St. Aidan, prayed only that "if it is God's will Alan be taken, his fight be ended without more suffering."

Rose's incredible battle for life started Nov. 19, one hour before his Saturday shift was to end at the Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mine. A plumber by trade, he had been working in the mine six weeks to save enough money to bring his wife and two-year-old son, Mark, to Canada.

Rose was working at the 750-foot level with John McPhail, veteran hardrock miner, when rock began to fall. Rose jumped the wrong way and was trapped, his legs pinned by timbers.

When rescued, Rose seemed to be in fair shape, but kidney complications set in and he was flown to Toronto. He was soon joined by his wife and dis, flown

Father of Two Crushed Under Michigan Loader

BRIGHTON (Special)

Glenn Gelbraith, 29, of Colborne, father of two children, was dead on arrival at hospital in Cobourg early today when he was crushed under a Michigan loader while working for a construction company on night-way 401, just west of here.

The loader, which had been overturned, crushing Mr. Gelbraith, who was driving it. He was pronounced dead on arrival by ambulance to a Cobourg hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Killed by Car

OTTAWA (CP)—Laura Muscat, 7, was killed and her parents and sister seriously injured Thursday night when their car was struck crossing a downtown intersection. Alfred Gravelle, 29, was charged with criminal negligence.

Police said the car hit the family on a pedestrian lane. Mrs. Muscat of Laura was found 96 feet from the point of impact. Her husband Victor was thrown 56 feet, her mother 60 feet, and the father 41 feet.

CMA Calls for Reduction Of Corporation, Income Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Manufacturers Association called today for a reduction in corporation and personal income taxes.

They are too high at present for the long-term development of the Canadian economy, said a brief submitted to Prime Minister Diefenbaker over the signature of J. C. Whiteley, general manager of the association.

The 49-page brief also called for:

1. Tax incentives, including increased capital cost allowances, to encourage "natural development" of Canada's resources.

2. Additional capital cost allowances for new industries beginning the manufacture of new products in Canada and for existing industries undertaking the manufacture of goods not formerly made in Canada.

3. Tax concessions to stimulate exports.

4. Greater encouragement of foreign investment in Canada by removing corporations to write off in one year their capital expenditures on scientific research, and by removing the five-per-cent of withholding tax on dividend or money expended for scientific research.

The CMA strongly opposed separate corporation and personal taxes by each of the provinces. The federal government has already "preempted the income taxing to do so to collect its own corporation and income taxes and succession duties.

"This would place an intolerable burden on industry. . . There should be uniform tax legislation with one central assessment and collection agency."

The association expressed concern about "the flood of competitive imported goods" into

PRODUCTIVITY ACT AND BUDGET GETTING ROUGH RIDE IN HOUSE

Under Bombardment By Opposition

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation setting up a national productivity council is being debated in the Commons under a bombardment of opposition charges that it is shirking but window dressing for empty government employment propaganda.

The bill to establish the council, a 25-member body striving for increased efficiency in Canadian use of men, materials and machines, was subjected to the unsuccessful opposition amendments Thursday in its plodding advance toward acceptance.

The fourth portion of the government's pre - Christmas jockeying package, the productivity bill still hadn't gained Commons approval at Thursday night's 10 p.m. adjournment. Debate continues today on third and final reading—the bill came up Tuesday for approval in principle and since has trudged slowly through the underbrush of clause-by-clause study in committee.

SEES LITTLE REMEDY

"Parades and pretensions," said Paul Martin (L — East End), complaining that the council offers little if any direct remedy for the situation in which 629,000 Canadians lacked jobs in mid-November.

November saw 90,000 more Canadians employed than ever before, retired Labor Minister Milton Gregg, chief of the measure. The productivity council was only part of a program designed

Three Missing Men Turn Up

OUTLOOK, Sask. (CP) — A night-long snowstorm and a Monday morning with three men abroad on a 350-mile flight from Outlook to Brandon, Man., reformed to almost Hollywood. The men were subject and the press understood. The men spent the night at an abandoned farm house after the plane had made an emergency landing because it iced up. There was no telephone in the area.

Sent for Trial

TORONTO (CP)—Two Chinese Canadians were committed on Thursday for trial on charges of conspiracy hearing on charges of conspiracy to procure by fraudulent means admission into Canada of immigrants, to Canada.

They are Lowney Chan and grocer Kent Lee, alias Lee Mon Kuen, both elected trial by judge and jury. Chan also faces a charge of making a false document for the admission of Chinese immigrants to Canada.

Two Planes Fall On Staten Isle And In Brooklyn

Cannot Even Estimate Casualties on Ground

NEW YORK (AP) — Two big airliners, probing for a landing in a snowstorm, collided today and plunged like flaming meteors into the city, with 124 believed dead.

The crashes loosed fire and terror on the ground.

The extent of casualties among residents could not even be guessed for the time being.

Fire Commissioner Edward F. Cavanagh Jr., said, however, at 12:45 p.m., about two hours after the accident, that no dead had been found in 10 apartment houses and a church in Brooklyn involved either in the crash or fires resulting from it.

He said firemen had not been able to dig through all the wreckage.

One plane, a United Air Lines DC-8 jet, plummeted into a heavily populated section of Brooklyn, setting an entire block of apartment buildings and shops ablaze. Walls were shattered and debris scattered like bomb fragments.

A church was demolished.

It was the first crash in North America of a pure jet carrying passengers. There were 63 persons aboard.

The other plane, a Trans World Airline Constellation with 42 aboard, raced over the Miller Field section of Staten Island and struck in the harbor water. It also started fires in structures in the area.

Of the 125 persons on the two planes, only one survivor was reported, an 11 - year - old boy, plucked from the wreckage of the crash in Brooklyn. Most of the reports of other survivors on Staten Island proved unfounded.

The crash came about 10 a.m. with a heavy snow fogging the air.

The survivor was identified as Stephen Slatis, 11, of Chicago. He was taken to Brooklyn Methodist Hospital in critical condition.

"The Coast Guard said it had 23 boats searching waters off Brooklyn and Staten Island for survivors or bodies.

Idlewild airport sources said the close proximity of the wreckage indicated a mid-air collision, nobody could be found immediately who had actually witnessed the two planes smashing together.

Thousands of spectators rushed to the Brooklyn disaster area. Roadways leading to the crash were choked with traffic. Emergency vehicles had difficulty getting through.

15 BODIES FOUND

In Brooklyn, two hours after the crash, the bodies of 15 persons had been taken to vacant lots nearby. The identities of the victims were 11 men and four women.

The TWA plane flight 266 was bound from Chicago to Idlewild, Columbus, Ohio, and greytog for a landing at La Guardia Airport. The United Air Lines flight 826 out of Chicago was headed through the murk for Idlewild Field.

The fields are about 10 miles apart, Idlewild near the south side of Long Island in Queens, and La Guardia in Queens, as above.

Normally two planes approaching the two fields would be separated by being assigned to different altitudes, or by passing given points on the approaches at different times.

"But obviously something went wrong in the system," one communications spokesman said. "But we don't know what — at the moment."

Fires broke out in the wreckage of both fallen planes, and in Brooklyn, flames spread to the surrounding buildings. Debris rained down on the area from the airliners' shattered.

"A whole block is afire," police said of the blaze in Brooklyn, an area of thickly placed apartments, stores near Flatbush and Eighth Avenue. "It's chaotic."

The TWA Lockheed Constellation struck in the water off Miller Field, Staten Island. The Coast Guard said the six survivors were picked up by helicopter. Two of them were critically hurt.

In Brooklyn, Mrs. Agnes MacDonald told of hearing the crash from her apartment house. "It sounded like an explosion," she said. "Then I saw the smoke and ran toward the scene."

There was a plane, completely wrecked, in front of her door. The flames were so intense I couldn't get any closer than a block.

Ten buildings were reported afire.

For the DC-8, it was the first crash in North America of a pure - jet passenger airliner, although a Boeing 707 let with only a five-man crew aboard crashed on Long Island last year.

The United Air Lines flight 826 was out of Chicago, with 71 passengers and a crew of seven. The flight was routine for Idlewild in a thick-ceiling snow.

The TWA plane was destined for La Guardia Airport and being watched on radarscope as it neared the field when it suddenly disappeared from view.

The ceiling at the time was 600 feet.

Christmas Card Now in Service For 31 Years

MONCTON (CP)—A Christmas card issued 31 or 32 years was back in the mails Thursday.

Nell McLellan, CNR express superintendent here, mailed the card to George Bartlett, CNR express agent at Sydney.

They have been mailing it back and forth to each other at Christmas since 1930.

That prompted the annual ritual: "Could be the novel inscription appealed to human nature Scottish sense of thrift," chuckled Mr. McLellan as he turned it in the mail box. It says:

"I'm sendin' a cshirt tae wish ye
A Christmas fu' o' cheer,
I'll sign my name in pencil
So ye can use the cairt next year.

Man Held Intended to Turn Self Into Human Bomb to Kill Kennedy

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—A 72-year-old man with wavy white hair was held in $100,000 bond today on a charge that he intended to turn himself into a human bomb aimed at the life of President-elect John Kennedy.

Richard Paul Pavlick, retired postal worker from Belmont, N.H., was given a hearing before U.S. Commissioner George Fink Thursday night.

Pavlick was arrested Thursday in Palm Beach and officers said they seized several pistols, ammunition, blasting caps, wiring and other paraphernalia in his automobile and motel room.

Pavlick's arrest for a traffic violation ended a county-wide hunt for the little former postal clerk.

Pavlick was said to have been treated at a mental hospital.

The charge Pink read to Pavlick said he "indicated that he was going to make himself a human bomb and destroy himself and the president - elect, and that he disposed of some of his guns away all his real and personal property in Belmont, N.H., prior to coming to Palm Beach for this purpose."

An official said Pavlick denied the accusation and said he planned to kill himself.

"In a way, I am glad it turned out the way it has, but I don't know why I did what I did."

Before he was taken from the courtroom, Pavlick told Pink he talked freely in the waiting room. He complained of how rough his job at postal clerk had been, said the post office was drafty and he had to wear long underwear. Then he began to discuss the condition of his esophagus.

Pavlick scanned a travel magazine while sitting in the waiting room, fumbled paper as well a right hand minus two fingers.

Committee Open For Suggestions Or Criticisms

The city council planning committee is open for suggestions from Belleville property owners.

The planning committee would like to hear a few suggestions and even criticisms of the proposed new city zoning regulations expected to be put into effect some time next year.

Several weeks ago the committee published in the Ontario Intelligencer a map outlining the proposed new zoning areas and early in the new year it is planned to have a series of public meetings at various schools at which the proposals will be more thoroughly discussed.

In the meantime, Alderman Dr. John Barlow, as planning committee chairman, is inviting suggestions regarding the proposed land use plan and zoning regulations.

City Planning Engineer Charles E. Mott notes there are approximately 6,000 property owners in the city. Many of the owners, in all likelihood, have ideas as to how they think the city should be zoned.

So, written suggestions or criticisms are invited. Mail them to the city planning engineer at city hall.

Engineering Institute Head Addresses Belleville Branch

Canada offers a mighty challenge to professional engineers if they want to take advantage of it, Dr. George McCaughey Dick, president of the Engineering Institute of Canada, told the Belleville branch last night.

Some 40 branch members and their wives attended a banquet meeting presided over by President Hal Floyd, in the Club Room at Hotel Quinte. Dr. Dick, whose home is at Sherbrooke, Que., was accompanied by Mrs. Dick on a Montreal-Port Hope week-long tour. He was scheduled to speak at an engineers' banquet at Port Hope tonight before returning to Montreal.

Deputy Mayor Robert Temple, accompanied by Mrs. Temple, extended civic greetings to the E.I.C. branch.

Dr. Dick said the engineering picture in Canada today is "changing more quickly than it has ever changed in the past."

"If we were to attempt to plot a curve on a time basis, showing the rate of development of most engineering activities, we would be very much surprised at the way in which the curve is rapidly turning upward," he said. "This means that more and more the Canadian engineer has to prove himself abreast of what is going on in his own fast-changing field, and, at the same time, do what he ever he can to keep himself up to date on other developments in allied engineering fields."

Because of what is going on in engineering activities in other countries, which can be regarded as economically competitive with Canada, both for markets inside Canada as well as in the export sphere, "it becomes evident that the Canadian engineer must keep himself posted on all factors governing this situation if he is going to be able to accomplish what is required from Canadian engineering."

MUST PUSH FORWARD

Peculiar circumstances existing in many places sometimes push engineering efforts and results forward at astonishing speeds.

"Any attitude on the part of the Canadian engineer that the designs and constructions are satisfactory now and will remain in the same economic conditions, by virtue of their success, can easily lead to compete getting ahead and developing ingenious new approaches which could leave our Canadian engineers and manufacturers sadly behind," said Dr. Dick.

A feeling that engineering improvements need to come from outside Canada has existed in some fields. It has also been felt that the practice of engineers in foreign countries tended to make Canadian engineering designs less accomplished.

"This has . . . turned out to be largely overstated," said Dr. Dick. "And we now find that if Canadian engineers are willing to put the same effort and ingenuity into their (own) work as engineers in other countries have been doing, the Canadian designs and products are just as serviceable as the world requires and can go to just as great distances in the production of other countries."

MUST BE CURIOUS

The Canadian engineer must develop an attitude that will make him hungry for information about what is going on in other parts of the world,"as well as in other groups in his own country.

"This means reading quite a wide range of published materials, both technical and commercial, and raising his standard of comprehension to considerably greater heights than would otherwise be the case," said Dr. Dick.

Dealing with the subject of his address by Dr. Dick, amateur magician Ted Bradshaw, assisted by Mrs. Bradshaw, demonstrated in professional fashion. Canadian engineer has to possess a silhouette, is said rated second to none among amateur magicians. Mrs. Bradshaw's performances not only entertained, but also thoroughly delighted all present.

Earlier in the day, Dr. Dick met members of the executive of the E.I.C. branch at the regional headquarters of the Ontario Hydro on Dundas St. East.

Mental Health Assoc. Plans Gifts for All

TORONTO — "The Canadian Mental Health Association's plan to provide a Christmas gift for every mental hospital patient is one of the most heartwarming efforts and results of astonishing speeds.

"Any attitude on the part of the Canadian engineer that the designs and constructions are satisfactory now and will remain in the same economic conditions, by virtue of their success, can easily lead to compete getting ahead and developing ingenious new approaches which could leave our Canadian engineers and manufacturers sadly behind," said Dr. Dick.

A feeling that engineering improvements need to come from outside Canada has existed in some fields. It has also been felt that the practice of engineers in foreign countries

Following a brief illness, Mrs. Norma Elizabeth Ketcheson, 31, of Hallaway, died in Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, December 17th, 1959.

Surviving are her husband, David Clifford Ketcheson; one daughter, Donnalee Donald (Irene) Bateman of Tweed; four brothers, Laurison Bird of Belleville, James E. Bird of Tweed, Kenneth Bird of Peterborough, Kenneth Bird of Tweed; two sisters, Mrs. Cecil (Isobel) Ketcheson, of Hallaway and Mrs. Harold (Georgina) Ketcheson of Millbridge.

A brother, Clement Bird, was killed in action in the First World War.

Resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home, 49 Bridge St. E. Bird the funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. RICHARD MASTERS
Midoe Twp.

A resident of Madoc township for the past three months, Mrs. Alberta Regina Masters, wife of Richard Masters, died suddenly of a heart attack Friday at her home. She was 72.

Born at Wooler, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Finch, she lived at Madoc and Tweed before taking up residence in Madoc township.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Masters is survived by three daughters, Mrs. R. (Jean) Armstrong of Warsaw, Mrs. R. (Gladys) Pattison of Shillington, and Mrs. D. (Ella) Oliphant of Tweed; six sons, Clarence, Sam, Fred, Earl, Ivan and Carson, all of Madoc.

Mrs. Masters attended the Anglican Church.

Resting at the MacKenzie Funeral Home, Madoc, the funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. HAROLD McCARNEY
Gananoque
(Centrebridge)

Funeral services for Helen McCarney, 70, who died in Gananoque on December 10, were held from the Provincial Hotel to St. John's Church in Gananoque on December 12th. Mrs. McCarney had only been ill for one day.

Born in Madoc, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Feeney. Mrs. McCarney was a registered nurse, educated in Madoc and Tweed. She practised nursing in Brockville and Detroit.

She attended the Roman Catholic Church in Gananoque and was a member of the Catholic Women's League and the Altar Society. Mrs. McCarney was also president of the local Red Cross.

Surviving are her husband, Harold McCarney, and two sons: Harold McCarney Jr. and Neil McCarney, both of Gananoque. Also surviving are a brother, Reverend Jonas Feeney of Millville, and three sisters, Mrs. N. Madden of Lake Ireland, Mrs. M. Gehan of Montreal and Reverend Sister Mary Bridgid of the Franciscan Community, Rock Island.

The bearers were: J. Shine, V. Keyes, F. Littlejohn, G. Woodley, L. Griffin and T. Dier.

Hungary bearers were Dr. B. Miller, Dr. G. Bird, F. Webster, W. W. Wright, J. Smith and W. Wing.

Interment was at St. John's Cemetery, Gananoque, with the Reverend Jonas Feeney, Rev. C. Carney and Rev. B. Farrell officiating.

ROBERT McFAUL
Marmora

A funeral service for Robert McFaul was held Thursday from his home on Highway 7 at the Marmora-Belleville boundary, to St. John's Anglican Church in Havelock with Rev. L. G. Pierce of St. Paul's Anglican Church, Marmora, officiating.

The Eastern L.O.L. No. 228 held a service at his home on Wednesday evening.

Bearers were Victor Neal, Jerman Kirk, William Cartright, James Eaton, Clarence Van Slemburgh and Everett Riley.

Interment was in Maple Grove Cemetery, Havelock.

Moose Yield Was High In District

The hunting season is over for the big game hunter, and according to Lands and Forest officials, the hunting was good.

The moose harvest as recorded to date consists of 14 bulls, 17 cows and four calves.

Department officials are anxious to obtain complete figures. Hunters can help.

Approximately 160 deer-moose licences were issued by the Tweed district. Attached to the licence is a "return" form. This form is needed by the department to determine the full extent of the harvest.

Moose hunters are requested to fill in the form and return it as quickly as possible to the Tweed office of the department.

Duck Hunters wrote finis to the 1959 season yesterday, with waning reports of success.

Very large flocks of scaups (blue-bills), buffle-heads (butterballs), golden eyes (whistlers) and old squaw (cowens) are reported to be in the open waters of Lake Ontario.

Department officials stated that 1,000 trappers have taken 634 beaver, two fishers, 119 mink and nine otter during the month of November.

Corby's Recreation Room Scene Of Banquet

Local 26 of the Distillery, Rectifying, Wine and Allied International of America A.F.L. C.I.O. and C.C.L., played host to its members and friends at a banquet held in Corby's recreation room.

The dinner was catered to by the Canadian and Corbyville Women's Institute. President Arthur Austin presided and J. Belaiecki, technical supervisor, and W. Gregg, sales manager, on behalf of the local company. Mr. W. Argue, barrister, also spoke.

Members of the company, shift employees were allowed to partake in the festivities by having a hot meal on the job.

IN MEMORIAM

MASON. — In loving memory of a dear father, Charles Mason, who passed away December 19th, 1957.
Years of suffering, little of pleasure,
Loving and giving the whole of his measure,
A cheerful smile, a heart of gold,
And the dearest father the world could hold.
Always remembered by son Doug, Thelma and family.

MASON. — In loving memory of a dear father, Charles Mason, who passed away December 19th, 1957.
Dad, we miss you more each day,
We love a bear, heads dear;
Fond memories bring you near,
Remembrance keeps him dear.
Sadly missed by wife Lena and family.

REID. — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Alfred, who passed away December 19th, 1958.
Two years have passed since that sad day,
We laid you to rest and went away;
To us the saddest of the year,
When we remember you are here.
You left us when your work was over,
Would be our dearest wish today,
Dearest husband and father.
Dorothy and Marietta.

REID. — In loving memory of our dear father, Melville Eight Reid, who passed away one year ago today, December 19th, 1959.
The blessing of a dear father's love,
God, that it's nothing new;
But we miss you more each day,
As the days and years roll by.
We will think of you tomorrow,
And we will think of you today,
We will think of you forever,
For you were dear to us;
Forever remembered by Ken, Pearl and Reid.

High School Activities

TRENTON HIGH SCHOOL

(By Sandy Rogers)

"Deck The Halls With Boughs of Holly", goes the old saying and that is exactly what the decorating committee for tonight's Christmas dance have been doing. The semi-formal begins at 9 p.m. sharp and a buffet lunch will be served at mid-way through the festivities.

The regular Wednesday noon sock hops have started again, with dancing starting at noon and ending at 12.40 p.m. Students join in the latest hits while polishing the floor with their socks. Also participating themselves with the caretakers demonstration is 10 cents and the turnout is usually good.

REV. WM. J. HEWELL

Three different varieties of Trenton High School Christmas cards are being offered for sale in the bookroom at noon hours. Many of the students have chosen this unique way of greeting their friends this year.

Plans are being made in many of the classes to hold a Christmas party and, although the ideas are different, the general feeling is the same. The Christmas spirit is in the air.

Comments have been heard from our three beauty queens who rode on the Chamber of Commerce float in the Santa Claus parade last Saturday. The comments go something like this: "Cold? Of course. I was cold. Who wouldn't be cold sporting a strapless evening gown in 20-degree weather. I didn't they hold the parade in August."

PUC Receives Summons From Resident Seeking $120 for Damage to Home

TRENTON. — At last night's meeting of the Public Utilities Commission, secretary James Page said the administrative staff had received a summons from J. Bowman, solicitor.

Some time ago, a moving van, travelling in front of Bowman's house, dragged down hydro wires attached to the house and several boards from the side of the house. The municipal company blamed the PUC, claiming that the wires were too low. Mr. Bowman wants $120 for the damage caused to his home.

The commissioners feel that the load on the van must have been too high. The summons has been turned over to Ontario Hydro's insurance adjustors.

The commissioners noted that a police $3,000 in a special bank account each month to cover depreciation payments at the end of each year. The last month of the year will require a slight adjustment, with less than the monthly payment being required. This system of planned savings to meet the debenture debt now has been in effect for several months.

The department of justice had written to the commission saying that in accordance with the commission's wishes, mail boxes will be removed from hydro poles now that the department understands the commission is concerned with the safety factor rather than with getting a rental fee for the mail boxes. Numerous letters have been exchanged between the PUC and the department. The commissioners expressed gratification at the solution to the problem. The mail boxes were said to have been a distinct hazard to hydro workmen who climb the poles in their work.

The commissioners also resolved to supply the high school with three new appliances when the home economics department gets a coat of paint. Ontario Hydro will supply a new electric stove on the strength of one-third of the school's population being rural residents, and thus direct customers of the provincial body.

Mayor MacDonald said he felt Ontario Hydro should give more than one-third of the cost of the appliances as town residents were also "customers."

SPREADS COST

Commissioner C. A. Baker explained that the commission had thought that by supplying new appliances at wholesale price to the commission, it would be spreading the cost to taxpayers and tenants alike. If the Board of Education buys the appliances, the cost is divided among taxpayers only. The local commission will sell the used appliances. This year, it expects to make $300 on the sale of the present four-year-old appliances which will be replaced. When new appliances are made two years from now, the commission expects to get as much out of the appliances as it will put into the new appliances for the school at a wholesale price.

Every two years Ontario Hydro will replace one school appliance.

Mayor MacDonald contended that there need not be such a rapid turnover of appliances and that in some cities people are cooking their meals on 14-year-old stoves and washing their clothes in machines which are considerably more than two years old. However, he voted for the provincial body's proposal.

The Trenton hydro office will be open on December 27, despite the fact that local stores and the staff at the municipal office will have a holiday. Two girls will be asked to substitute another day for this holiday, and be at work Tuesday for the convenience of the customers. The last discount day on hydro bills is Dec. 28.

The commissioners are considering what to do about their trucks being tagged for parking outside the utilities building. A sign, reading "Parking Limited" outside the building, initially for the convenience of the staff, is the reason the authorities are tagging the trucks, claiming they are violating the rules.

NEW SIGN

The commission will examine the merits of placing another sign, reading "Unloading Area, Keep Clear" at the back door.

Mayor MacDonald suggested that the next time a truck is tagged, the commission secretary contact the traffic committee and explain the situation.

A. E. Atkinson, commission member for 10 years and last year's chairman who was defeated by Charles Dinney in Dec. 5 election, thanked the commissioners for their assistance and wished Mr. Hilton, who was present at the meeting every success.

Commissioner C. A. Baker said that Mr. Atkinson had done a wonderful job as commissioner. He said that there was a lot to learn about the working of the PUC. He commended secretary - manager James Page for the efficiency of his department.

Mayor MacDonald also commended Mr. Atkinson on his long service.

LURID PICTURE

A lurid picture of the town water supply if the dam should be failing on its side; the water main in Lorne Ave. splitting causing a flood in the area south of the mountain; the water main failing as a result of removing the pressure of overhanging rock; children being buried alive or injured was painted at the meeting.

A few weeks ago, James, F. Day, brought a strip of land at the base of the mountain from the town. Mr. Day had owned land at the base for years and let it revert to the town by tax default.

Having repurchased the land, Mr. Day has proceeded to hire a contractor to excavate at the base of the mountain. Now members of the town engineering department, Mayor Jack MacDonald and members of the PUC are worried about the results erosion might have directly on the water tank.

If Mr. Day makes good his verbal agreement to slope the bank back from a 35-foot high, 90-degree angle, to a 45-degree angle, he is liable to do one of three things, according to the commissioners. He may strike the water pipes coming down from the tank, or he might succeed in eroding the earth to such an extent that the tank itself would be undermined and fall.

Mr. Day has also published, verbally to put a concrete wall at the slope. The commissioners wonder if this will is to be 25 feet high and if it would be a danger to school children playing in the area. If the slope is left in its present state, children from Dufferin school might fall over the edge and be buried in sand and gravel. If the contractor who is doing the digging strikes the water main on Lorne Ave., many basements in the area would be flooded.

The town has legal way to stop a man from digging on his own property, but commissioners are reduced to having their solicitor write Mr. Day, pointing out the hazards of digging into the mountain at this point.

Model Flying Enthusiasts Have Radio-Controlled Crafts

Although now might not seem to be appealing a time of the year for a person to go out flying model airplanes there are a few people who are certainly thinking about this hobby-sport. For it is now that the model flying enthusiast is busy preparing for his next season's activities and hoping to come up with something a bit better than the season past.

Undoubtedly the ultimate in this activity is to have a radio-controlled aircraft for it is with this arrangement that the model flying devotee can enjoy a stimulating ride in the real thing but even more so because he can stand apart watching his aircraft go through the manoeuvres he demands of it.

This hobby has grown to the degree that there are now international tournaments held in both North America and Europe. On the local scene there are a number of enthusiasts of this activity but not many who actually have their own plane and equipment. One of the latter, however, is Doug Smith, who is well known in local arts, crafts and model hobbyists as the proprietor of the Hobby Shop.

Mr. Smith has the ultimate in radio-control equipment with his eight - channel Sanwa transmitter and receiver units. The receiver unit is mounted in a low-voltage, rechargeable model powered with a 3-4 horsepower model aircraft engine. The model has a wingspan of close to six feet and is capable of speeds up to 60 miles an hour in the air.

The receiver unit in the model transforms the signals it receives from the operator's transmitter into any one or any combination of eight musical tones, which activate up to eight reeds through sympathetic vibration of these reeds. In turn, when set in vibration activate the servos which will operate one of the aircraft's controls.

The transmitter has a control box with a "joy-stick" whose movements in any direction the same reaction in the radio-control model as would a man in the aircraft. If the "stick" is pushed forward the aircraft will dive, if drawn towards the operator the model will start to climb and so on.

RANGE IS LIMITED

The model can be controlled over quite a range. Normally this range is limited to what is known as "line of sight" so that the operator can see his plane is reacting to the controls through the system is capable of operating up to a much further limit.

Batteries for both the transmitter and the receiver units are also rechargeable so-that can literally fly his model aircraft as long as a smooth piece of ground for takeoffs and landings. The transmitter is operated by the user, a season, whilst the receiver batteries are good for 20 flights per set. New developments in the operation for guided missiles, however, should the hobbyist with an extremely lightweight, rechargeable nickel-cadium battery which will last indefinitely with proper care.

It is usually sound policy to use the best and most reliable equipment available for this hobby for the failure of even one small part could mean finis to a lot of hard work and a large investment. Over 150 hours' time is used in building and preparing such a model for flight and the average investment comes to about $500. When such factors are taken into consideration it can be readily recognized that he who builds and flies radio-controlled planes must truly be the philosophic of the hobby world.

The plans and kit equipment may be seen at the Hobby Shop where it quite literally hangs in its wing'or hangar.

The Aim Of Education

While few, if any, have suggested that teaching students to think is not the primary purpose of the school, in recent years emphasis has been gradually transferred, in the philosophy of many educationists, to the fitting of the student for his coming role in the work-aday world.

Vocational education was perhaps the first phase of this trend, but in more recent years this attempt to teach the child skills which will enable him to earn his own living has, like the earlier ideal of teaching a child to think, come to be regarded as merely a part of the over-all objective.

To the Greek ideal of a sound mind in a healthy body has been added concern for the child's spiritual welfare.

The end result sought, according to many educationists, is the production of a well-rounded individual, of a young man or young woman well adjusted to the society in which he or she will live.

If some of us have been uneasy about this aim, the vast majority of us have been unable to pinpoint the flaw in such thinking.

Now along comes Northrop Frye who, in "By Liberal Things," has penned one striking sentence which many may find acts like a searchlight, suddenly revealing all the smallest details of a structure long dimly seen but, to the moment of its sudden illumination, only imperfectly revealed.

"Education," says Mr. Frye, "can only lead to maladjustment in the ordinary world."

Is this a criticism of education? Is Mr. Frye a "back-to-the-stone" crank, a reformer that ignorance is bliss, an anti-intellectual? By no means, for with a pause only for a colon he concludes his sentence with the following declaration: "that is its end and its purpose."

Here is a view diametrically opposed to the school of thought which holds that it is the duty of the educationist to produce individuals well-adjusted to the society in which they live. This, according to Mr. Frye, is impossible today, a contradiction of terms.

"If one's view of society has been formed by the great philosophers, and as few of us are intimately acquainted with the writings of Homer and Shakespeare. We cannot expect our elementary and secondary schools to turn out graduates so equipped. But, if Mr. Frye is correct, and we think he is, we have a right to demand that when boys and girls complete their high school education they will be individuals with at least a vague distrust of, and distaste for, many of the mores and customs of our existing society. No society has ever been well served by well-adjusted citizens. It has been always, and will always be, the dissatisfied who make the greatest contribution to a community's well-being.

Let us be fair about this. Many educationists, when they talk about the desirability of graduates being well adjusted, are seeking something far different from the placid acceptance of things as they are. They are thinking of students with a thirst for knowledge, and the courage to satisfy that thirst; of students bent on a quest for wisdom, with the stamina to continue that search through the long years ahead. But among the smaller minds there exists today, as there always has in the past, the belief that the well-adjusted personality is well adjusted to things as they are, rather than to the task of changing and improving society.

Easier When Young

While it is true that there are men and women, many of them leaders in business and industry, who have had but little formal education, their number is diminishing. And they will be the first to acknowledge that the self-educating process they have been obliged to undergo has involved much personal sacrifice. It is easier to get the necessary knowledge while one is still young. (Port Elgin Times.)

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

ON THE OTHER SIDE

One of the great books of all time is Pilgrim's Progress. It was written by the great Puritan, John Bunyan. It has led the moral and spiritual life of generations. It is honored today as one of the great English classics.

There is a brief passage which is known to everyone who has this wonderful book. Here it is:

"When the Day that he must go hence was come, many accompanied Mr. Valiant-For-Truth to the Riverside, into which as he went, he said, Death where is thy sting? And as he went down deeper, he said, Grave where is thy victory? So he passed over and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side."

Naive you say? Yes, with that simplicity which God seems so often to love in his servants. The humblest and the greatest have been moved by the words of Bunyan for centuries and all have been exclaiming an exultation over the passage. Mr. Valiant-For-Truth and the Christian Pilgrim himself, in many other of the fictures, have become household words.

There is a horizon which lies across the pathway of every one of us. Some day we all come to the horizon's end. And when we do, we want to have hearts that will take us over and across.

We want to hear the trumpets and those things which await us on "the other side."

Peaceful Uses of A-Energy

Part Two

BY HON. ROBERT W. MACAULAY
Ontario Minister of Energy Resources

ARTICLE II

In agriculture, materials which have been made radioactive have become invaluable. Their use as a tracer is almost as good as lighting up the inside of a plant or animal with a superior kind of torch. Here, even while the plant is growing or the animal is living, feeding and breeding.

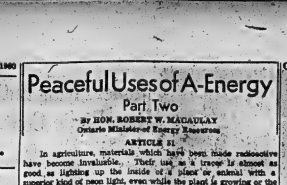
You can take materials which plants use as food, such as carbon, potash and nitrogen, and by photography, or listening with a Geiger counter, you can watch the progress of these materials through the plants, and through the animals which feed on them. Radioactive phosphorus is another material used for this purpose, but radioactive sources such as cobalt-60 or calcium 137 can be produced which are more powerful than radium and much cheaper. Cancer, for example, is tissue which for some reason will not stop growing, and which eventually kills off the normal operation of the body.

Radiation treatment will destroy this cancerous tissue and can be used when the patient is too old or too weak for anything else. By March 31st, 1960, 185 Canadian cobalt-60 therapy machines had been installed in 30 countries, including hundreds of thousands of patients who have been treated.

Many forms of bacteria can be killed by radiation, and this property of radiation effectiveness of bandages and antibiotic drugs for many years can be more effective than the present commercial sterilization, which fails to kill some bacteria and which is expensive to use and cannot be used on drugs and other substances such as plasma which would be spoiled by heat.

FEWER USES

Radiation can be used in various ways for the treatment of foods. Low level radiation can kill the bacteria that cause food poisoning without actually affecting the taste. Once the U.S. Army has given its approval—a rule on the wholesomeness of this process, it may well become commonplace to sterilize with the processes of canning and beef-processing. Even if enough to affect the quality of the food, enough is left to make it better than canning for returning sailors, Navy, Army and Air Force attempt to preserve food permanently by high level radiation suffers from the drawbacks that the taste is unattractive and the food can become mildly radioactive.



Radiation may well be useful for fumigating warehouses and for sterilizing many products from them, ships, barns, etc. However, because of the need for frequent repetition of treatment, chemicals so far have proved more economical. This is because they remain longer before fumigation is required.

USES UNLIMITED

Nuclear energy has added to the sterilization methods of many facilities. Not only does it sterilize the male of many species of harmful insects or energy, but methods for unleashing insects who do not breed. This is a part of nuclear fission is becoming in the hands of a very fruitful one with infinite uses.

Take the case of Canada's control of quality during mass production, through the measurement of the thickness of the metal. The destruction of malignant cancerous tissue. This process seems to be little that this fundamental form of energy may be used. Yet, man has only started along this particular road. He has been discovering that radioactive for less than 70 years. It has been described as radium for less than 20 years. The answers to these questions are lying up to man appear to be unlimited.

To Be Continued.

People of Belleville are pleased to learn that the local branch of the Canadian National Railways will mean newcomers to the city to make their homes here.

Fourteen members of Bridge Street C.G.I.T. and their leaders, Miss Grace Harris and Miss Marjorie Lashbrook, at the conclusion of the Sunday evening service, visited several of the homes singing carols. This project proved very interesting and was greatly appreciated by those who heard them.

Dr. F. R. Ross of Geddes Street, has returned to the city after spending the past two weeks vacationing in Northern Ontario.

Mrs. M. Kerr and Mrs. Clay-shon Sullivan have returned from attending Ontario Beekeepers Convention at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Maichan of Montreal, formerly of Belleville are spending a few days here with friends.

Mrs. Robert Sayers and Mrs. S. J. Way of Tweed are visiting friends here.

Some Smiles Along the Way

The Printed Word

One tourist who recently spent two months in the New England States reports that he has stored up some memories in the form of wayside signs.

There was unconscious humor in the placing of one advertising sign over a Vermont highway sign. Read together, the signs conveyed the message: "Eat at Ed's, Best Food in the State, Lived Limit 15,000 pounds." There was conscious, and grim, humor in the sign of a firm of tombstone manufacturers near Bangor, Maine. At their doorway appeared a notice which read recently inscribed: "Drive Carefully. We Can Wait."

In Lunenburg, New Hampshire the town's Civil War memorial must annoy any unreconstructed Southerners who stop to read its inscription, which is: "In Memory of Our Comrades Who Died in the Southern Rebellion."

The tourist found it refreshing after passing miles of houses proclaiming "Antiques" to come on one frankly labelled "Secondhand Shop."

Negative Advertising

Montgomery Advertiser

You've probably noticed what has been called the negative trend in advertising: "Do you think the Volkswagen is homely?" one begins. Then comes "Our competitor's whiskey is marvelous . . . so why buy Grant's?"

. . . If you have noticed such appeals, then they succeeded in their purpose, which is to entice you to look at the goods the copywriter can possibly pull it and sent his job.

So fast is the new kind of "dropper" catching on, any day now someone will see: "Ivory Snow's will kill you, but you haven't lived till you've tried them."

Should Curb These Rebels

Toronto Telegram

Revolution invites counter-revolution. Already the shooting entry ordinary in the news that exiled Cuban patriots, with the aid of mercenaries and adventurers, are carrying out military operations against the Castro regime in Cuba.

But it is most disquieting that they should be allowed to carry on from bases in the southern U. S. with the knowledge, if not the consent, of the U.S. government. That government has verified this situation through on-the-spot inquiry by a staff writer, Lorne Marchand, who has been sent to the Florida front of the Cuban counter-revolution, a row-flinger, reporting from Cuba.

The counter-revolutionaries are planning to drop bombs from a plane, using light aircraft based in Florida. Marchand found the bombs of plastic hose and photobulbs. The manufacture, concealment and transportation of these weapons must violate numerous U.S. criminal and aviation laws.

There is no suggestion that the U.S. government participates in these activities—it merely winks at them. But it is wrong for the U.S. to allow itself to be used as a base for counter-revolution in Cuba. Castro will not likely be over-thrown by fleabites from Florida. He is more likely to be strengthened and consolidated by them.

The great nation of the West cannot allow itself to be blinded by Castro provocations. It should put a stop to these foolish and fruitless adventures at once.

The west coast province was discovered by Captain Christopher Columbus, generally conceded to be the discoverer of the new world. Originally called New Caledonia, it annexed Vancouver Island in 1849 before becoming federation in 1867 and was given its present name by Queen Victoria.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

MONONUCLEOSIS CALLED "KISSING DISEASE"

Dear Dr. Molner: So far you haven't commented on mono — the "kissing disease." I can't spell the word, but I'm sure you know what I mean.

How serious is it? What about diet? Is there anything besides rest that will hasten recovery?—Z. B.

Yes, I know what you mean. I have, as a matter of fact, written about it before, but new newspapers keep starting this column, so it is understandable that some have been missing it only after my last article on "mono." So far as that goes, I have no doubt that "mono" has become of interest to many other readers who didn't happen to be interested the last time I discussed it. That's human nature so if you don't happen to have the problem at the moment, you don't always read about it.

"Mono" is infectious mononucleosis (mono-nu-cle-O-sis) which has often been called the "kissing disease" because we suspect, although we do not know that it probably is transmitted by kissing and sneezing.

We know from experience that it is primarily a disease of young adults. Young adults or old-teenagers. Where do you draw the line? Anyway, it is rare after the habit of spreading in schools, colleges or among other young people living in groups.

It is also called "glandular fever" because among other symptoms, there often is swelling of the neck glands, the neck glands, in the neck, armpits and groin.

Other common symptoms include sore throat, some fever, headache, and marked fatigue or listlessness.

It isn't a disease calling for any great dread from the standpoint of being left with any defect or leaving permanent damage afterward, but it can make the victim miserable for quite a time, and also can, unless detected, be confusing to a doctor who wonder why John or Mary usually a good student, suddenly becomes a "lazy" lackadaisical. Further, unless a case is recognized for what it is at the time, liver complication is possible.

For the long haul, however, the disease usually runs its course in a matter of a few weeks, although the tiredness and lassitude may last for a month or two.

Diet isn't part of the treatment except, of course, to see that the patient has normally adequate nourishment. Except for rest, there is no specific treatment. It is what we call a "self-limiting" disease. That means that you nurse the patient along with the normal routine and the disease will run its course and complete recovery will follow.

Dear. Dr. Molner: I am confused about the letter who has macrocytic anemia — red cells too large and too few—all of them.—C. F.''

There are several types of this kind of anemia, the most common one being pernicious anemia. The treatment is the injections of Vitamin B12, although below that discovery of that treatment, it was a very dangerous disease.

DRAFTS AND DAMPERS

Dampers are checks. They are regulators. Attached to a heating system, they check the drafts and conserve the fuel. And they are very essential as a safety precaution.

This is just as true concerning the fires in the fireplaces in your actions and, so, make up character. Dampers and Damperings have Drafts and Dampers — and there's a Damper for Everything.

Remember to use your Dampers.

Thought is a Damper. So are judgment, and experience and duty and experience. And there are many others.

Study your Drafts. Envisalisms, energy, will power, money — there's a Damper for every one. If you use them intelligently, they check the drafts. If you forget to use them at all, it's an explosion — fire and ruin, perhaps.

If enthusiasm sweeps you off your feet, then do the judgment Damper. If power threatens to run you, thoughtfulness checks, turn on the conscience Damper. Remember always that you have Dampers.

But don't let anyone else use them.

Don't let anybody else turn any Damper on you. Self-assistance, your ideas, you plans or your actions. Use your Dampers. Study them with great care. It's knowing exactly when and how to use your Dampers that makes the difference between success and failure for you.

"Who buys?" I asked. "Everybody," he said. "We have this kind of country to keep so many of us employed. What a great level bonus in business!"

"Why," said the old gentleman, "look how much the smart ones have to live on! In New York! The more people you have to live off, the richer you can get. All you have to do is look at the bustling millions in New York to realize that they are all the resplendent what?"

TOY REPAIRMEN — Kiwanis members Don Allan and Eric Cooper pose with two of close to 3,000 toys repaired this year through the Kiwanis Christmas toy repair project. Mr. Cooper started the project years ago but it mushroomed out of hand and was taken over by the service club.

Kiwanis Yule Toy Project Getting Bigger and Better; Nearly 3,000 Toys Repaired

Santa's annual Kiwanis sponsored Christmas toy repair project for the benefit of city and district underprivileged kiddies is all but concluded for another year.

All that remains is for the jolly old fellow to make his annual rounds distributing the toys for the kiddies who might not otherwise find much beneath the Christmas tree.

Now in its fourth year of operation as a club project, following many years as a private endeavor on the part of its founder, Eric Cooper, the Kiwanis toy repair project now produces up to 3,000 toys each year.

"It seems to keep growing every year," notes Mr. Cooper.

The toy repair work for this year will be completed this evening and a whole roomful of toys to make hundreds of kiddies' hearts glad on Christmas morn is the result of the season's efforts.

Next week the toys will be taken to the No. 2 Fire Hall where firemen, as Santa's helpers, are checking lists in readiness for Christmas rounds.

MASS PRODUCTION BASIS

The Christmas toy project which originated years ago in the basement of Mr. Cooper's Bridge Street home, has blossomed out so that it now almost fills the Kiwanis Centre.

The entire basement of the Centre has been taken over as a workshop and the work proceeds on a somewhat mass production basis.

Donated used toys are first given the once over to determine whether they are worth repairing. Then the experts go to work.

Bicycle and tricycle wheels are repaired, new parts are fashioned for wooden toys, and new layers provided for doll buggies. Repairs completed, the toys are put through the paint shop and come out like new. The toy painting, striping and trim painting is all done by experts. Angar Leland Painting does the painting, while trim work is done by Sydney Smith Signs.

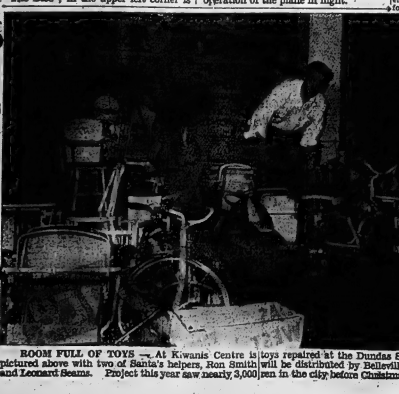
Dolls are cleaned and dressed and turn up under the Christmas tree hard to distinguish from the brand new variety.

Mr. Cooper is loud in his praise for the many volunteer workers who each year put in countless hours on the toy repair project. He says the project is made possible only through the efforts of members of public spirited residents and businessmen who give willingly of time, materials and money.

The project is supervised by Mr. Cooper and four team captains, all members of the local Kiwanis Club. Team captains Ralph Clage, Ken Birkitt, Don Allan and Don Pinkle each pick a team of volunteers, who work one night each week. In this way the repair shop is kept busy four nights a week from the middle of October to December 18th.

Most of the used toys are turned over to the Belleville Fire Department who in turn as a special Christmas project of their own add numbers of new toys, mitts, rubbers, and candy and arrange for distribution.

The firemen's list of needy children is made up from names submitted by interested persons, the city welfare department, church groups and other societies.



A master list is maintained by firemen to guard against duplication.

In addition to distribution among the needy children of Belleville and immediate district, the Kiwanis club also supplies a large number of toys for the less fortunate kiddies in the Combermere area, 53 miles north of Belleville. Distribution of these toys is done through a mission house in the district.

The actual repairing of toys is now completed for another year, but toys donated after this date are still welcome. Toys taken in from this date are sorted and stored to provide a backlog for Santa's helpers to get an early start next year.

ALL SHOOK UP

At a New Year's presentation at the White House in 1907, President Theodore Roosevelt shook hands with 8,513 people.

ROOM FULL OF TOYS — At Kiwanis Centre is toys repaired at the Dundas Street club centre. Toys pictured above with two of Santa's helpers, Ron Smith and Leonard Seams. Project this year saw nearly 3,000 toys will be distributed by Belleville firemen to needy children in the city before Christmas.

S.S. Teachers Entertain Jr. Classes

RAWDON — On Sunday morning Mrs. Raymond Purcell, Mount Pleasant, Rawdon entertained 26 children at her home.

The primary Sunday School teachers are; the Misses Carol Shafer and Mary Ellen Devid, while Mrs. Frank Spencer is Mrs. McConnell's assistant with the kindergarten class.

Other adults in attendance were Mrs. Burton Sharpe, Mrs. Ira Devid, Mrs. Douglas Morton and Mrs. Eric Sommers.

The regular Sunday School lesson was taught at ten o'clock, and following that, "Happy Birthday," was sung for Mary Summers. Her mother provided an individual birthday cake topped with a candle for each child to carry home as a special little token.

The Christmas Bible story was read and all enjoyed a singsong of carols. Flash pictures were taken to record the gathering.

The picnic were served hot dogs, cookies, candies and all enjoyed a social half hour.

Bata Shoe Local Holds Yuletide Party

FRANKFORD — Sonia Claus was the distinguished guest at the Bata and Shoe Workers' Union, Local 715, children's Christmas party on the afternoon of December 10th in Frankford Community hall.

There were approximately 450 of the members' children present.

Among those who helped entertain the gathering before Santa arrived were: Frankford Full Gospel choir, which rendered the following; "Glory in a Manger," "Sing It Out" and "Glory to God in the Highest," as well as favorite Christmas carols.

Sheryl Kormos and Evelyn Harry favored with piano and violin numbers.

These members of the Tracy family; Bonnie, Donald and Jimmy gave a selection of Christmas music. The little band comprised of Leon Tracey, Hugh Traynor and Tom Middleton supplied the music prior to Santa's entry.

The huge Christmas tree was sally decorated and Santa distributed lovely bags of candy to children girls and boys.

Women's Activities

UNITED LUTHERAN C.W.

The regular monthly meeting of the U.L.C.W. was held at the parsonage on December 13th.

Devotions in the form of a candlelight service, were presented by Mrs. Shirley Lindeman, Mrs. Sylvia Grills and Mrs. Gladys Wilman. Five candles were lighted during the service by Mrs. Grills and Mrs. Wilman.

The centre candle represented the light of the world. From this main candle the lights of 'Joy', 'Peace', 'Faith' and 'Love' were lighted. If everyone would join in the light of the world and not just have joy, peace, faith and love in their hearts at Christmastime but all the year through, the world would not be in the turmoil it is in today.

After each candle was lit, Mrs. Lindeman read portions of the story of the birth of the Savior from the Bible and Christmas hymns were sung.

A business meeting followed. Mrs. Calbury, chairman of the Christian Service Committee, reported that well over 30 stuffed animals had been made by the U.L.C.W., to be given to the Children's Aid Society for Christmas. Mrs. Wilman also reported three complete layettes and about 40 pounds of baby clothing had been sent to Kitchener to be delivered to the mission fields.

The meeting was adjourned and a couple of games were played under the direction of Mrs. Linderman. Mrs. Paajanen and Mrs. Heithbomer were the winners.

A lovely luncheon was served by Mrs. McComb, Mrs. Grills and Mrs. Calbury and one of the most successful meetings of the U.L.C.W. to date, came to a close.

NINE TO ONE

Nine of the first 10 prime ministers of Britain were Whigs, the only Tory holding office being the Earl of Bute—1762-63.

College Hill W.A. Elects Officers

College Hill United Church W.A. met for its afternoon meeting on December 14th at the manse.

The president welcomed all present for the Christmas meeting.

Mrs. J. Ritz read the Scripture lesson taken from Luke 2: 1-16. The subject of the devotional was, "Where Will You be at Christmas." Those taking part were: Mrs. C. Bailey, Mrs. F. Watson, Mrs. K. Belcour and Mrs. A. Dickens.

A replica of the holy family was placed on a table. The figures of Mary and Joseph were placed near the straw-filled crib cradling the Christ-child. Kneeling on the hay in homage were the shepherds. At the opposite end of the table, the figures of the wise men were placed each carrying a precious gift to the new born King. The innkeeper was the first of three significant groups to enter the Christian story, the second group were the shepherds — those who worked and waited — and watched and who were prepared to receive the joyous tidings and to follow the star to Bethlehem. The Wise Men were the third important group — these most learned men of their country. They had the distinction of being the first Gentiles to worship Christ.

"As homemakers we want our home to radiate Christmas — we decorate with holly and light our Christmas candles and bake our Christmas cakes, but are we devoting too much time to material and physical things? Do we take time to get our hearts and souls into the quiet receptive mood that the Christ-child to enter? If we do, then Christmas really will be a time of well be a blessed season."

Mrs. C. West sang a Christmas number, "O Little Town of Bethlehem." The hymn "Joy to the World," was led by Mrs. R. Bailey closed the devotional period.

Mrs. D. Hunter gave a reading "A Christmas Story of the Bells."

The roll call showed 23 present and several calls to absent shut-ins were reported by the members.

The treasurer gave a report of the finances, including a statement of the proceeds from the bazaar held last month.

Mrs. R. Thompson and Mrs. R. Neal were nominated to audit the treasurer's books. Some Christmas notes were read and the retiring president, Mrs. D. Hunter, extended appreciation to all who had helped her during her two years in office.

A gift was presented to Mrs. Hoult for the minister and family at Christmas.

The officers for 1961 were installed by Mrs. Hoult as follows; president — Mrs. C. Bailey; vice-president — Mrs. A. Dickens; treasurer — Mrs. A. Greenwood; recording-secretary — Mrs. R. Thompson; corresponding-secretary — Mrs. F. Walker; press secretary — Mrs. R. Neal; social convener — Mrs. E. Flunder; telephone committee — Mrs. D. Hunter, Mrs. A. May, Mrs. G. Jenkinson and Mrs. F. Watson.

After the close of the meeting a lovely lunch was served by Mrs. F. Walker, Mrs. K. Brown, Mrs. C. West and Mrs. F. Watson and a vote of appreciation was tendered the hostess, Mrs. Hoult by Mrs. D. Hunter.

Club Activities

SUNBEAM M.B.

RAWDON — Mount Pleasant-Rawdon-Sunbeam Mission Band, convened at the church hall, for the Christmas meeting with four adults and 27 children in attendance.

Joyce Cooney provided and various carols were sung. The meeting opened with the Lord's Prayer in unison and the Mission Band Purpose.

Devotional notes were given by Betty McAdam, Joyce Cooney and Randy Scott. A piano solo was contributed by Barbara Williams and a reading by Jean Jeffs. Janet Fletcher presented a film, "When the Littlest Camel Knelt."

Mrs. Herbert Smith was in charge of the devotional, based on "Cain and Abel." She read the Bible lesson, gave the prayer and outlined the missionary theme.

Mrs. Harry McAdam would like to have the children's mite boxes handed in as soon as possible so that the amount can be credited to this year's work and with this amount the W.M.S. will meet its allotment.

Mrs. Stanley Williams and Miss Gail Scott assisted the leader in serving the children Christmas treats of peanuts and candy.

Parkdale W.I. Views Making Yuletide Decor

Parkdale Women's Institute held its Christmas meeting in the Community Centre on Wednesday evening.

The roll call was answered by giving a gift of food to be packed in a hamper for a needy family in the Maple area. A prize was given for the best Christmas wrapping on these gifts. Mrs. Brown was the winner; the judges being Mrs. Tufts and Mrs. Whitfield from the Quinte Institute.

Guests were present from the Quinte Institute; Mountain View, Plainfield and Toronto.

The leaders agreed to have the Institute put a small turkey in the Christmas hamper.

The motto, "May the glow of Christmas cheer be with you all through the year" was given by Mrs. Priest.

Mrs. Bannon led in singing the carols, with Mrs. Keeble at the piano.

Mrs. Barber from Barber's florist shop, gave a demonstration on making Christmas decorations. Many new items were introduced and the ladies resolved to go home and make their own Christmas displays.

Mrs. Harrison from Plainfield played several lively numbers on her electric chord organ. This added much to the enjoyment of the meeting.

Both ladies were thanked and presented with gifts.

A bountiful lunch was served by the members of the executive.

The Brown Owl from the 18th Pack announced by way of letter that she will be recruiting new Brownies (those who will be eight years old by March 31, 1961). Phone WO 2-1971.

Serving Ontario's Children
Children need their Parents' Affection and Protection
If, however, children become neglected, the court as the instrument of the community places them in the care of the Children's Aid Society. Some of the children require special attention which may be provided in carefully selected foster homes or an appropriate children's institution. Some of them may be returned to their own homes when conditions have been remedied.
Since experience shows that the best place to bring up children is in their own homes with their own parents great emphasis is placed on giving counselling and practical assistance to families in homes where there are problems contributing to neglect and discord.
ONTARIO
Children's Aid Societies, under the provisions of The Child Welfare Act, are given responsibility for the protection of children from neglect, the care and control of neglected children, assistance to unmarried mothers, and the placement and supervision of children on adoption.
At the present time, 20,437 children are receiving the Societies' protection services and 14,390 children are in the physical care of the Societies.
You are reminded to consult the advertisements which appear from time to time in the week ads of this newspaper, describing specific children available for adoption.
This is the second of three advertisements outlining the services provided by the Children's Aid Societies of Ontario.

Christmas Concert

S. JOHN'S U.C.

CAMPBELLFORD — The pupils of the Senior Sunday School of St. John's United Church presented the annual Christmas pageant, "The Startlighted Path" before a well-filled auditorium on Sunday evening.

A large junior choir led in the familiar carols.

The Star, played by Lila Adams, did everyone come to Bethlehem. The Christmas Story was read by the accompanist, Leona Robertson, to a Bethlehem couple, Naomi and Rachel, who were Donna Sayers and Peggy Peake. The girls of Mary and Joseph were taken by Suzanne Lillis and Dawn Oliver. The Shepherds, Trevor Atkinson, Wayne Symcoda, Carmen Sharp, Lorne McKeown and Gerry Robertson, visited the manger. The Kings, Glen Pickering and Donald Claire Robins presented their gifts. Eight Angels crossed in white, added their praises: Helen Craighead, Barbara Mayhew, Sharon Buckner, Norma Harrison, Linda Grills, Jane Hopkins, Beverley Williams and Peggy Hollings. The Star, bearing the names of Faith, Hope and Love, to the manger, Praise, Prayer, Service and Sacrifice, were chosen on that first Christmas Day. These characters were taken by Norma Meiwes, Karen Anne Dooher, Claire McCourt and Linda Hall. An intermediate girl, Anne Mc-Master, received the pledges for our present day Christmas Gifts of Praise, Worship, Service and Sacrifice.

Dr. D. M. Smith led in the Invocation and pronounced the Benediction.

Holy Rosary CWL Sponsors Turkey Dinner

Holy Rosary Parish Council of the Catholic Women's League held its December meeting at the Knights of Columbus hall in the form of a turkey dinner with 68 members present.

Readers' Friday Column

As conducted by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

. . . A Roumanian woman had a suite downstairs and she was always coming up with some of her baking, which was simply delicious. She made a cookie which she called "Nothings" She said a batter, not like a pie pastry, very thin, then she cut it in strips and gave each strip a twist, and cooked it in hot fat. They only took a few seconds to cook, as it was so thin and she sprinkled the finished product with icing sugar . . . Irene B.

ANSWER:

I think these may be something like your Roumanian "Nothings" but they are Norwegian.

FRIDAY (Gerda)

Poached Fillet of Haddock with Shrimp Sauce; Riced Potatoes; Julienne Green Beans; Lettuce, Apple and Green Pepper Salad with French Dressing; Baked Custard Pudding with Fresh Raspberries; Coffee.

FATTIGMAND (fried cookies):

3 eggs, 3 tablespoons heavy cream, 1-4 cup granulated sugar, 1 1-2 tablespoons melted shortening, 1 tablespoon brandy, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon ground cardamon seeds, about 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour, fat or salad oil.

Mix eggs thoroughly with cream and sugar. Add shortening, brandy, salt, cardamon, 2 cups flour; mix. Stir in enough additional flour to make stiff dough. Wrap in wax paper; chill 1 hour or longer. Heat 2" fat or salad oil in deep saucepan. On lightly floured board, roll half of dough thin. Cut into long diamonds. Make slit in centre of each; pull one corner through slit. Fry at 365 deg. Fahr. until delicate brown. Cool. Dust with confectioners' sugar. Repeat with rest of dough.

QUESTION:

. . . I like the traditional rich plum pudding. My Mother is English and her Christmas puddings were the best I have ever tasted. She never used flour, but breadcrumbs and raw potato or potatoes. If you have one like this I would appreciate it very much . . . Myra Mack.

ANSWER:

The following recipe for Rich Plum Pudding was given here November 25th, 1937 and fills all of your requirements.

RICH PLUM PUDDING:
(Makes 3 average-sized):

One of these may provide the Christmas dessert, while the others may be Christmas gifts, or will keep almost indefinitely for future use. One pound each dates, seeded-raisins and chopped suet, 1 1-2 pounds each seeded-raisins and currants, 1-2 pound each chopped citron and candied orange peel, one pound chopped figs, 1 cup dark brown sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg, 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-4 teaspoon cloves, yolks of 8 eggs, 8 egg whites, 1-2 cup white (or blue) grape juice. Combine all ingredients in order given except for the egg whites. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites last. Turn into greased pudding bowls, cover and tie down with floured cloth. Immerse in large kettle of boiling water, and boil covered for 1-2 hours. At serving time reheat about 1 1-2 hours.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a woman's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers

Loretta Y. — My aunt is killing herself caring for her brother-in-law.

Martha Y. — He is so helpless. It's the least I can do.

Loretta Y.: Aunt Martha never married and made her home with her sister and brother-in-law, Aunt Bea and Uncle Lou. They've all grown old together and, since there are no children to do so, the nieces and nephews are worrying about what will become of them. Aunt Martha is frail.

Uncle Lou, at 81, is convalescing from an operation. When I visited the home, I found Aunt Martha feeding him patiently. Aunt Bea does her part in caring for her husband, but it is Aunt Martha who takes a role to flee for him at 3 A.M., and who chips from her small savings to pay for a visiting nurse and barber.

She was completely exhausted. She's 78 years old herself, and not very sturdy on her feet.

I've urged her to conserve her strength, and that they can't afford round-the-clock home nursing for Uncle Lou, to let him be taken to a nursing home until he's fully recovered. She refuses.

Martha Y.: I know all about nursing homes and while I have an ounce of strength left I'll care for those that need it. It's the least I can do for Bea and him. They've been kindness itself to me. And without my help, Bea would have no choice but to send Lou to a home. It's a dreary job and takes two people.

I prepare tempting meals for Lou, food I know will appeal to him. In a nursing home, he'd get glob. And when he falls asleep I sit nearby, because the medicine maker him dizzy and he might fall out of bed.

Loretta can't understand why I, who am only Lou's sister-in-law, take such an interest in his comfort. Well, as I said, my sister and Lou made life worth living for me. It's a small worthwhile, didn't feel tired, any more.

The Council: This well-meaning niece fails to see the many satisfactions her elderly aunt received from her administrations in this household, despite the drains on her.

Here is a childless woman who is now pouring out a form of maternal instinct on her brother-in-law and rather believes sister. Seeing Loretta's comfortable, watching him doze, pampering him, gives her the joy of achievement. She has also had provided something important for her future husband, something he couldn't obtain elsewhere. She has stood between him and the walls of an institution.

So, to her role of food and nursing, she adds the luxury of those of mother, nurse protector. Like Loretta, many people are at a loss to account for the motivation behind acts of self-sacrifice. Aunt Martian's are now clear. We are reminded of a middle-aged woman who similarly pursued her friends by her faithful attendance on a mother, sister or in a home for the aged. Her explanation: "My mother died before I had a chance to be real nice to her. This work gives me a chance to be nice to other people's mothers, in her name."

As with Aunt Martha, the joy of the job didn't matter in the least. The emotional comforts it provided.

Loretta and the other relatives can do so much to help that continue to show their interest through visits, and phone calls, plus occasional gifts to ease the housekeeping budget. These elders may be alone and feeble, but there's steel in their spines. They won't be helped "Uncle!" (or "Nephew!") for a while yet.

A P.S. to Aunt Marian, however. Don't condemn all nursing homes because of your experience with a bad one. Most of them nowadays must meet strict standards for a licence to operate. And many of them are staffed by people with live consciences and warm hearts — like yours.

QUESTION BOX

Question: I am confronted with a very big problem. My son recently left for a foreign country to marry a girl with whom he has been corresponding for a long time. They are to be married over there. As his parents, what should his father and I do about announcing it to relatives and friends? Do we send out an announcement?

Mrs. F. S., Carlisle, N.J.

Answer: I would suggest that you send an announcement of the marriage to the society columns of the newspapers in your city. Since, in this country, it is proper only for the parents of the bride to send out formal engraved announcements, I think that a personal note to relatives and friends, written by you and telling them that the marriage has taken place, would be the best approach.

Question: There are two or three boys in my room in high school that I would like to give presents to at Christmas. I am not going steady with any of them, but I do like them all. What kind of gift would be all right to give them? Would it be best to give them a tie clip, or something like that? — Miss R. J. W., Cobourg.

Answer: Rather than give them your own initials, and which, after all, as this I would suggest rebuke the parents of the girl. These are all impersonal, and I am sure they will be gratefully received.

Question: We are planning a small home wedding to be following the home reception. The ceremony will be performed by a Protestant Minister. The bride is wearing a waltz-length gown and the bridegroom and best man dark suits. Under these circumstances, should the mother of the bride wear a hat, or just receive the guests hatless, as she would at a home reception?

Mrs. J. Mc., Harrisburg, Pa.

Answer: Most emphatically, no mother would not wear a hat under these circumstances. Should there be a matron of honor, or bridesmaids, they may properly wear hats, but not the mother of the bride.

Sunday School Lesson

When Jesus Filled the Pulpit

By ROY L. SMITH

According to a widely accepted tradition, Joseph, the head of the little Nazareth household, died when Jesus was perhaps 15 years old. Following his death, Mary became manager of the carpenter shop, being assisted by Jesus and the other children of the family.

The city of Nazareth included a population of perhaps as many as 10,000, among whom Jesus enjoyed an excellent reputation. From at least one reference in the New Testament (Luke 2:52) it appears to have been the case that He was popular as a boy, a youth, and a young business man of the community.

KINGDOM AT HAND

About the time Jesus was 30 years of age a strange man came out of the desert, playing the role of a prophet, and announcing that the long expected Kingdom of Heaven was about to be inaugurated. The news spread throughout Jewry in all the world, and it may have been that hundreds of thousands went down to the fords of the Jordan to hear the fiery preacher.

Among those who were attracted by John's preaching was Jesus of Nazareth, the carpenter. Bidding the shop goodbye, He set off on a journey that could be expected to occupy His time for at least two weeks, and possibly enlarged Him for a period of several months. Convinced that the desert prophet spoke with the authority and endorsement of God, Jesus presented Himself as one of the thousands and underwent the ministry of John which then proclaimed themselves members of the new Kingdom Movement.

HE ENTERED THE MINISTRY

Certain strange circumstances attended His initiatory baptism, and these made it necessary for Him to go off alone into the wilderness to think His way through the implications of His new situation. Certainly He felt Himself called of God, and His mission was not to be entered into in any brash fashion.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for December 18: "The Compassion for Christ" Isaiah 61: Matthew 11:27-30; Luke 7:18-23.

Returning after several weeks, Jesus became one of John's preachers. He was so effective, and His preaching proved so attractive, that there were those who said He was even more impressive than John himself, a rumor that caused no little consternation inside the movement (John 4:1-3).

The record is very scanty, but we are led to believe that Jesus' fame began to spread throughout the land, so that by the time He was ready to return to His home town He was something of a national figure.

BACK IN NAZARETH

Back in the city of Nazareth where He had hung so many doors and built so many tables, Jesus suddenly found Himself a favorite son. An invitation was extended to Him to preach from the pulpit of the local synagogue, the first Sabbath after His return, and He accepted the invitation.

Convinced in His own mind that He was called of God to be the Savior of the nation, and encouraged in that belief by the manifestations of divine power that had attended His ministry in Judea, the invitation to preach in His hometown pulpit presented Him with exactly the opportunity for which He was looking.

He used the occasion to announce His destiny, and to describe the work to which He felt Himself called. It seemed that the great role of Scripture opened at the precise list He needed, and with complete confidence He read the words of the prophet Isaiah, and then said, in effect, "I am the one of whom he is speaking."

THE FOUR-FOLD PROGRAM

According to the Scripture from which Jesus spoke that day, His mission was to be four-fold.

1. He was to inspire the underprivileged with a new hope.
2. He was to declare the will and the purpose of God.
3. He was to let all the world that God looked upon mankind with favor.
4. He was to reassure those who were utterly hopeless concerning the affairs of the world.

Only one who believed he had the Most High back of him would have dared to preach from such a text under such circumstances. And the Church of the Living Christ dare not preach on any lesser text today.

A Few Weeks in Old Spain And the Spanish Personality Will Surely Creep Into You

During a tour of Spain, Alan Harvey, London bureau chief of The Canadian Press, found that the people remain strongly individualistic in this story he describes the character and personality of the nation.

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MADRID (CP)—Pagan, mysterious Spain. Grandiose Spain. Harsh and intolerant, prone to extremes, bent under the weight of history and legend. Romantic Spain, land of flamenco, bullfights and fiesta.

A few weeks in Spain and you start talking like that. The Spanish personality takes hold. However sterile generalization about national character may be, they seem flatteringly true of this individualistic, strongly - marked race, and they have a big bearing on its history.

Perhaps it is simply that the physical nature of Spain, with its stark mountains and sun-bleached plains, stretching across southwestern Europe like a bull's hide left to dry produced a people in its image, with epic qualities and epic failings.

Perhaps as the fatalists say in a sense of paradox. Spain is cooler the side of Quebec, and all countries stamp among the least likely to make a major imprint in the sands of the big beach. But nobody has told the Spanish.

They cannot do anything by halves. They are perennially in search of the colossal. This is evident in the new workers' universities, the big buildings of Madrid with their baroque angels everywhere, the broad highways.

It is also notable in the flamboyant Civil War memorial, The Valley of the Fallen, which cost millions of dollars. Some call it Franco's Folly.

Like adults frozen in adolescence, Spaniards have an undercurrent of enthusiasm. It is appealing. They dwell in their private worlds and ignore things outside themselves. There is a compulsiveness about the idea of Spain, and the word keeps cropping up in conversation. They never forget their native villages.

This self-absorption, a byproduct of long isolation, may pass-able of parochialism.

In a talk with five serious-minded women students at the University of Madrid, I found not one had ever heard of John Diefenbaker or Lester Pearson. In fact, they could not name any Canadian, living or dead.

MUTUAL IGNORANCE

Asked what picture Canada brought to mind, one girl said: lakes. Another — alas — clumped for Alaska. In fairness, Spaniards might well ask whether there are many Canadians who could name any Spanish politician, apart from General Franco.

Many visitors fall in love with Spain and its people. Numerous tributes have been paid to their generosity, their mp - house - in your-house hospitality, their natural grace and dignity, their sense of drama. The peasant tilling the fields often seems a born aristocrat.

Spanish ailments are immune from bootlegging. There is little of the sloppiness of dress that is a teen-age trademark in other Western countries. A Canadian resident in Madrid feel obliged to eschew sports shirts and wind-breakers when they go downtown.

Spaniards may secretly pity anyone unfortunate enough to be born outside their country. So they soften the blow for the foreigner by extending a warm welcome. If you are an invited guest, you'll have a hard time paying for anything.

BEST AND WORST

They have resisted Americanization. There are American-style restaurants, rock 'n' roll music hot dogs and soft drinks, but U.S. soldiers are not allowed to wear uniforms outside their bases and there is no mass mixing.

Some travellers find themselves exasperated by aspects of the Spanish temperament. Writer Honor Tracy said no people should be at once "so magnificent and so repulsive." And one Spanish-speaking foreigner commented:

"Here you find unadulterated, unvarnished humanity. Here the best and the worst of human nature are completely exposed, without the overlay of sophistication found in other western countries."

Outsiders have long been puzzled by the enigmatic quality may arise from the fact that Spain, for all its beauty, is apart from Europe. A Spanish professor called it "marginal Europe." Yet there is an old saying that "Europe ends at the Pyrenees."

QUIXOTIC TOUCHES

Some say Spain really belongs across the Mediterranean, in Africa. For some bright centuries, ending in 1492 when Elizabeth of Castile and Ferdinand of Aragon liberated Granada, the southern part of the country was ruled by the Moorish invaders from across the sea. Until recently, women in Algeria still were veiled.

Spaniards acknowledge a dualism in their character. They all have a little of the characters in the great book by Miguel de Cervantes—something of Don Quixote tilting at windmills, dreaming of the wasteland and wholly inconsiderate unpunctuality. This reporter had several appointments with Spanish people and did not encounter a single one on time.

Among those who have blamed Spain's failure to join Spain blamed the influence for implanting in Spaniards traits that "streak of cruelty" that is regularly sated in bullrings on Sunday afternoons. Spaniards say that what they call the "black" Roman Catholicism of Spain.

"It is paganism pure and simple," said a Canadian Catholic. "Religion is not taught. It is absorbed by hearsay and tradition. In Canada, Holy Week is a time for fasting, sacrifice, recollection and prayer. Here people make a fiesta of the season."

DRAMATIC APPROACH

A tendency to explosions of emotion and to external display of religion in feast days and ritual images may be part of the Spanish approach, which is essentially dramatic rather than frigidly rational.

The temperament is subject to ups and downs. Friendships may be an affair of fireworks—a great abandonment, greeting, a spatter of blue flame that is to be eternal and then, pfft, after a few days, nothing but ashes.

This applies particularly to Andalusia, where people are all once vital and preoccupied with death. It may be true of the shrewd, calculating inhabitants of Galicia, most northwestern of Spanish provinces, or of the brisk, efficient Catalonians who manage the textile mills.

Spain's exports while yearning in vain for their own separate language and traditions.

What all have in common, it seems to one reporter, is an uncompromising quality, a tendency to extremes, which may explain why liberal democracy has never taken root. Franco's "crusade" of Civil War days was as much a fight against such doctrine as against communism.

Though the Spanish army has been likened to a loaded gun, pointed at the people rather than at the enemy without the latter preference still seems to be for power rather than persuasion, gunboats rather than goodwill. The Spaniards may be mellowing slightly; they are still pretty tough.

ALL ALONE

The only commercial production of nitrate of soda in the world is in the north of Chile.

PLANS NEW PARTY

TORONTO (CP)—Self - employed-accountant James Auty, 45, says he's forming a new Canadian political party that will curb unemployment, encourage industry and end wars. Mr. Auty said Wednesday he hasn't any members yet for the new democratic party but he plans public meetings to gain support.

TORONTO (CP) — An antiquated clause in the Ontario Insurance Act is killing any nurse and insurance agents, chances for romance between nurses, and insurance agents, Gordon Innes (L—Oxford) told the legislature Wednesday.

Speaking in the throne debate, Mr. Innes asked Attorney-General Roberts to amend the statute which prevents an insurance agent from getting a license if he marries a doctor, dentist, nurse or medical or dental technician.

Mr. Innes cited the case of an insurance agent in his riding who married a registered nurse and could not obtain renewal of his licence.

The prohibitive clause does not affect life insurance agents, but is applicable to all other insurance agents.

Mr. Roberts said the act was drafted probably in the days when officials felt a nurse might exert undue influence on a deday afternoon. He indicated the act would be amended.

Boiled Potatoes Are Harmless To the Heart

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—If you don't want to drop dead of coronary thrombosis, consume no boiled potatoes, frozen fish and whisky.

Just about as blunt as that was the advice given to several million British television viewers on a BBC program. The tip came from an Oxford research worker, and only a few experts bothered to challenge the idea.

The TV program, a regular weekly feature called Panorama, showed commentator Ludovic Kennedy interviewing Dr. Hugh Sinclair, researcher for Oxford's Magdalen College, beside a table laden with butter, beef, bacon, bread, chicken and eggs.

After preliminary remarks suggesting that food is one of the primary factors in causing heart disease, Kennedy picked up one item after another and asked Dr. Sinclair whether they were good or bad for the heart.

MANY FATS OUT

The doctor, drawing a distinction between useful and harmful fats, regretfully turned thumbs down on most of the foods. As he did so, Kennedy swept the offending items off the table. Finally, only whisky, potatoes and fish remained.

Dr. Sinclair did not attempt to give an opinion on many foods—such as salads—that did not appear on the table. His main point was that excessive processing often does damage to foods.

Newspapers generally ignored the program but some authorities took issue with Dr. Sinclair. Professor John Ludkin, London University expert on nutrition, said the conclusions reached were completely unwarranted.

Sir Heneage Ogilvie, consulting surgeon at Guy's Hospital, London, said he knows of no evidence to support the suggestion that animal fats contribute to coronary thrombosis. Sir Heneage, 73, added:

"I eat an enormous amount of butter. I like fat beef. I have two rashers of bacon every morning.

"The Americans get more coronaries than any other race in the world yet they eat less butter than some other races."

CHARGED WITH PERJURY

TORONTO (CP)— Sheriff's officer Robert J. Gray Tuesday was committed for trial on charges of perjury and prevarication following an investigation of divorce case evidence by the attorney - general's department. Gray, a senior process server at City Hall, is accused of falsely swearing that he had served a summons on Phoebe Fraser of Vancouver in connection with the Lumley and Fraser divorce action.

Requests Govt. Fire Staff of Ontario House

TORONTO (CP) — An opposition member of the legislature Wednesday asked the government to fire the staff of Ontario House in London, England, and replace it with experts in trade, particularly agriculture.

John Spence (L—West Esri) said farm prices have fallen so low that cellophane bags used to package carrots and tomato cans cost more than the food inside.

"It would be interesting to know the qualifications and activities of the staff of Ontario House and learn just what they are doing besides drinking tea," he said in the throne debate.

He urged the government to establish an agricultural export development fund to assist export groups in developing new markets in the United States and Europe.

He said there should be warehouses set up in overseas countries to display and store Ontario farm products.

Mr. Spence, a farmer near Minkirkk, urged the government to encourage the location of new industry in towns and villages by assisting to rural municipalities an industry's taxes for the first three years.

He cited in support the smaller communities and in the interest of national safety in the event of a war, he said.

One of Solicitor's Duties Is to Recommend to Cabinet Who Should Get Clemency

By JACK VAN DUSEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — William Joseph Browne, one-time judge and Rhodes scholar, literally held the life of a man in his hands.

Before him on his desk—the desk of the solicitor-general of Canada—was spread the record of a man sentenced to be hanged for murder.

It was his job to recommend to the cabinet whether this man's life should be spared and he did not care to answer specific questions about the case and the subject of capital punishment asked by a reporter who had dropped in for an interview.

It was not an easy decision; he would rather not say whether he was against capital punishment; the issue could come up again at the new session of Parliament.

The scholarly minister interested in the well-being of people all his life, picked up a sheet from the file, glanced at it and said: "Every case is different. There is no set pattern. Only by studying the cases thoroughly can one come to the right conclusion."

APPOINTED OCT. 11

The 48 - year - old lawyer and long-time politician, Newfoundland's representative in the federal cabinet, was appointed solicitor - general Oct. 11. In this post he assists Hon. Davie Fulton in the counsel work of the department of justice and one of his duties is to make recommendations to the cabinet for or against commutation of death sentences.

Mr. Browne had been minister without portfolio from 1957 until the new appointment.

His 15 years as a district court judge in St. John's will help him in his life-or-death decisions. "I have come up against all kinds of cases."

The suave, moustached minister has had an up-and-down political career which started in 1972 when he was an agent for the Liberal candidate. He became a Conservative about a decade later.

In both provincial and federal politics he has been elected only to be bounced out at the next election. But he has always come back. His Newfoundland career has been featured by squabbles with Liberal Premier Joseph Smallwood. He once had a warrant issued for Mr. Smallwood's arrest.

CALLED TO BAR

A prairie lit civil engineering from the University of Toronto, Mr. Browne was awarded a Rhodes scholarship, studied law at Oxford and was called to the bar in England and Newfoundland in 1932.

The following year he lost his first bid for a seat in the legislature, in which he was assistant clerk in 1932-34. He was elected in 1934 and was a minister without portfolio in the Alderdice government before leaving politics to serve as judge from 1936 to 1949.

In 1949, the year Newfoundland joined Canada, he ran headed into Mr. Smallwood, long-time Ottawa, Confederation.

Mr. Browne says he opposed Mr. Smallwood's methods in seeking confederation but "raised his ire." The Conservative wanted self - government restored to Newfoundland—at the time administered by a commission government guided by Britain — before Confederation was brought. Newfoundland then would have been in a position to deal with Canada "government to government."

The stand "angered Smallwood and he got me removed from the list of judges." That was Mr. Browne's cue to jump back into active politics.

BITTER CAMPAIGN

He stood for election in the newly-created federal seat of St. John's West. The three - week campaign had been bitter and when he charged Mr. Smallwood with threatened people" who had indicated they would vote for Mr. Browne.

"I applied for his arrest for threatening and intimidation." The Newfoundland S o n r e m Court dismissed the charge, but by that time Mr. Browne had been elected.

He was defeated in 1953 but was returned in the 1957 and 1958 general elections. In the interval away from politics, he returned to the Newfoundland legislature.

Confederation, he now says, was one of the best things that ever happened to his native province.

Unemployed Present Brief To Ontario Labor Minister, House Picketed During Meet

TORONTO (CP) — A 23-member delegation representing the unemployed of nine Ontario communities Thursday presented a six-point brief on unemployment to Ontario's Labor Minister Daley and Work Minister Connell.

About 200 unemployed picketed the Legislature building during the two-hour meeting.

Pickets carried signs demanding jobs and welfare increases. "Don't dilly Dallier—we demande jobs," said one. Several were in Italian. A veteran, wearing his medals, carried a sign saying: "Is this what I fought for?"

The brief, read by Ray Peters, co-chairman of the Peterborough General Union for the Unemployed, demanded:

1. An immediate broad program of public works, including schools, hospitals and new rural school by the provincial government, and increased financial assistance to municipalities undertaking such projects.

2. A 30-per-cent increase in welfare allowances for single persons and a 25-per-cent increase for married men, municipalities being relieved of all costs, and regulations governing the program to be available to the public.

3. An amendment to the Hours of Work Act to provide for a maximum 40-hour week with strict limitations on overtime and severe penalties for infractions.

4. A plan for the government to cover cost of the Ontario hospital plan for those unemployed for the duration of unemployment.

5. A large-scale training program to equip those unemployed with new skills.

6. Provincial government influence to have industry which will prevent evictions and which will provide for a moratorium on mortgages and debts of those unemployed for the full duration of unemployment.

The delegates said pickets came by buses from Oshawa, Peterborough, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Welland, Oshawa, Windsor and other Ontario communities.

The brief called the present winter work program "a farce." In Toronto with some 65,000 unemployed, the program means only a few weeks of employment for some 1,2000 persons.

Mr. Daley replied that this was not a fair assessment of the present program.

"Some $150,000,000 is being spent on the program," said Mr. Connell. "We're spending the taxpayers' money and have to consider it."

Commenting on other parts of the brief, Mr. Daley said the request for a 40-hour week legislation was unrealistic. Such a plan would cost over $60,000,000 and would possibly reduce great number of those available.

"Many industries need skilled workers for overtime in peak seasons," he said.

Charles Brooks, president of Local 444, United Auto Workers (CLC) in Windsor, said Chrysler Corporation of Canada and the Ford Motor Company of Canada both recently scheduled 10-hour work days, while workers in the same plants were being laid off.

He asked for government regulation of car imports from the United States.

"Some 500 cars a day enter Canada in Windsor," he said. "These are all models which compete directly with ones manufactured here."

The brief also warned against a provincial income tax, which it said would hit the poor the hardest.

Money for increased assistance should come from the federal government, which should cut down on military items such as the Bomarc missile, the brief said.

Ontario's $800,000 budget surplus should also go towards the program, the brief said.

Mr. Daley replied that he was not qualified to discuss matters between the federal government and Ontario was doing its best to solve the unemployment problem.

"About two-thirds of the time of the House this week in the legislature was spent on matters concerning unemployment," said Mr. Connell.

Mr. Daley also said the government was considering the extensive program to increase training facilities for unemployed.

Mr. Daley said the brief would receive "very, very serious consideration" by the government, but he was not able to make any firm decision on government and give definite answers.

Motion to Quash Six Charges Is Denied

TORONTO (CP) — A motion to quash six charges of advertising liquor laid against the Globe and Mail was denied in magistrate's court Thursday by Magistrate C. A. Thoburn.

The charges, laid under the liquor control act, alleged that the newspaper, argued that charges outlined in the information sheets were not valid in law.

Magistrate Thoburn countered that the newspaper is not a member of the Liquor Control Act under which charges were laid is "perfectly clear."

The case was adjourned until next Monday, but the magistrate said he would set up a special court Saturday for the hearing involving the Globe and Mail and to hear six similar charges laid against the Toronto Star.

Only one witness was heard Thursday—Jesse Jones, the general manager of the legislature for Bruce Riding, who with Liberal Leader Vernon Singer of York-Scarborough and Centre Ian dithe original charges last March.

Major Battle Shaping up Between Factions

TORONTO (CP)—A major battle appears to be shaping up between two rival elements for control of the 3,700-member Local 222 of the International Teamsters Union (ind.)

Elections for the Toronto-based local to replace the trusteeship of the International aren't until Jan. 8, but nominations are set for Sunday.

Local 938 trustee J. J. (Duke) Thomson, who heads the one faction, confirmed Thursday that Edwin Banks has resigned as salaried union business representative at Kingston. Banks is expected to contest the local's vice-presidency as running mate to Kenneth McDougall.

WINS COURT RULING

McDougall has won a court decision clinching a ruling by Thomson that would have disqualified him from seeking reelection as president.

Thomson is expected to pick his nominees for William Pratt as his candidate for president.

Accusations from Kingston teamsters that the union's trusteeship invoked 12 months ago to oust the leadership of the defunct local, have extended as a result of a split in the ranks over McDougall's candidacy—amounts to a dictatorship, were brushed aside by Thomson.

"I've never wanted to be a trustee and have resisted every making a ruling in opposition to the membership," he said Thursday.

PROBES RED CHARGES

Mr. Thoburn said he would receive "very, very serious consideration" to charges into the government," but he was not able to make any firm decision on government and give definite answers.

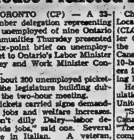
Honesty Will Make Season Little Brighter

NORTH BAY (CP) — The honesty of a Grey Coach bus driver, Robert Fulton of North Bay, will make Christmas a season brighter for an elderly Hamilton woman, Mary Christie.

Mr. Fulton, upon arrival in North Bay from his Toronto run, found a bundle of money amounting to more than $1,100 wrapped in a piece of cloth and held together by safety pins.

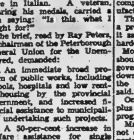
"I had the bundle pinned to my clothing when I got off the bus at Scotia and after the bus left I realized the money was gone", Miss Clarke said.

Mr. Fulton, 24 years ago, like Clarke's father was burned to death and she was severely burned. She moved to Hamilton on the farm at Huntsville until the fire destroyed it a few years later. She had to sell all the cattle as a result and the money was part of what was left from the sale.



Pelee Island Finding It Hard To Get Good Teaching Staff

TORONTO (CP)—Pelee Island may be a good place to hunt pheasants but it isn't much of a spot to get a secondary education.



That was the consensus of a presentation Thursday by a delegation from the Lake Erie island to the Ontario Legislature's private bills committee.

The islanders told the committee even $19,000 a year isn't enough to attract a qualified teacher for Grades 11 and 12 in the Pelee school.

Between 1953 and 1959 Pelee had to settle for seven teachers described by a school inspector as unqualified and inexperienced. One was reported to have gone shooting on dates during permission to take a bath; another didn't know how to make hydrogen for a chemistry experiment; a third was reported to have left the country without answering a single question.

"Jest a Second"

"I'd like to do something worthwhile like leaving my brain to science."

The delegation sought a private bill to legalize an existing situation, whereby students in Grades 11, 12 and 13 are paid their board and lodging allowance on the mainland. All but one of the nine students attending this year are enrolled at Leamington District High School.

The latter was referred a decision and suggested a ratepayers' vote on the issue. Copies of maps submitted to the legislature.

W. T. Laing of Wallaceburg, St. Clair district inspector of secondary education, spoke in support of the delegation's objective. He said none of the seven teachers hired from 1953 to 1958 "received the teaching certificate of any kind."

"A good, sharp teacher for Grades 11 and 12 would be welcome there," he said.

The board decided to send the students to the mainland in 1958, agreeing to contribute toward the students' board, lodging and transportation expenses as well as their tuition costs.

However, the idea was never put in a vote, and some protests have been received by the municipal affairs department.

Pelee, Lake Erie's largest, is some 15 miles south of the Ontario mainland. The island's 462 inhabitants are served by a ferry in the warmer weather, but through the winter months the only contact with the outside world usually is by airplane.

Mr. Laing said the board offered $10,000 for a teacher last year. The one reply received was a refusal, and the board considered incompetent.

The 318,303 in the Democratic column represented the total polled by the top Kennedy-Johnson elector. The unpledged Democrat elector received 324,050. Six of state's 11 votes.

Democratic electors ran unpledged, but later agreed to support Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Dem., in the electoral college.

(B) Mississippi — electoral vote of 8 went to unpledged Democratic electors who later agreed to support Sen. Byrd. They polled 116,266. Kennedy had 108,362 and Republican 73,171.

(C) New York—Kennedy total includes 406,176 Liberal party votes.

Spell Proved He Could Spell Quite Well

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mr. Dr. Lewis Ball quizzed his freshman English class at the University of Richmond on what he considered the easiest words most frequently misspelled by college students.

Then he had them do it.

Results: Only one had difficulty spelling the words and had supplied the answers, he asked:

"Did anyone spell them all correctly?"

A lone hand went up.

"Your name, sir?"

"Spell."

The student was James Bryan Spell.

Three Children, Woman Stabbed To Death

DETROIT (AP) — Three children and a woman were stabbed to death Thursday.

Police launched a search for Delores Martin, 28, after the bodies were discovered later stuffed in a chest in her apartment.

A note in the woman's home led police to the home of Mrs. Martin's brother, Lawrence, 28, where they found the man's wife, Virginia, 24, and their children, Wanda, 2, and Tony, 3, dead of stab wounds.

Police said Mrs. Martin had been under the care of a psychiatrist for several months.

RABAT, Morocco (AP)—A new Soviet - Moroccan trade agreement was signed Wednesday, providing for greater imports of Soviet petroleum products in the year ahead.

Plan Is Given Little Chance To Win Support

UNITED NATIONS N.Y. (CP)—India and Yugoslavia moved today to break the Congo deadlock here with a plan that would place Congolese troops under UN command and free Patrice Lumumba. The plan was given little chance of winning support from East or West.

The resolution was scheduled to go before the assembly when it began to give a full airing to the explosive Congo question.

The Indian-Yugoslav proposal closely resembles the peace plan which Ceylon and Tunisia tried to put through the Security Council earlier this week but pulled back when they failed to muster support from either side.

One new feature in the current resolution is the recommendation to place Congo troops under the United Nations Command. Western powers are expected to oppose this on grounds that it would constitute interference in the domestic affairs of the Congo. The Soviet bloc is expected giving any more authority to Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold's Congo operation.

WOULD FREE PRISONERS

The plan would ask:

1. Take immediate steps for release of political prisoners including Lumumba, deposed Congo premier. The West would also support this.

2. Take immediate steps to reconvene the Congo Parliament. The United States has insisted that Lumumba is a political issue and that many of the deputies won't come out of hiding because they have been threatened.

The assembly voted to recess for the Christmas holidays at 5 p.m. by 56 to 9. The Soviet bloc tried unsuccessfully to bring the debates back Jan. 20.

Pope John Names Four New Cardinals

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John today named four new cardinals.

Two South Americans, an Italian and an Indian were elevated by the pontiff.

They are Miguel Pro Lala Concha Cordoba, Archbishop of Bogota, Colombia; Most Rev. Jose Humberto Quintero, Archbishop of Caracas, Venezuela; Magr. Guiseppe Ferretto, a member of the Vatican Curia, and Magr. Rev. Joseph E. Ritter, Archbishop of St. Louis.

They will be created at a secret consistory in the Vatican on Jan. 16.

Creation of the four new cardinals will bring the membership of the Sacred College of the Roman Catholic Church to 87, the time record of 56.

There was no indication today that the Pope would make public at the Jan. 16 consistory the identity of the three cardinals he designated "in pectore" (in his heart) on Dec. 15, 1958. At that time the pope named seven new cardinals which brought the college to a total of 85, plus the three "in pectore."

Only after their names are made known, will be considered to have been members of the college since the March date.

Surgeons Found This Patient Really Loaded

CHICAGO (AP) — Surgeons who made a medical check-up on a mental patient because he was constipated found bullets, ankles recovered 258 objects from his stomach.

Their report, published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association, listed three among items recovered: Twenty-six keys, 24 nail files, three sets of rosary beads, 16 religious medals, one bracelet, one necklace, three metal crosses, a fingernail cutter, one knife blade, four nail scissors, three pairs of tweezers and a assorted coins.

An "amorphous mass of crushed rubber" weighing more than three pounds also was removed by surgery.

The man was a patient in the Brooklyn, N.Y., state hospital.

Despite all being in an advanced state of decomposition, the bodies were identified by Ontario provincial police.

Police identified the couple as Yvan Giroux, 25, and his wife, Irene. The couple had two young children.

Anti-Americanism Advanced By Some Presenting Briefs Is Criticized by Chairman

TORONTO (CP)—A clergyman and the managing director of a business paper publishing firm became under fire from the chairman of the royal commission on publications Thursday for anti-Americanism.

Commission chairman Grattan O'Leary, president of the Ottawa Journal, said "Canadians should get down on their knees and thank God for our 'good neighbor.'"

"When bombs begin to fall on Canada, they will not be American bombs," he said.

Briefs presented to the three-man commission inquiring into the health of Canadian periodicals have repeatedly taken the line that every variety of American publications into Canada was pernicious to the Canadian periodical publishing industry.

Mr. O'Leary was in his duties disturbed by the Age Publications, Limited of Toronto brief presented by C. H. Hocken.

"I'm disturbed by the . . . anti-Americanism which I think is shot through . . . are we to have no interest in foreign affairs at all?"

He said he could not believe a statement in the brief that the average Canadian knows more about the United States than he does of those in Canada.

Mr. Hocken, the author, editor and general manager of the Canadian Churchman, national publication of the Anglican Church of Canada, criticized advertising from the United States.

He said many of "our national institutions" are in the fire of idealistic conviction and the sacrifice accuracy of fact for a good object.

Mr. O'Leary said in the matter of publications there must be an independent from government or financial pressure, the press of Canada corresponds to Democracy in the world.

"We seem to be getting into the habit in Canada of blaming the American press for everything," he said in answer to Mr. Baker's charges that U.S. sex magazines were flooding the market.

The Americans don't impose their magazines on us. Nobody forces us to buy these magazines. The American press is not trash . . . I" asked Mr. O'Leary.

Others who presented briefs were Thomas Bradley, United Church of Canada minister of Bowmanville, who pleaded for Canadian publications; Ontario Association of Canada; Beverley and Hoodless Publishing Co. and editor - in - chief of Toronto Star, Limited on behalf of The Star Weekly; George Cadogan, owner of the Durham, Ont., Chronicle, and Orville Shell, Vetcoll, of Imperial Agencies of Toronto, Canadian advertising agent for British publishers.

Said Mr. de Vertcuil:

"The method of distribution in North America . . . astounds the British news agent. In the U.K. a news agent sends in his order according to a specific demand and has order forms for this purpose. You cannot get that service here. A man comes around in a truck and throws a pile of stuff at you, which the distributor has selected under an extraordinary system known as scaling.

"Can a British publisher compete here? No, not equitably, because the control in Canada is very much in the hands of a few publication companies."

Mr. Colette in a protested against special postal rates to publications. He claimed the rates enable publishers, to mail -their publications direct to the consumer at a cost lower than the distributor can deliver it to the retailer.

Mr. Hoederich said:

"We believe that American magazines should be permitted to enter Canada on the same postage over Canadian publications in the Canadian market,' Approximately 50 per cent of the costs eliminate this advantage."

Mr. O'Leary said at this point:

"I am greatly overjoyed to see the Canadian coming out in favor of protection."

Mr. Hoederich replied that there was a difference between protection and protection from good competition.

He said The Star Weekly does not want the solution should be found in any way at the method American publications.

Canadian Company Johnston asked whether Mr. Hoederich would be prepared to name the various witnesses that, without magazines, Canada would disappear as a nation.

Mr. Hoederich said it was an extravagant statement but that, with no national newspaper it would be impossible to maintain a nation "aggravate the problem of preserving our national identity." He said he thought that in the last 15 years "we have gone a long way" toward losing our identity.

He said Canadian magazines do not have the circulation they hope to do and said "propaganda is engulfing this country" from the U.S. in the printed, television and other forms.

Initial Outburst of Enthusiasm Dampened by 2nd Thoughts

By DAVE GANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Suddenly second thoughts have somewhat dampened the initial outburst of enthusiasm that greeted the birth in Paris of a new economic organization designed to help world countries in the field of Co-operation and Development".

Canada and the United States have agreed to become full members of the new body.

In the organization for European economic co-operation, the United States and Canada, two, will not be members of the council of tachil work in helping Europe recover from the war, but their feet, thus freeing them from the need for American aid.

BOOST FOR WEST

OECD, its successor, is asked to help countries of the free industrialized nations of the West. Another task assigned it is to help needy countries of the world become prosperous for the future.

Finance Minister Donald Fleming of Canada hailed OECD as an entity that would impart "new significance and strength to the Atlantic Alliance."

British Chancellor of the Exchequer Selwyn Lloyd described the birth as a "milestone" in U.S. - Underdeveloped - State Douglas Dillon as the dawn of a new era of international co-operation.

The economic pundits now are wondering if these words of self-language weren't just a bit too extravagant.

They posed this question: "What will OECD go to promote in its members?

"It has no executive powers, and even its powers over trade affairs will be less than those of OEEC — largely because the Americans and the French were unwilling to accept an obligation to co-ordinate their economic policies with those of other members," says the newspaper.

FIGURET
J. A. R. HOUSTON

"You take all the heads," said Jack, tossing almost exactly a dollar's worth of change in pennies on the table. "I take the tails."

"That's generous," jeered Jill. "Just two thirds of them are tails."

Her brother checked. "Okay, but I only get five nickels," he told her. "In fact we'll split the value even."

What was the total amount?

Squaw Valley Olympics Says State Was Hooked

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)— Investigators charged Thursday the state paid $485,000 more for the Squaw Valley winter Olympics than was deductible by law.

Walter J. Quinn, audit manager of the state auditor general's office, said the money came from a special $1,000,000 Olympic emergency fund passed by the 1960 legislature.

The emergency fund was part of $3,900,000 appropriated by the state to help cover the total $20,000,000 cost of the eighth winter Olympic games.

Quinn said the legislature had ordered the finance department to audit the emergency fund so it would not be wasted.

Investigators said the Olympic organizing committee's books were so cluttered that it was impossible to audit them. The finance department, feeling the games needed the money, handed over $1,500,000 in two payments.

When the books were audited after the games, it was discovered the committee should have spent only $300,000 of the emergency fund.

If the committee had been subjected to the usual budgetary review, its expenditures would have been considerably less, an investigator said.

And They Don't Pay Rent, Either

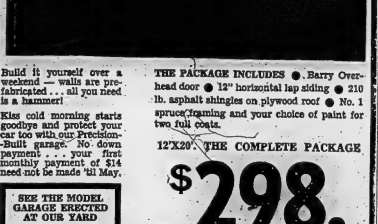
JASPER, Alta. (CP)—Four friendly moose appear to have taken up permanent residence on the runs of a new ski jump built here for the Canadian junior ski trials next February.

The runs were covered with straw and hay to provide a bedding base for snow should there be a thaw. The moose have been free-loading on the hay and bedding down in the straw.

The big animals refuse to be disturbed from the area and Jasper National Park workers have been kept busy replacing the hay.

Lark Tackle Signs With Los Angeles

MONTREAL (CP)—Billy Hudson, Montreal Alouettes tackle, said Thursday he has signed a contract to play with Los Angeles Chargers of the American Football League in 1961.



He told radio station CFCF in a telephone interview that he made a deal with the Chargers last Friday.

Alouette officials could not be reached for comment.

Hudson signed a regular contract with the Als last season but was promised the Als would sign rookie waivers if he wished to return to the U.S. at the end of the contract.

Helps Win "Grey Cup"

METZ, France — Held off the scoreboard for three years in a row, the East came back with a vengeance here recently to hand the Western squad a 35-25 clubbing and win the Grey Cup (Europe) trophy.

The Grey Cup (Europe) game is the RCAF in Europe's own version of the East-West football classic back home.

Played in Jean Amos stadium here in the history-packed city of Metz, the game was seen by more than 5,000 spectators, including high ranking French and American military and civil officials.

One of the participants in the game this year was Leading Aircraftman Allen M. Scott, 26, of Trenton, Ont. Weighing in at 175 pounds, Allan filled a vital position at left end in the game. He is the son of Mrs. R. Scott, 88 Dundas Street E., Trenton, and is married to the former Gloria Dale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Dale, R. R. 2, TD, Trenton.

ALLAN M. SCOTT

After a scoreless first quarter, the East moved into the lead a few minutes before half-time with a TD by Leading Aircraftman Earle (Tommy) Thomas of Saint John, N.B.

The West made it 7-1 with a booming punt into the end zone that went for a single point. The West then went to an early lead towards the end of the third quarter, going from the midfield on a smartly-executed series of running and passing plays, with Leading Aircraftman Barry Lucas, a native of Regina, going over for the West's only TD.

In the final quarter, it was the East all the way. The final stanza had barely opened when Thomas scoring another for the East, quickly followed by a TD by Flight Sergeant Art Foster of Ottawa. Thomas scored another point, and then, in the final minutes of the game, Corporal Rick Cane of Fort Arthur, Ont., took a short pass and leaped over the goal line for the final touchdown of the game, giving the East a 35-8 victory.

The Trots

TORONTO (CP)—Magistrate S. Tupper Bigelow, chairman of the Ontario Racing Committee, Thursday announced a system of provincial grants for Ontario residents who bred winning harness race horses in the province in 1960.

The grants would be five per cent of the breeder's winnings.

Gordon Findlay, secretary of the Canadian Trotting Association, has been instructed to prepare a list from the more than 5,000 winners, this year.

"The move is a step in the right direction," said Leslie Erlick, president of the Ontario Harness Horsemen's Association. "It is a sign of recognition for the harness racers, and is long overdue."

Magistrate Bigelow said that Deputy Provincial Treasurer Hugh Brown had revealed that a fund of $19,000 was available for the awards.

Leaf Coach Called on NHL Carpet

MONTREAL (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs' coach Punch Imlach was called on the carpet Thursday by Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League.

Imlach was summoned to explain remarks he made about the refereeing in a game between Toronto and Montreal Dec. 1. Toronto lost 6-3.

Campbell said he would announce today what action, if any will be taken. Neither would discuss the case Thursday night.

Montreal Canadiens leftwinger Dickie Moore regained possession of second place in the National Hockey League scoring race Thursday night by scoring one goal and assisting on another to bring his points total to 44.

Teammate Jean Beliveau, who was held scoreless Thursday night, now is third with 34 goals and 29 assists for 63 points.

Rightwinger Bernie Geoffrion, also of Montreal, still is first with 21 goals and 25 passes for 46 points. Moore's total consists of 25 goals and 19 passes.

ORDERS RECORDS

TORONTO (CP)—Mr. Justice George Walsh of the Supreme Court of Ontario Thursday ordered the Essex County Roman Catholic Children's Aid Society to produce all records of a two-year-old child by Jan. 12 in a sealed envelope. The child's unwed mother, Marcella Fortowsky, 30, is seeking through the courts to get her baby back from the society. The society claims the child has been adopted. Miss Fortowsky now is engaged to the father of the child.

Players Merge Forces

LONDON (AP) — England's professional soccer players Thursday presented a united front for strike action on Jan. 16—unless they get more pay and better contracts.

A meeting of players in the Midlands of England backed strike decisions from the south and the north.

That means the 2,700 members of the Professional Footballers' Association—the players' union—are ready to come out in force on the new year if they don't get a new deal from the men who run league soccer in England.

Delegates from clubs all over England have voted for a strike by 690 votes against 18.

If a strike came off, more than English soccer would be affected. The European Cup of Champions, the European Cup of Cup Winners, and the European Inter-Cities Fairs Cup all would be hit.

WANT MINIMUM WAGE

The players are demanding a guaranteed minimum wage of £15 a week, abolition of the maximum wage of £20 pounds a week, freedom to negotiate the length and terms of their own contract, freedom to leave a club if they can't agree about terms and a joint committee of players and club officials to deal with disputes.

League chiefs, representing the 92 clubs, have offered what they called "substantial" increases in the present £8 minimum wage without being specific as to crease up to £30 a week for players who have five years service with clubs, a new contract allowing players to sign from one club to another by signing fees varying from £150 to £600 and a joint committee appointed by the ministry of labor to handle disputes.

So far the players have rejected the league compromises.

TWO PENS RETURNED

HAMILTON (CP) — Two of eight pens stolen from the new city hall were returned Thursday night by an unidentified youth who said he might be able to retrieve the other six. He told city clerk James Berry another youth had taken the pens from the building. One of the pens recovered in 1956 by Claudius Amyrand, surgeon to George II.

Montreal May Be Back In Triple A

MONTREAL (CP) — Tommy Richardson, new president of the International League, said Thursday he has great hope that Montreal will again have a team in the triple-A circuit next season.

Richardson, recently elected president to succeed Frank Shaughnessy, made the statement at a press conference.

It was disclosed that Los Angeles Dodgers, who dropped the Montreal Royals as a farm club this year, have offered to provide a working agreement and 15 players for 1961. The Dodgers also agreed to train the Montreal team at Vero Beach, Fla.

Richardson said the league will take an option on the Montreal franchise until a suitable group can assume operation of the club.

"This is an old and established baseball city and certainly a big league project of the future," he said.

Western Hockey

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eddie Dorobey purchased Thursday night by Winnipeg Warriors of the Western Hockey League, says he will not report under terms of his present contract.

The 31-year-old centre, all-time point-getter in the WHL with 813, has made no secret of dissatisfaction with treatment received from Vancouver Canucks since breaking his leg a year ago. He said he wanted to be sold or traded. The amount of money involved in the deal was not disclosed.

Dorobey said he has "not been officially informed of the transfer of my contract to Winnipeg so naturally I can't comment."

"There are many things to be ironed out before I report to Winnipeg or any other club. There's a little matter of unpaid bills incurred by my unfortunate mishap, which must be paid by somebody."

EARLIER FAILURES

The first successful appendix operation recorded was performed in 1736 by Claudius Amyrand, surgeon to George II.

Maris Beats Mantle for Slug Title

BOSTON (AP) — Roger Maris of New York Yankees beat out teammate Mickey Mantle for the American League's 1960 slugging championship.

Official league statistics released today gave Maris a .581 slugging percentage and his first title in that department. He had 366 total bases on 39 singles, 16 doubles, seven triples and 39 homers.

Slugging percentage is figured by dividing bases at bat into total bases.

Mantle, who edged Maris by one for the 1956 title, had a .538 slugging mark. Roy Sievers of Chicago White Sox and Harmon Killebrew of Washington Senators tied for third with .534.

Leafs Roadblock Habs After 8 Wins

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Canadian world hockey hands can now stretch across the border, clasp Uncle Sam's tennis fists in a mere or less sympathetic grip and murmur "How does it feel, buddy?"

And it could very well be that a little later on the Canuck-Uncle Sam combo can offer similar sympathy to the Australians.

The United States-Australia domination of challenge play for the Davies tennis bauble, the Davis Cup, came to an abrupt and the other day when a dashing, daring Italian team of youngsters smashed the $46,000 challenger spell and converted the highly-favored American team into also-rans.

One thing the big upset proved, that the Americans have their sports die-hards even as we in Canada. From this element came the cry that has been heard so many times in this country since we were beaten in world hockey competition, "loss of prestige."

Loss of prestige, my eye. It had to come sooner or later. And, who knows, perhaps in the end this defeat from the Americans will emit the same cry after a Japanese baseball team has beaten their best in a world series competition.

World champions cannot go on indefinitely. Time and young blood demand their tolls. It happened to the mighty Yankee baseball machine. It happened to the vast majority of world heavyweight boxing champions. It will happen to the greatest hockey combination in the world, the Montreal Canadiens, just as sure as shootin'.

However, it must be admitted the sports world staggered with the impact of the upset. The Italians were down 2-0 after the first two singles matches and the rest should have been routine.

Perhaps cocksuredness was the chink in the Yankee armor. Whatever it was the Americans never won another game. The Italians, who actually wept after in disappointment after losing the first two bitterly fought matches, refused to acknowledge defeat.

They came back in a magnificent rally to sweep the doubles, then, playing superb tennis, won the final singles to give the old world its first Davis Cup challenger since years before the term pie became a global dish.

Then, reports from Australia said, the American players acted like spoiled babies. One, Chuck McKinley, hurled his racquet into a spectator-covered bleacher. The cameras proved that. They reportedly committed other childish acts.

Perhaps the Australians did blow up the incidents. The United States team captain admitted he charges did not behave themselves perfectly during their Australian visit, but he said the accusations against them extended to "vilest persecution."

On the other side of the picture the head man of the Australian Tennis Association states he will make a formal protest to the United States tennis body.

Be that as it may. It may have been a lot of smoke arising out of a little fire but the fact remains there was none of the traditional razing by the net and shaking hands with the victor, a practice common to tennis wherever it is played.

Perhaps it is a good thing for the sport that the Italians won. Davis Cup tennis, like other sports monopolized year after year by the champion few, has been badly in need of a fresh appeal.

The Australians and the Americans have been at each other's throats too long in the Davis Cup challenge round. It is time other national tennis teams got into the big act instead of actioning one another up for the inevitable kill at the hands of the Aussies or the Americans.

And at the risk of being dubbed a traitor to the Commonwealth, this department would emit a cheer or so, should the gallant young Italian team bring the Davis Cup silverware back to the old world for the first time since Britain won it 24 years ago.

Rangers Hold Wings To Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs seem to thrive on injuries.

With five regulars out of action the Leafs blasted Montreal Canadiens a 4-2 defeat in Montreal Forum Thursday night — Montreal's first loss in nine games.

In the National Hockey League's only other action, the Red Wings battled New York Rangers to a 1-1 tie at the Detroit Olympia.

The Leafs' win marked the first time that Montreal second string goalie Charlie Hodge has been on the losing end of a score since he replaced the injured Jacques Plante nine games ago.

Montreal took a 2-0 lead by the end of the first period on goals by Bernie Geoffrion and Dickie Moore.

Toronto goalie Johnny Bower, who kicked out a total of 37 shots, prevented Montreal's lead from being greater.

CUT EARLY LEAD

Leafs cut Montreal's lead to 2-1 in the second when Bob Pulford banged home Eddie Shack's rebound.

In the third period, two goals in less than a minute put Toronto ahead to stay.

Centre Billy Harris took Dave Keon's pass and scored at 13:18. Bob Nevin found the puck lying just off the crease during a scramble in front of the Montreal net and poked it home at 14:36.

Montreal coach Toe Blake pulled Hodge out of the nets for an extra forward with less than a minute to go, but the strategy backfired. Tim Horton slid a pass to Frank Mahovlich who scored an easy goal.

PENALTY WAS BACK

The Leafs had defenceman Allan Stanley back in action, playing with his broken jaw wired up. Missing were Dick Duff, George Armstrong, Carl Brewer, Ron Stewart and Larry Regan.

Gump Worsley stopped 31 Detroit shots at Detroit. The only one he couldn't handle came midway through the second period when Gordie Howe tipped in Pete Goegan's long drive.

Terry Sawchuk in Detroit goal after Hank Bassen had handled three games, made 22 saves.

Veteran Bill Gadsby scored for New York, whipping a 35 - foot drive home after taking a pass from captain Red Sullivan.

Four of the league's six clubs are in action Saturday night. New York visits Montreal and Boston Bruins are to be in Toronto.

Wings Whip Marlies 6-4, Petes Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Red Wings made it five straight by defeating Toronto Marlboros 6 - 4 Thursday night while Guelph Royals squeezed out a 5-4 win over Peterborough Petes in Ontario Hockey Association junior A section.

The first period at Hamilton saw a 1-1 tie on goals by Gaston Bessard for Marlboros and Barry Jeffrey for the Red Wings. In the second frame, Wayne Rivers for Hamilton scored the lone goal.

The third period saw goals by Harry Westbrooke, Jim Wilcox and John Weeks for Marlboros, while Jeffrey scored his second of the night. Two goals were added by John Miszuk for Hamilton and Lyle Porter scored a single for the winners.

Bob Cunningham with three and Rod Gilbert with two paced Guelph Royals powers posted by Paul Andres, Mike McMahon and Don Ellerandine.

Standouts for the Petes were Tom Carty and Claud Larose with two goals each. Singles were scored by Doug Senior, Stu Whitehead and Reg Mulholland.

Tonight's action sees St. Catharines at Guelph while Hamilton goes to Niagara Falls. St. Michael's Majors visit the Toronto Marlboros.

Als to Put Farm Team In Kitchener

KITCHENER (CP) — Montreal Alouettes may establish a farm team here next year to play in the Ontario Rugby Football Union, Alouette general manager and coach Perry Moss said Thursday night.

Such a move would mean the re-entry of Kitchener - Waterloo into the ORFU from which they were absent last season. The biggest stumbling block is $10,000 still owing from previous operations.

Moss met with K-W football officials Thursday and said later the Big Four football squad would like to put a full-time coach and manager here to handle the club. He said the prospect looked promising, but it would "be a couple of months before we know for sure where we are."

Moss said Alouettes would help provide players for the team by sending Canadian players for development and possibly U.S. imports who were not quite ready for the Big Four.

If the scheme comes off Larks would probably hold a tryout camp for Canadian players here next June before their own regular school in Montreal.

Officials meeting with Moss were William Roberts, Jr., president of Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen and executive members Aber (Ike) Annis and Jack Oswald.

Tri-Club Deal Involves 5 Players

MILWAUKEE (AP)—A three-club deal involving three front-line pitchers and two infielders was completed Thursday night by Milwaukee Braves, Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox.

Juan Pizarro and Joey Jay of Cincinnati Reds for infielder Roy McMillan and a minor league player to be named later.

The Reds kept Jay and dickered Pizarro and Cal McLish for the White Sox in exchange for third baseman Gene Freese.

"We feel the White Sox lost the pennant last season mainly because of pitching," said president Bill Veeck in Chicago. "This move was calculated to improve that department."

McLish, 35, had a combined 35-16 won-lost record in 1958 and 1959 and 4-14 last season. Freese batted .273 for the Sox, including 17 homers and 79 runs-batted-in.

GENERAL MANAGER JOINS BRAVES

General Manager John McHale of the Braves, after negotiating by telephone with the Reds' general manager, Bill Dewitt, said he thinks the deal will give the Braves the best infield in the National League with Mc Millan at third, McMillan at short, Frank Bolling at second and Joe Adcock at first. Felix Mantilla will be a reserve infielder.

"The young pitchers—in addition to Warren Spahn, Lew Burdette and Bob Buhl—will have to come through for us," McHale said. "We are building to win the pennant in 1961."

Lefty Pizarro, who will be 34 in February, had a 6-7 won-lost record for the Braves last season and an earned run average of 4.54. Jay, a 25-year-old right-hander, had 9-8 and a 3.29.

McMillan, 30, batted .236, hit 10 homers and had 43 runs batted in.

The deadline for inter-league trades ends at midnight tonight.

PRINCE OF WALES

Edward of Caernarvon, son of Edward I of England, was created Prince of Wales Feb. 7, 1301.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies in a swap of pitchers Thursday sent Gene Conley to Boston Red Sox for Frank Sullivan, resolving a bitter player-manager dispute.

Conley, who plays for Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association during the winter, and Phillies manager Gene Mauch exchanged heated, words two days before the end of last season.

Angered by a poor relief job by Conley, Mauch is reported to have said to the pitcher:

"What, are you doing saving your best for (Red) Auerbach (Celtics coach)?

Conley is supposed to have replied: "I'll never pitch for you again."

However, Phillies' general manager John Quinn insists the deal was not made because of personalities. He said the trade was made because the Phillies coveted Sullivan, a right hander who won six and lost 16 for the Red Sox a year ago.

Conley won 12 and lost seven in 1959, and last year compiled an 8-14 mark with the last place Phillies. Sullivan, who broke into the majors with the Red Sox in 1955, split even his first year and had a winning record every year until 1959. His best years were 1955 and 1956 when he won 18 and 14 games. Each is 30-years old.

SOUTH SHIELDS, England (CP) — Fireman Jim Stirling walked home after finishing duty in this Durham town—and arrived to find his home burned down and his wife being carried to an ambulance by colleagues who relieved him.

Italian Cup Team Is Confident

SYDNEY (AP)—Italy's Davis Cup tennis team arrived here today for the challenge round Dec. 26 to 30, relaxed and brimming with confidence.

"I think we will be more relaxed and in a better frame of mind against the Australians than we were against Americans," said Jaroslav Drobny, former Wimbledon champion who coaches the Italian squad.

"Against the Americans the boys knew they had a chance and were under some pressure. Against the Australians, the best players in the world, they know they are expected to lose and can go all out without any worry."

REPORTS DENIED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Reports that Winnipeg Warriors and Victoria Cougars are considering withdrawing from the Western Hockey League were disclaimed here Thursday by league president Al Leader. I've heard nothing to this effect from either club and I'm sure I would have been contacted if any team was thinking of withdrawing," said Leader.

Tobe's Nose Honest Joe's In Major 'A'

Honest Joe likes to pick up change but he narrowly missed his second "quarter" when Tobe's won the second "fourth" of the Major "A" Bowling League schedule last night.

Honest Joe took the first one.

Tobe's nosed out "Joe's" by a single point, scoring 25 against 24. Then followed Wilkinson Motors 36, Moore's Chislers 30, Stewart's Shell 22, Station Street Marksmen 18, Belle Cleaners 17, and McEvoy's Caterers 10.

The scores were: Tobe's Pizza-Burgers (1) 3620, Honest Joe's (3) 3472; Moore's Chislers (5) 3363, McEvoy's Caterers (2) 3086; Stewart's Shell (3) 3331, Belle Cleaners (2) 3206; Wilkinson Motors Ltd. (4) 3281, Station Street Marksmen (3) 3404.

Soo Defeats Kingston 7-2

BARRIE SIDE, MARIE (CP) — Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds extended their second-place margin in the Eastern Professional Hockey League to three points over Kingston by defeating the Frontenac 7-2 Thursday night.

The Frontenacs were poor on defence and T-Bird players repeatedly broke through for goals.

Gerry Doherty played his best home game of the season in goal for the Thunderbirds, stopping 34 shots.

Kingston forwards peppered Doherty and he played a flamboyant game making a number of flashy stops. Bob Wilson, Cliff Schmautz, Ed Kachur, Don Grosso, Milan Marcetta, Dusty Blair, and Fred Hills scored for the Soo.

Kingston marksmen were Randy Miller and Tom Williams. Manager-coach Wren Blair of the Frontenacs missed the game because of a death in the family and trainer Ron Cook took over the coaching duties.

A fight involving Hitts and George Gosselin broke out in the second period. The scrap was broken up quickly by referee Matt Pavelich and both players received fighting majors. There were 2,039 fans.

WARNED TO QUIT

WASHINGTON (AP)—Olympic weight champion Bill Nieder has been warned to quit the sport or risk permanent injury to his damaged knee. The Army Times said Thursday.

The injury is also forcing Nieder, a first lieutenant in the infantry, out of the army, the service publication said.

Nieder bettered all existing shotput records with a toss of 65 feet 10 inches on his way to the Olympic championship.

Paper Rips American Cup Team

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—The defeated United States Davis Cup team is still getting a ribbing in Australian newspapers in the form of tossing antics in the interzone finals against Italy last weekend.

A cartoon in the Sydney Mirror today shows a bespectacled American team captain defarking at an airport with four door individuals holding smashed rackets.

"Meet our 1961 team," the captain is telling a newspaper man. "Chuck, Hurl, Fling and Pelt."

British Boxing Board

Says Americans Set Up Own Titles

LONDON (AP) — The British Boxing Board of Control accused the United States National Boxing Association Thursday of trying to "set up their own world titles."

Teddy Waltham, secretary of the British board, attacked the American following their hesitation to Chic Calderwood, British lightheavyweight champion, to fight Erich Schoppner, Germany's European champion, in an "elimination tournament for the world title."

The NBA recently stripped Archie Moore of his world lightheavy crown because he failed to defend it within a stipulated time.

"We are not going to accept these arbitrary rulings of the NBA, who are there to say the title is vacant! Naturally we cannot agree to one of our own boxers taking part in an elimination tournament for a championship that is not vacant," Waltham said.

The boxing chiefs also were upset because the letter was sent direct to Calderwood. The British champion passed the letter on to the board—and that was the first they knew about any elimination tourney.

Western Hockey League

Wants Cut Of TV

VANCOUVER (CP) — Directors of the Western Hockey League have joined Winnipeg Warrior owner Jack Ferrin in his fight for television competition from the National Hockey League.

They expressed discontent over the league's affiliation agreement with the NHL at a meeting Monday Thursday and decided to approach the senior league with its grievances at the next WHL meeting.

"Our directors feel that territorial rights should include television compensation," said Al Leader, president of the WHL, after the meeting. "We have approached the NHL with this problem before and have had promises that the problem would be investigated. So far, nothing has been done."

He did not say what action the WHL planned to take if the NHL failed to find a solution.

WORRIED ABOUT CROWDS

Ferrin, worried about poor crowds at Winnipeg, has long protested about Saturday NHL TV coverage. And Leader said before Thursday's meeting the league directors feel the TV broadcasts into WHL territory hurt attendance.

Ferrin was reported earlier this week to be considering moving some Warrior home games to the Middlesex-St. Paul area if the poor home crowds continued.

Leader said the directors are quite concerned over the number of men drafted from Winnipeg last year" by the NHL.

He did not give any figures.

Jockey Rides Five Winners, Misses Sixth

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP)—Jockey Arthur Chambers, 31, will never forget Thursday, 13. It was the day he rode five winners and missed a sixth at Pimlico race track through disqualification.

Chambers, from Brooklyn, N.Y., won with Tomat (413-20), Macie (413.40), Brennerton (68.80); King Colton (812-20) and Last Slam ($3.60). He finished first with Sekuntala in the fifth but was placed second for interference.

Meet the Rams

Packers Shoot For Title

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Green Bay Packers Saturday shoot for the western title and then for the National Football League championship, boners they last captured in 1944.

They face the Yeargerot Los Angeles Rams here in a game that holds the key to a crowded picture in the division.

Halfback Paul Hornung and his Packer mates can take the division crown with a victory or a tie. A loss will throw the loop into playoffs involving Baltimore Colts, San Francisco 49ers and Detroit Lions. Philadelphia Eagles already own the eastern conference title.

The Packers have a record of seven victories and four defeats for 14 points, two more than the Colts, 49ers and Lions.

The Packers under coach Vince Lombardi, are favored by 10 points. The game will be televised by CBS starting at 4:35 p.m. EST.

BEAT 'BERS

Last week Hornung wrecked the Rams with a touchdown and two field goals as the Packers picked up a 13-0 victory.

The engagement is the only one on the league card Saturday. Five games are set for Sunday. In the western division, the Colts meet the 49ers at San Francisco and Detroit and Chicago Bears take on the Lions at Detroit.

In the eastern division, the Eagles go against the last-place Redskins at Washington, the second-spot Cleveland Browns meet the third-place Giants at New York and Pittsburgh Steelers play the Cardinals at St. Louis. The Cards and Steelers are deadlocked for fourth place.

Scots Sample Canadian Five-Pins

EAST KILBRIDE, Scotland (CP)—Canadian five-pin bowling came to Britain Thursday night with the opening of a £225,000 arena in entertainment - starved East Kilbride, one of Scotland's new post-war communities.

Some 2,000 invited guests spent the pins flying at the first night in the Olympia Bowl, a big blue and grey building housing a 24-lane alley and ballroom.

"This is a little bit of Canada," said Canadian publisher Roy Thomson, co - promoter of the new venture with a Toronto company.

Paul McLane, Canadian trade commissioner in Glasgow, was among the guests.

The Olympia Bowl, built in a record 15 weeks, is the first five-pin alley in Europe. It is expected to spark off a rivalry with 10 - pin bowling already established in four British cities. Until now the five-pin variety has largely been confined to Canadian military bases.

Injunction Stops Sale Of Ti-Cats

HAMILTON (CP)—Controller-elect Vic Copps Thursday was granted an injunction preventing sale of the Hamilton Tiger-Cat football club to a group of five citizens.

Copps applied for the injunction in company Judge J. S. Latchford. He commented: "I feel that the citizens of Hamilton should know more about the deal before the sale is consummated."

The prospective buyers, believed to have held a meeting following Copps' announcement, are said to include Jake Gaudaur, Tiger - Cats general manager; Alderman Ross Fischer; Frank Gibson, secretary of the Hamilton Football Club; Ralph Cooper, president of the Canadian Football League; and a fifth unidentified member.

The Tiger-Cats now are a community-owned club, only one in the Big Four League.

PRODUCTIVITY ACT

to cure the unemployment problem.

"Inadequate bits and pieces," said CCF Leader Argue in rostering government anti - unemployment plans.

The big Progressive Conserva- tive majority beat down by a vote of 104 to 32—Liberals and CCF combining as they have throughout the debate — an amendment sponsored by Mr. Martin. It would have inserted greater employment as an objective of the council.

ARGUES OUTPUT RELATES

Mr. Starr noted that the preamble specified this objective and argued in addition that greater employment would flow from increased productivity—or more output per man and machine.

Initially at least, countered J. W. Pickersgill (L—Bonavista-Twillingate), automation and growth of technology disrupt the labor structure, probably adding to unemployment.

Part of the productivity council's duty is — often unruly — emerged as a fit - for - tat encounter between Mr. Martin, veteran Liberal frontbencher, and Mr. Starr.

Despite Mr. Diefenbaker's promises to attack unemployment, Mr. Martin said, the government had waited too long and then dodged the issue.

The normal sort of taunting and raving one might expect from Mr. Martin, said Mr. Starr, it was a "tossed-up salad sort of verbiage"—something like a disappointed child at Christmas.

JEERS ATTITUDE

"He didn't get his little red wagon," jeered Mr. Starr, describing the Martin attitude as "negative, obstructionist and destructionist." Nothing was easier than this sort of approach.

The government is more preoccupied with the dressing than the patient's image, said Mr. Argue, challenged Mr. Diefenbaker to say what further measures the country would expect to tackle unemployment.

In each of the three years that the Conservatives had been in office, the unemployment situation had worsened.

The government defeated three amendments in the committee stage Thursday. One by Murdo Martin (CCF — Timmins) sought to enable the council to make recommendations to labor, industry and government. He said otherwise council's hands were tied. The amendment was defeated 30 to 29.

AS CLEAR AS CONFUDIATION

Mr. Martin and Arnold Peters (CCF — Timiskaming) said that not spelling out greater employment as a council objective in the bill's body was a clear repudiation of government avowals that unemployment would be licked.

As Mr. Martin waxed to his criticism, Douglas Fisher (CCF —Port Arthur) called out: "Demand an election."

Mr. Martin said that would be a successful way to determine what Canadians think of the government.

J. A. Hebel (L — Cochrane) said Mr. Diefenbaker will be known as the man who promised heaven and earth but couldn't even deliver earth.

2 Best-Known Saleswomen Leaving Television Scene

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—In a stash of corporate advertising policy, the faces of two of television's best-known saleswomen are missing from America scenes: Betty Furness and "Betty Crocker."

Actress Betty Furness recently retired top TV billing for selling refrigerators, rangers, and other equipment for Westinghouse. She was almost a TV landmark and during recent political conventions was almost as familiar a figure as the chairman of the gathering.

"Betty Crocker" is a fictitious name created by General Mills many years ago for a voice which sold its various food products. For the last 10 years, "Betty Crocker" was television and on radio has been Adelaide Hawley, a well - known broadcaster and commentator.

Although both companies have decided to dispense with their Betty's as television figures, Betty Furness continues in a consultative capacity with Westinghouse, Adelaide Hawley will continue to be the voice of Betty Crocker even if we never see her.

Mum's the Word

Meanwhile, both women, for the first time in years, are free to appear on other sponsors' work — commercials or otherwise. And both are expecting to run into some problems.

Miss Furness said that there has been some interest in her doing other commercials, but nothing definite.

"The reason for the resistance is that people who might like me feel that every time the audience sees me it's as if I were in hock to one sponsor."

Mr. Maloney, answering opposition criticism of export of unfinished minerals, said processing plants were costly, and though more was being done in Canada each year, the objective could not be reached until the country had population and ability to carry on the operations.

The minister said tax revenue derived directly by the province from mining was expected to reach $79,000,000 in 1961, compared with $14,250,000 for the year ending March 31, 1960.

About $150,000 of the estimated $1 million for an exhaustive geophysical survey by the provincial and federal governments of 35,000 square miles in the western part of Ontario south of Red Lake. Last year, 40,000 square miles were flown and mapped.

WILL HOLD PROBE

In answer to opposition questions Mr. Maloney said a complete investigation would be held into the Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines cave-in at Timmins Nov. 19 that trapped British miner Alan Rowe, 26, for 60 hours. Rowe died in a Toronto hospital Thursday night.

He added, however, that the mine used accepted materials and practised a proper safety measures.

Questioned about Elliot Lake, Mr. Maloney said the government would continue with a provision to build a penal institution for 250 prisoners, a large provincial park, and a new highway, from Elliot Lake to the Chapleau Highway.

POLITICALLY-MINDED

'Walk of Fame' Does Not Include Name of Chaplin

By BOB THOMAS

AT THE BELLE — Stewart Granger plays a man with a formidable reputation as a gunslinger in MGM's outdoor action drama, "Gun Glory". Rhonda Fleming co-stars in the CinemaScope and color film, tonight and Saturday at the Belle Theatre.

AT THE BELLE — Pat Crowley plays the young wife whose husband, Jeffrey Hunter, and children are menaced by a psychopathic killer in MGM's hot drama, "Key Witness", co-starring Susan Harrison. Key Witness is one of two features showing tonight and Saturday at the Belle Theatre.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This being the Christmas season, it is time to take a perspective view of a local civic project — the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

The town's property owners have wisely started a campaign to spruce up Hollywood Boulevard. Part of the plan consisted of ripping up the sidewalks and installing $1,250,000 worth of terrazzo walkways with the names of 1,500 famous stars imbedded in them.

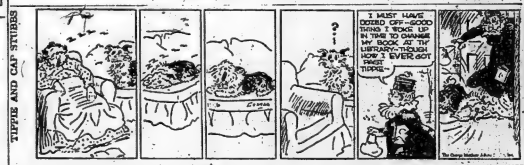
The Walk of Fame is chiefly noted for its exclusion of Charlie Chaplin. Though he was Hollywood's greatest star, the bunfeasman who compiled the list of stars disapproved of his politics. Hence he was not included.

We won't argue the Chaplin incident today. Let's look and wonder at some of the other selections.

NAME IN FOUR GROUPS

The beclouding has marred their choices in four categories: motion pictures, recording, radio and television. Note that only entertainers in the mechanical mediums of quality are now those old-fashioned people who entertain in the flesh.

Thus a star could be imbedded four times in the terrazzo and two are: Gene Autry and Tony Martin. The former is a logical choice for movies



Astrological Forecast

BY CARROLL RICHTER

Saturday, December 17

General tendencies: A wonderful Saturday for you to go directly after what you want by first finishing whatever has been left undone and then pitching in and formulating a fresh new start toward the goals that are vital to your advancement. Don't be afraid to speak your mind frankly. Then accept the co-operation, assistance offered to you. Expand.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — This is a day when many a new personality or idea can come into your mode of living that will be very helpful, so be prepared to accept and fit into the right category. Also a good day to carry through with more holiday shopping.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Be sure you get in touch with key people impossible to see during work week. Pay particular attention to good ideas concerning practical and financial affairs. Tonight is then fine for any romantic leanings.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — The ideal day to get together informally with partners and cement better relations. Also, brush up any misunderstandings with others. Have dinner at some place where the atmosphere is most charming and there is entertainment, too.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — If you get an early start, all those small chores can be gotten out of the way quickly and efficiently. Be sure about to be ideal order. Then invite guests in for the evening and make progress through sociability. Be charming with all.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — You can have a most enjoyable day and evening if you early forget to fret over petty things and forgive small grievances. Get together with loved one and plan your day. Then make this a most memorable day. Be kind, considerate.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — Your interests should be centred at home today and tonight. First see that everything is in ideal order, then invite guests in for a delightful time. Right planning of menus will bring excellent results. Expand

Libra. (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — This can be a most productive Saturday for you if you get an early start and are actively engaged. Be very co-operative and courteous with persons you associate with. Create.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)— The right day to look around and see what has to be done to real estate and other holdings so that they become more valuable. Then set up a more practical budget for the future. Get out and buy any gadgets that will make life easier.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — A day for thinking in terms of self mainly, how to be more charming, how to improve health etc. Later, be sure you go out and visit or meet individuals who can be most enjoyable and human, as well as helpful to you in your career.

Capricorn (Dec. 23 to Jan. 20) — Some wise spending today will result in a greater success than you have enjoyed in some time. However, do not confide in anyone or you may lose out. P. M. go out of your way to assist those who are truly in need. Be generous.

Aquarius (Jan 21 to Feb. 19) — The ideal day for the fun-and company - loving Aquarian to get into the midst of lots of activity and play. Be at your very best and do not be nervous. Tonight is then fine for having a party at home or going out to one. Be gay.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Since you are usually too busy during the week, this is the right day to attend to any civic affairs that are important. First set credit higher and handle any loose ends of regular job, then full speed ahead. P. M. have fun. Be alert.

If your child is born today ... be, or she, will be one of those interesting and intrepid souls with all sorts of far - reaching and far - seeing ideas. Important you give as fine an education as possible so that this unfettered mind can express itself fully. Stress foreign languages and also the classics for best results. Don't be afraid to have your progeny delve into New Thought, Modern Age subjects, in particular.

CHILDREN
— FOR ADOPTION

DAVID and CONNIE are waiting for their forever family. They are five and six years of age, healthy, attractive youngsters, in good health. There is a real bond between them and we promise their every protective of her younger sister. They are bright and quick to learn. They are average children of average intelligence. The agency which is looking for them feels that they would develop best in a home together, with and Connie need parents who can accept their racial background and enjoy them for the pleasant children they are.

Inquiries from interested couples interested in adopting these children should be made to

HAILE SELASSIE

Mengesha, his defence minister, in a broadcast over what seemed to be a clandestine radio station called Voice of the Lion of Judah" the former ruler of Ethiopia."

CLAIMS ERITREA CUT OFF

In this broadcast, heard in Aden, Gen. Mengesha claimed the leaders of Wednesday's coup were responsible for the cutting of the Ogaden railway.

Emperor Abebe Ethiopian ambassador-designate at Lagos, Nigeria, also claimed that Selassie survived, but in a broadcast Thursday night.

Defence Minister Mengesha nor the Ethiopian diplomat said where Selassie landed, and their reports were unclear. But Sunday's reports Thursday attributed to the Ethiopian Embassy in Rome proved false.

A dispatch from Fort Lamy, Chad, in central Africa, made it seem possible that the emperor had landed there. Later, however. The dispatch said Selassie landed at Fort Lamy Thursday night and continued his journey eastward, intending to land in Asmara, Eritrea, where he was loyal to him apparently are in control. There is a large air base there.

Cairo dispatches said radio communications with the Addis Ababa airport were suddenly cut today. Selassie landed briefly at Kabrieria Field in Liberia late Thursday on a flight from Brazil after cutting short a state visit to the South American country.

Gun battles raged in the narrow streets of Addis Ababe, the capital, Thursday and the Ethiopian radio said several persons were killed or wounded in an "inhuman massacre."

REPORT FIGHTING

Reports trickling through broadcasts and from foreign diplomats in Addis Ababa said there also had been hand-to-hand fighting in Asmara, capital of Eritrea and Harar.

The Ethiopian ambassador in Rome, Ferdi Charoni, said in Stockholm the revolutionary government was "non-Communist and neutral." He reported that Ethiopian Radio in Addis Ababa said word spread that the emperor was hurrying home.

The broadcast was reported by the Ethiopian Embassy in Rome. It said the insurgents hope loyal to the emperor outside the capital.

Gen. Abiye Abebe, governor of Eritrea, radioed the London Embassy that his province remained under control and loyal to the emperor.

He claimed the rebellion was confined to Addis Abeba and that an 8,000-man force, including a squadron of planes stationed at Asmara were ready to act on Selassie's orders. However, there is the site of an important airfield.

The London Embassy said troops in Harar city also remained loyal to the emperor.

REBELS DISPUTE CLAIMS

A rebel broadcast claimed, however, that blacks in Harar's military academy revolted and imprisoned their officers.

In Rome, Mengesha denied that a "few disloyal troops" of the emperor's bodyguard burned the Prince Asgs Wasan, the emperor's eldest son, to assume the throne. Mengesha said the revolt and broadcast claims that all the armed forces were supporting the coup.

He was "entirely unfair," asserted Mengesha's proclamation, adding:

"The army, air force and navy together are ready to destroy these criminals."

sequently described the generals as a "traitor."

PRINCE HELD KING

It not only proclaimed the 66-year-old crown prince the new king, but also named 38-year-old Ras Imeru, artistocratic cousin of the emperor and ambassador to the Soviet Union, as premier. Ma'Gen. Mengesha Bull also was named new army chief of staff.

"A group of bandits" initiated by Gen. Mengesha opposed the government, Addis Ababa radio stating for the new government.

A later bulletin said the two sides settled their differences and there was no fighting in the capital. People in Addis Ababe were warned, however, to keep off the streets.

The capital was under curfew and machine-guns were mounted on the roofs of the main government buildings. The emperor's rubber - stamp parliament was suspended.

British Ambassador Denis Wright described the fighting as "as far as moderate small arms and mortar fire."

TWO MEN SAVED

PORT COLBORNE (CP)—Two men were buried to their necks in crushed stone for an hour Thursday after a cargo cave-in which occurred as they stood on the load of ship. A hundred dockworkers and firemen dug out Gerald Sherk, 29, of Stevensville, Ont. and William Devezar, of Niagara Falls. They were not severely hurt.

ALAN ROSE

here by a Toronto newspaper, The Telegram.

For three weeks Rose hovered near death. An operation was performed Dec. 3 for a perforated ulcer. Another operation was performed three days later when his breathing was blocked by mucus gathering in his throat and chest.

In a desperate attempt to stem the poisons flooding his system, doctors amputated part of Rose's right leg a week ago. Rose failed to rally. Doctors said last weekend that the end was near.

A four-hour use of the artificial kidney Thursday severely taxed his strength. Later he rallied slightly—as he had time and again during his three weeks in hospital — but doctors said their case was hopeless unless his kidneys resumed their normal function.

As his condition gradually worsened the doctors placed Rose in an oxygen tent.

The constant internal bleeding required 130 pints of blood and 14 units of frozen blood plasma. Mrs. Rose kept a 24-hour-a-day vigil for long hours while her husband lay in the Toronto hospital. He was transferred there Nov. 22 from a Timmins hospital after the serious nature of his injuries was determined with the discovery of kidney complications.

Throughout his ordeal, Rose showed grit and good humor. During the rescue operation, when rescue teams came within earshot, he was constantly chatting and joking with them.

On the fateful Saturday, one hour before his shift was to end, Rose was working in the tunnel alongside McPhail. McPhail said there was just brief warning before the cave-in.

Rose ducked toward the rock face and was trapped. McPhail jumped the right way and scrambled help.

FRENCHED AIR HOSE

Rescuers decided to go in from another tunnel, with 16 feet of solid rock between them and the drift in which Rose was entombed. They set to work with diamond drills and pierced a tiny air hole.

They could hear Rose shouting as they drilled closer. They shouted back encouragement, and honeycombed the rock with holes.

When they finally broke through, Rose was still 300 feet away. The trapped man was separated from them by broken rock, gravel and timbers.

Timbering crews, described as the cream of the crop in their field, moved in. As miners cleared the rock and undamaged the mess of timbers, the timbering experts shored up the walls to prevent a further collapse. At 7 p.m. Monday they heard Rose shout: "I can see your lights."

An hour later rescuers passed him a thin plastic tube, through which he took his first nourishment in 54 hours. Talking to the trapped miner was easy now. At first he appeared in good shape, though pinned by timbers across his legs.

But it took another 25 hours to remove the timbers. As the rescuers worried, Rose was treated by doctors. One of the first questions he asked was "How long have I been down here?"

He shook his head with disbelief when he was told, then asked, "How long before you'll get me out?"

Shortly after 11 a.m. Tuesday he was freed. Rescuers and miners cheered as he was carried on a stretcher from the shaft. He didn't hear the cheers. He was unconscious. His long struggle for life in hospital had begun.

It ended Thursday night.

U.S. PLANE HITS MUNICH TRAM, 40 DIE

Rescue Army Digs Through Rubble For More Victims

Believed at Least 136 Killed in Collision

NEW YORK (AP) — A rescue army, working by freezing cold, doggedly dug through rubble on a Brooklyn block early today seeking still other possible victims of Friday's airliner collision that killed at least 136 persons. At Canadians were believed among the dead.

At the same time, federal agencies team up to try to find the cause of the worst United States commercial aviation disaster—when a jet plane exploded and crashed into a row of brownstone dwellings, setting a square block afire, and the propeller-driven craft fell in flames on Park Island.

The toll of non-passengers was put at nine as 125 firemen and 150 police men continued their search for victims.

Of 128 persons many holiday-bound—aboard the two planes, 77 were killed in the 4-year-old Stephen Baltz of Chicago. He remained in critical condition in Brooklyn hospital.

CANADIANS ABOARD

The Canadians were Beverley Ann Hamilton, an out-duty stewardess who was on the list of passengers on United Air Lines Jet, and Thomas D. Rapkin, son of Toronto paper producer Morris Rapkin. Thomas Rapkin, a Columbus, Ohio, radio station advertiser, was on the list of passengers aboard a Trans World Airlines constellation, the other plane involved.

Recording tapes and an automatic jet flight recorder may tell why the TWA Constellation and the United Airlines DC-8 jetliner ran into one another 5,000 feet over Staten Island.

The UAL DC-8, with 84 aboard from Detroit, Chicago, crashed on for 11 miles before crashing in the park slope section of Brooklyn. The TWA plane, with 44 aboard en route from Dayton to Idlewild, smashed into the flaming sections on Little Miller Army Air Field on Staten Island.

Part of the jet wreckage smashed into the Pilar of Fire Church. Rev. Thomas Chinn's study was destroyed and the caretaker was missing.

FIRST SUCH CRASH

It was the first time in aviation history that a pure jet with passengers aboard crashed in the U.S.

The Civil Aeronautics Board impounded the tapes and pilot re-

SENATE GIVEN SOLE AUTHORITY ON DIVORCE CASES

No Dissenters To Private Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — It took the Commons just 40 minutes Friday to push through a bill to rid itself of an ancient and unwanted task — passage of divorce petitions.

Without a dissenting voice, the Commons put through all stages the private bill of M. Douglas Marion (PC—Toronto Davenport) to give the Senate sole authority over divorce actions during the current session of Parliament.

The action was completely unexpected. Fewer than 40 of the 263 members were in the chamber.

Mr. Morton said passage of similar bills will be a regular event at the start of each session — until a new method of handling Quebec and Newfoundland divorce cases is finally worked out. Unless the British North America Act, the Commons cannot delegate its authority indefinitely to the Senate.

"I realize that this may not be the best way of dealing with the situation," Mr. Morton said. "BUT WE REALIZE IT.

"It would be better if the problem were handed over to a special committee. However, one must be realistic. This cannot be done at the present."

The Commons had far too many national problems to be a "rubber stamp" in divorce cases.

Under-Year Baby Fully Recovered From Operation

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's first under-2-year baby to survive a diagnosed heart attack is going home, for Christmas, thanks to a new operating technique devised by a team of astronomous surgeons.

Michael Rupcic, now six months old, entered the Hospital for Sick Children here in critical death's door, his body almost completely blue from struggling for breath.

Saturday he goes home to Oakville, 20 miles west of here.

"The best Christmas present," said his father, Joseph Rupcic, a Croatian who came to Canada from Slavonia 21 years ago.

Never before in this country, doctors said, has the record shown a youngster of his age to have a heart operation and then live on.

The names of the surgeons who operated on Michael are not being made public. The hospital says it was a team job among five surgeons and they would prefer to remain unidentified.

The mother of the boy is the former Barbara Ann Selebej of St. Catharines.

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: Cold weather will dominate all of Ontario this weekend.

Farmers Given Right to Sell Shares, Borrow

TORONTO (CP) — The Farmers' Allied Meat Producers Co-Operative Limited is given power today to establish offices and cold storage facilities at 16 operators within the statutory limitations for selling shares and borrowing money the Ontario Securities Commission has ruled

Attorney - General Roberts made the announcement in the legislature Friday, two weeks after the board issued an order prohibiting F.A.M.E. from raising money by debentures on the grounds they are not operating as a co-operative.

Mr. Roberts read a letter by O. E. Lennox, OSC commissioner, which said, "Nowhere in the decision is there a suggestion that the company should be denied the right established by statute to sell shares by way of public financing and borrow money without security from its shareholders by way of debt financing."

ISSUED STOP ORDER

The commission issued the stop order because F.A.M.E. was issuing unsecured debentures to the public. The company had insufficient assets to back the debentures.

The OSC said the sale of debentures was the only consideration in the case and that the company was free to offer shares within the terms of the Corporation Act.

The shares were raised by OCS Leader MacDonald who has supported the efforts of the Ontario Hog Producers Association to establish a $1,000,000 building and warehouse in the Toronto area.

The association plans to establish a chain of slaughter houses across the province.

TO BEGIN CITY HALL

TORONTO (CP) — Property Commissioner Harry Rogers Friday said the construction of Toronto's new city hall will begin about May 24.

Witnesses Tell of Widespread Horror, Mutilation in Crash

NEW YORK AP) — Brooklyn never looked more drab. The tenements, the brownstones, the faded red brick fronts merged in a grey-white blur. It was snowing again and people grumbled about the weather.

Coming so soon after Monday's blizzard, another snow seemed about the worst thing that could happen.

It wasn't.

Vincent Cristiano, 30, longshoreman, was having coffee in his kitchen.

"I saw the snow and I said to the wife, better keep the kids in again. And then I saw this plane and it was so low I could hit it with a snow ball. It was so close it vibrated the coffee pot right off the table.

"And then the plane was gone

Only Survivor of Collision, 11-Year-Old Boy, Tells Story

NEW YORK (AP) — A small red-haired boy, his body burned and broken, lies in critical condition in a Brooklyn hospital today. His "parents stand by in prayerful vigil.

The 11-year-old is the sole survivor of Friday's tragic airline collision.

"We're grateful to the Almighty for this miraculous thing," said the boy's father, William Baltz.

Doctors believe that the youth, Stephen Baltz, 11, has a good chance for recovery, despite serious burns; a broken left leg and the possibility he may have been injured internally by breathing flames.

For young Stephen the jet flight from Chicago had been his first airplane ride. His parents are flying to New York to join his mother and father on a holiday visit with relatives.

Stephen awakened Friday at 2:6 a.m. at his home in the Chicago suburb of Wilmette, Ill.

He ran in and shook his father awake. Baltz knew how excited his son was and how he was looking forward to the trip. The lad

Castro Calls Cardinal a Judas; Bank of Nova Scotia Nationalized

HAVANA (AP)—Fidel Castro today denounced Cuba's highest-ranking Roman Catholic prelate, Manuel Cardinal Arteaga, as a "Judas" and plunged deeper into the Russian economic orbit.

In an angry 3½-hour speech the prime minister carried his feud with the church to a new height by charging that the 87-year-old cardinal tolerated thievery by former dictator Fulgencio Batista and gave "the kiss of Judas to the bloody dictator."

The Catholic Church has openly come out against Communist inroads into Cuba.

Castro did not mention in his speech at a labor rally the signing Friday of a $168,000,000 commercial agreement with the Soviet Union. Details of the pact were not made known.

Officials in Havana hinted that the agreement is intended to help solve Cuba's sugar problem, critical now that U.S. markets are practically closed and a harvest estimated at 6,000,000 tons is approaching.

President Eisenhower Friday cut Cuba's sugar sales in the United States to zero for the first three months of 1961, citing as the reason continuing "deliberate hostility" by the Castro regime.

Castro completed nationalization of all banking in Cuba with the announcement that the government took control of the Bank of Nova Scotia, which operated in Cuba for 61 years. Bank officials said shareholders were paid in full.

HOUSE ADJOURNS ON HAPPY NOTE LATE FRIDAY

Weeks of Wrangling, Bitter Debate End

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario legislature adjourned on a happy note Friday after four weeks of wrangling, bitter debate and long sittings created by such issues as unemployment and municipal affairs.

From the Nov. 22 opening of the second session of the 26th legislature, members of the Progressive Conservative, Liberal and CCF parties waged a relentless battle over the merits or deficiencies of government policy outlines in the throne speech debate.

The speech indicated the government would reconstruct from the department of planning and development a new department of trade and development to help stimulate business, find markets for development of economics, provide more winter works jobs, and give more financial aid to municipalities.

The Conservatives said the throne speech illustrated the progressive attitude of the government; the opposition said the government was a case of too much and not enough.

But remarkable prevailed when Premier Frost adjourned the assembly ,which will reconvene Jan. 24 at 8 p.m. EST. Before Monday's merry Christmas adjournment, Lieutenant-Governor J. Keiller Mackay drew royal assent to 11 government measures and four private bills.

The important government bill concerned the rehabilitation of chronic drunks. It provides for compulsory or voluntary treatment at a reclamation centre instead of a jail sentence.

The Liberals and CCF flayed the government for not stepping in and exerting more control over unemployment. The latter also demanded the resignation of Municipal Affairs Minister Warren and Gordon Lawrence PC—

Productivity Council Bill Wins Approval

OTTAWA (CP)—Formation of a 25-member productivity council to study ways of improving efficiency was approved by the Commons today after a short but lively opposition barrage.

The bill, fourth piece of a government package introduced in lobb-making' tools, was approved by a vote of 107 to 41 on third reading with only two CCF members dissenting.

"If we cannot have a loaf or even half a loaf, we are not going to reject a crumb," declared J. W. Pickersgill (L—Bonavista-Twillingate) in explaining his party's reconciliation of its attacks on the measure and its vote for a bill he called a "dud."

CCF MPs Arnold Peters, Timiskaming, and Stanley Knowles, Winnipeg, maintained their decision on the matter of the bill by voting against it. They said it will have little impact on easing unemployment and there is in fact three more men out of jobs.

Haile Selassie Crushes Revolt, Exonerates Son From Any Blame

ASMARA (AP) — Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia prepared for a triumphal return to his capital of Addis Ababa today as the last lingering sparks of an ill-starred rebellion died and peered about to be stamped out.

The 68-year-old "Conquering Lion of Judah" reached this gaily decorated capital of Eritrea province Friday and received an uproarious welcome.

He exonerated his eldest son, 46-year-old Crown Prince Asfa Wassan, from blame for the revolutionary regime proclaimed in the capital Wednesday by rebels in the palace guard.

"The rebels tried to make the prince their decoy," Selassie said.

The prince, the empress, and other members of the royal family and leading Ethiopians loyal to the emperor were reported still being held prisoner in the imperial palace.

"The rebels' headquarters are there in the palace," the emperor said, but all members of the royal family were reported in good health.

The rebel still controlled the post and telegraph office. But Selassie's commanders said the army had regained control of the country.

The revolutionaries, using Crown Prince Wassan as their mouthpiece, declared Wednesday they were establishing a new government to promote a sweeping program of reforms to end 2,000 years of injustice."

Burning Plane Strikes Church, Falls Into Street

Crashes Into District Filled With Shoppers

MUNICH (Reuters)—A United States Air Force plane, carrying 13 students to Britain for the Christmas holidays with their parents, crashed into a church steeple in the centre of Munich today and toppled the steeple onto a crowded streetcar.

Police said about 30 persons aboard the streetcar were killed, but there were some survivors among the students and several members of the plane crew.

By police count 40 died early was at least 40.

The students were attending the Munich branch of the University of Maryland, which is under government contract to teach U.S. military personnel and their dependents in Germany.

SAW TRAM AFIRE

The streetcar driver, who survived the crash, said: "I first heard an explosion and a blinding flash. Then I looked around and saw the whole tram was aflame."

The heavily-laden plane limped into the busy downtown section of this Bavarian capital — which is crowded with Christmas shoppers — four minutes after taking off from Munich-Riem airport.

Flying at low altitude and already burning, it knocked off the church steeple.

Debris from the plane and the girder were scattered over a wide area.

Police were clearing nearby hospitals in an effort to get an idea of how many were killed or injured.

A doctor at the Munich Universal Surgical Clinic said he thought about 60 persons had been taken to various Munich hospitals, many of them critically injured.

A shoopmeer near the crash scene said:

"The jet plane came down like a wartime German dive bomber. It made a terrible screaming noise. We all dashed for shelter. Then came an explosion which threw us against the wall.

"We ran outside. There was a burning mass of plane and streetcar. It was a terrible mix-up."

The plane was on its way to its base at Northolt, England.

Widows were smashed and doors burst from their hinges by the plane's explosion.

The crash gutted St. Paul's Church steeple before crashing.

CHURCH LOADED TRAM

The church priest, Father Karl Froehlich, 54, said: "The terrible thing is the burning plane . . . shaved off the steeple and then plunged into a streetcar packed with shoppers."

The plane was also believed to have been carrying a group of American civilian students.

Police said the plane crashed into the streetcar in a street filled with Christmas shoppers.

The Munich's second plane crash upon a city in two days. The planes collided and fell on New York City Friday with a loss of 135 persons.

Police said at least five persons strolling through Munich's busy downtown area on this pre-Christmas Saturday were killed by flying debris.

Leftist Soldiers Flee Vientiane In Monks' Robes

VIENTIANE Reuters) — Warweary civilians and disguised leftist soldiers fled Vientiane today, leaving the shattered capital of Laos in the hands of the "liberation" forces of pro-American Premier Phoumi Nosavan.

United Nations officials and Chinese store-owners joined the exodus as sporadic fighting continued in the outskirts and fires blazed in parts of the city.

Right-wing army sources said the retreating soldiers were slipping out of the capital disguised in the orange robes of Buddhist monks.

The right-wing troops were reported still running into pockets of resistance in the Vientiane area, but made little of paratroop Capt. Kong Le's troops and the pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces were said to have withdrawn north of the city.

The leftists were reported retreating with their Soviet-supplied heavy artillery along a road leading toward the rightist-held royal capital of Luang Prabang.

PURCHASING AGENTS MEET AT KINGSTON

The Purchasing Agents' Association of Eastern Ontario met in the Lasalle Hotel in Kingston on Wednesday and took the form of a fellowship night. Approximately 45 members and guests attended, representing all centres as far down Batawa to Prescott, Ont.

A new member, Dennis Laundry, purchasing agent of Wilson Concrete Products Ltd., was introduced. A forum was conducted on current purchasing problems and procedures, the advisory panel consisting of five former presidents of the association. Following the panel discussion, the meeting concluded with a Christmas sing-song led by Al Evans of Stephens-Adamson Co.

The next meeting of the association will be held in Kingston in January and will be addressed by Mr. J. J. McKay, secretary-treasurer of the Quinte-St. Lawrence branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

THREE LOCAL MEN JOIN ENGINEERS

TORONTO — J. Johnstone of 125 Catherine Street, R. J. Morden of Hammerwood Drive, and J. M. Richardson of 1252 Pembroke Road all of Belleville have been admitted to the practice of the profession of engineering by the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario and now are accorded the rights to use the initial "P.". after their names in connection with any engineering work carried on.

At the present there are nearly 20,000 registered professional engineers in Ontario.

Mr. Johnstone is an engineer with Northern Electric Co. Ltd.

Mr. Morden is employed as a design engineer with Wallbridge Concrete Products Limited.

Mr. Richardson is employed as a development engineer with Stephens-Adamson.

FIREMEN CALLED FOR GRASS FIRE

A late season grass fire along the Canadian National Railways, on the 2nd concession of Sidney township brought out firemen shortly before midnight last night. The blaze was quickly extinguished before it had the opportunity of spreading and causing damage.

Firemen also answered a call to 8 North Park Street where a chesterfield was reported ablaze.

ATTENDANCE LIGHT DUE TO SEASON

Due to many of the members being engaged in the Christmas season rush the attendance at the meeting of the Lions Club on Thursday evening was not up to standard but those on hand enjoyed a talk by the Deputy District Governor, Jack Noble, His talk was on "Travelling Light." He was thanked by the president, Harvey Frid.

The members were requested to turn in their tickets not sold for the Christmas draw. The attendance mark for the year was announced at 80 per cent, which is an excellent showing for a service club.

NO ONE INJURED IN 2 - CAR CRASH

Property damage to two vehicles resulted late yesterday afternoon in a collision at the intersection of No. 2 highway, Dundas road and 401 highway west of Belleville.

Drivers of the two vehicles involved were Fred McCaw of Dwight, and Ronald Sinkins of Napanee. No one was injured.

VANDALS HAVING ANNUAL FUN

Youthful vandals are having their annual fun with outdoor Christmas tree lights and decorations.

Police say that in the majority of cases the lights are not stolen, merely taken from the outdoor Christmas trees and smashed on the sidewalk.

Younger Jews Need Spiritual Awakening Warns Rabbi Deutsch

"Our generation believes as if it were accustomed of spiritually helpless persons," Rabbi Morton H. Deutsch of the Sons of Jacob Synagogue here declared Friday night. "This is especially true of Canada and United States Jews," he added.

Comparing present-day Jews with their forefathers of several years ago he said that although the two groups have familiar challenges, the response of modern Jews falls far short of that of their forebears.

These observations were made in the course of a sermon dealing with Hannukah, or the Feast of the Maccabees, how being observed by Jews the world over. The Festival commemorates the victory by the Jews of the second century B.C. under the leadership of the Maccabees over the attempt by the Greek-Syrian King Antiochus to stamp out Judaism and to replace it with Greek idol worship.

Jewish resistance to the invasion was led by Judah the Maccabee by the aged Priest Mattathias. After his death the temple at Jerusalem which Antiochus had dedicated to the Greek Gods was now cleansed by the Maccabees and once more consecrated to the Hebrew God Jehovah.

WILL OBSERVE FESTIVAL

The Festival will be marked at the Synagogue each evening after noon with the traditional lighting of the Hannukah candles. A pageant and a play will be given at the Synagogue Religious School on Sunday by the Synagogue Sisterhood, and setting the events that took place in Judea 170 years before the birth of Christianity. Topping the day's program will be a dinner for all members and friends of the congregation with an address by Rabbi A. Bender of Kingston with Rabbi Deutscher will be the guests of honor.

Speaking on the subject "Anti-Semitism and Response — Then and Now," Rabbi Deutsch said that Canadian Jews today face a threat to their spiritual integrity which is as dangerous as that which the Maccabees of old faced.

"Our generation, however, has been surrendering position after position where the Maccabees stood and fought. Their response to the challenge was to throw back the challenge, then launch out on an attack of their own. The contemporary Jewish response, on the other hand, has been to retreat quietly and noiselessly."

NO HOSTILE INTERESTS

"One of the reasons for the wide dispersal of responses" he continued, "has been due to the fact that the challenge to Jewish existence has not posed by hostile forces, rather does it proceed from the Jew himself, from material strength!

"Indeed, many of us have come to the conclusion that the political freedom and the economic security opportunities which we have found in the new World for the survival of Jewish traditional values, indeed, Jewish identity with us have proved to be among the onslaughts of the tyrannical idol worshipping barbarian Anticus."

EMPEROR FLIES HOME

The attempted coup came while Haile was in Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, on a state visit. He hurried back to his luxuriously appointed airliner.

He chose to land in Asmara, capital of the former Italian colony of Eritrea, now an autonomous province federated with Ethiopia. The governor of the province is son-in-law, Gen. Abiye Abebe.

Meanwhile, Maj. - Gen. Merid had proclaimed himself the top army, air force and navy. A force of 2,000 men marched on Addis Ababa and retook the city.

After surrounding the capital, they launched an attack and renewed shelling broke out in the streets after earlier fighting on Thursday.

Unconfirmed reports received in Aden from radio amateurs in Ethiopia said more than 2,000 persons may have been killed.

Thieves Steal $400 Worth Of Merchandise

TRENTON — Night thieves staking possible interruption from traffic at a well travelled roadway, Thursday night Mrs. Mead Dudley Inio Harry's Furniture and Appliance Store on North Front street and escaped with a number of radios, a typewriter and camera.

Loss of merchandise, together with the damaged front door through which the thieves gained entry, was estimated at approximately $400.

The break-in is being investigated by Brighton provincial police.

Fine 6 Toronto Men for Hunting At Presqu'ile

BRIGHTON (Special) — Six Toronto and district men were fined $30 and costs in Brighton magistrate's court Thursday following conviction on charges of hunting in a restricted area. The men appeared before Magistrate R. E. Baxter.

The men were convicted of hunting in Presqu'ile Park. In their own defence the men claimed they had not seen any signs prohibiting hunting. Game department officials, however, said there were three large signs prohibiting hunting, one of them at the entrance.

The hunters were Peter McDowell, Willowdale; Ted Miller, Alex Pontan and Theodore Curtis of Toronto, and Robert Howard and Chalmers Wilson, of Stouffville.

Canadian Banking Operations End in Cuba After 61 Years

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian banking operations Friday came to an end in Cuba, ending financial ties of 61 years with the Caribbean island republic.

The Bank of Nova Scotia, following close on the heels of the Royal Bank of Canada, announced its with drawal and transfer of all the Cuban assets to the Banco Nacional de Cuba.

F. William Hicks, Bank of Nova Scotia president, said in a statement that "we have been able to conclude satisfactory arrangements for the transfer of our Cuban business . . . with full dollar repatriation of our shareholders' money."

The agreement of sale, signed in the Cuban capital of Havana Thursday, completed the nationalization of all Cuban banking by Premier Fidel Castro's government. The Royal Bank of Canada sold its assets to the central Bank Dec. 8, and Cuban and U.S. banks came under state control in September and October.

BEGAN IN 1906

The Bank of Nova Scotia began operations in Cuba in 1906 seven years after the Royal Bank began business there. It operated eight branches, four in Havana, and four in the provincial cities of Camaguey, Cienfuegos, Manzanillo and Santiago de Cuba. All but seven of the 226 bank employees were Cubans.

Under the terms of agreement, Cuba's National Bank assumed all assets and assumed all liabilities of the Canadian bank in Cuba. The Bank of Nova Scotia did not disclose the sale figure nor list its assets.

Mr. Hicks said "the agreement provides for an orderly transfer so that continuity of administration will be ensured."

He said that the bank initiated negotiations some time ago leading to the transfer, "understanding as we did the wish of the Cuban government to operate all major financial institutions, particularly commercial banks, as state owned institutions."

The bank's official statement said that at all times, operations were conducted on a strictly correct banking basis under the laws of the country, but "altogether without political affiliation or favor."

When the Royal Bank of Canada announced it was ceasing operations last week, a statement by the banks head office in Montreal said it was unable to operate satisfactorily because of nationalization laws and decrees. All letters of credit had to be classified through the Cuban central bank.

The Royal's Cuban assets were estimated at $10,000,000. Financial details of the settlement were not disclosed.

Lecture on Press Freedom Winds up Toronto Hearing

TORONTO (CP) — The Royal Commission on publications would up its Toronto sessions Friday with a blast from its chairman on the "plague" of people "coming here and pleading freedom of the press."

Gratian O'Leary admitted he was departing from the Commission commission's terms of reference in making the remarks, but pleaded the provocation of B. T. Richardson, editor of the Toronto Telegram.

In his submission Mr. Richardson suggested the commission enquiry is a danger to freedom of the press.

He accompanied his brief with reproductions of three Telegram editorials. The chairman of the commission was accused of conducting a "vendetta against Time magazine." Mr. O'Leary, a chairman, was described as "strewing quicksand on the path of freedom of the press."

"Absolute nonsense," said the commission chairman. "All that a newspaper man has are the freedoms guaranteed to every citizen."

CITIES NELTON

And at a personal brandon, Mr. O'Leary said the poet Milton cried out for one freedom above all—"to speak my mind according to my conscience."

"If there is a lesser statement in the English language, I have yet to hear it," commented the chairman, who is president of the Ottawa Journal.

"Freedom to speak treason? Freedom to utter public blasphemy? Freedom to claim in a crowded theatre and cry 'fire!'? I am not vehement because we have been plagued with people coming here and pleading freedom of the press."

He said he failed to see how any commission could help the plight of the Canadian periodical publisher. O'Leary implied on press freedom.

"We could tax advertisements as high as hangman's gallows and it would not affect freedom of the press."

DIDN'T SAY IT

Mr. Richardson replied that his brief didn't ask for special freedoms.

"I have been reading your editorials," replied the chairman.

"I agree with you," Mr. Richardson replied. "The full sequence has been building up in you for some time, and I am glad you published it."

"If you agree with us," said Mr. Richardson with a smile, "then God bless you, go in peace—and don't write any more of those editorials."

In his brief Mr. Richardson had recommended a tax add to Canada's periodical press as adjustment in postal rates, which he said would favor United States publishers shipping into Canada. Briefs from the Canadian Association of Printing Trades Unions and Hugh C. Gaines Publications Limited also suggested changes in postal rates.

Mr. Gaines and the MacLean brief was a recommendation that "any publication splitting advertising revenue in Canada as having 80 per cent of its circulation here be regarded as having at least 75 per cent original Canadian editorial content."

Yule Trees Main Offering

The market square today was a busy place as scores of farmers and others came to town loaded with Christmas trees. Ottawa prices were the same from one vendor to the next, with Scotch Pines being the most expensive at 40-45 cents a foot. Balsams generally ranged from 30 to 35 cents a foot.

One or two farmers set up stalls on the market square amid the evergreens, but most of them were indoors. However, those on the square were the old standbys with their wares in attractive tables at unchanged prices.

Inside the market building behind city hall, extra large eggs were offered at 48 cents a dozen, while all 43 cents. Turkeys were 85 cents a pound for dressed while chickens were 50 cents a pound and ducks close to 60 cents a pound.

Haile Selassie Came to Power 30 Years Ago by Revolution

By DAVID ROWNTREE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The apparently unsuccessful revolt in Ethiopia against Emperor Haile Selassie recalls his own assent to power 30 years ago in a palace revolution.

At that time Haile Selassie, then known as Ras (or Duke) Tafari, overthrew the Emperor Lij Yasu and kept him in chains until his death in 1935.

Since then, the little bearded monarch has been a key Allied ruler of a country that looks back on a history of independence of 400 years. The Amharas, the most important race in the region and one which Mussolini included in the thirties, trace their association with Christianity to the fourth century AD.

Already a nation state, landlocked Ethiopia was annexed to it in 1932) and lacking vast resources and wealth, Ethiopia was almost untouched by the great historical events of the last few hundred years.

FIRST VOTE IN 1957

Slavery was abolished only in 1924 and the country's first election was not held until 1957.

In the Africa of 1960, Haile Selassie is an anachronism. The continent's new breed of rulers have little time for an old man in a viceroy's cocked hat with an affection for lion cubs, expensive motor cars and grandchildren.

Outside Africa, the Negus Negusti or "King of Kings"as he is also known, is remembered with more affection as the spokesman for a helpless country overrun by Benito Mussolini's blackshirted Fascists. He appealed unsuccessfully to the dying League of Nations in these words:

"Apart from the Kingdom of the Lord, there is not on earth any nation superior to any other. God alone stands guard to see that the terrible precedent of bowing to force? It is international morality that is at stake."

The same conviction of international morality led the emperor to furnish troops to the United Nations operations in Korea and the Congo.

But in Africa today, freedom, social and economic equality are of greater concern than international morality.

Contact Club Sponsors Yuletide Party

The gaiety of the season was evident at the last meeting of 1960 for Christ Church Contact Club as members gathered for their Christmas party last Monday evening.

Following a film and games, under the direction of Shirley Sleeman, president Doris Stewart, thanked the girls for their support during 1960. She also introduced the new executive members for 1961.

Past president, Mary Fletcher presented Doris with a gift as a lasting reminder of being president of Contact Club.

A delightful buffet luncheon was enjoyed by all and was followed by distribution of gifts from the pretty Christmas tree by the girls wearing red dresses.

Guests for the evening were Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Smilie and Mrs. Smith and the Rev. H. Massiah.

President Doris expressed thanks to June Woodley, secretary, on behalf of all present, for a most successful party.

BRANTFORD (CP) — Liberal Leader Pearson will be guest speaker at the annual meeting and social and economic affairs of greater concern than international morality.

Franck Lodge of Frankford Dedicates $60,000 Temple, Celebrates 100th Anniversary

FRANKFORD (Staff) — Yesterday evening a century of Free Masonry was celebrated by the members of Franck Lodge No. 127 AF and AM. The ceremonies, which were attended by well over 200 Masons from the immediate and surrounding districts, were held in the new temple of the lodge, the dedication of which was also effected following the anniversary banquet.

The sparkling new building, valued at $60,000, is the result of three years of toil and faith by the local Masons whose building fund had but $300 in it back in 1957. The modern design of the building, which includes a capacious hall or auditorium besides the lodge meeting room, has been executed in very good taste and the ancient furnishings of the temple are not at all out of harmony in their new surroundings with such features as full carpeting and indirect lighting.

The building certainly is an attractive addition to the village's features. Once the landscaping and final finishing touches have been made to the structure's exterior, there will be very much fault it.

On hand for the occasion was the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario, Clarence McLeod Pitts, who noted in his remarks during the toastmaster's address at the banquet that the local Masons had truly fulfilled one of the objectives of Free Masonry, within its community: to provide a proper and beautiful temple which would be a credit to the community as well as to the lodge.

FITEST OCCASION

The Grand Master, whose visit marked the first such occasion on the part of a Mason of this rank to the Franck Lodge in its 100 years, addressed the Masons present not to forget that it was also their duty to take an active and creative part in community life since it was only by the above two signs that others could judge the true quality of Masonry.

He emphasized that the great value of Masonry is its spiritual impact on its members and noted that although the meetings and rites of the Masons were secret to them alone, this spirit of secrecy could be transferred to others in their community through good works and good leadership.

Participating in the ceremonies were the District Deputy Grand Master of Prince Edward District, Harold D. Haggerty of Franck Lodge, and the Worshipful Master of Franck Lodge, Harold Rowe. The banquet program was handled by Toastmaster Karl S. Austin.

Others taking part in the dinner proceedings were W. Bro. E. Hobson, W. Bro. S. Martin, Bro. E. Loucks, W. Bro. Charles Fair, R. W. Bro. Everett Wood, Master Mortlock and Bruce Caughey.

A number of distinguished guests were present, including W. A. Goodfellow, Ontario Minister of Agriculture; Ben Thompson, M.P. for Northumberland; Ian Grills, M.P., for Hastings South and Elmer "Sandy" Sandercock, M.L.A. for Hastings West.

Civil Servants Get Three Days

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Christmas and New Year's Day fall on Sunday this season but most Canadians will still enjoy an extra-long weekend.

Several civil servants will get three days for both Christmas and the New Year — Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Dec. 24-26 and Dec. 31 - Jan. 2—while employees in most of the 10 provincial governments will be off duty a total of seven days.

December 26 and Jan. 2 are not Canadian statutory holidays.

A cross-country survey by The Canadian Press showed, however, that in most cases provinces or municipalities have decided to proclaim these days holidays.

Banks across the country will also be closed on the Mondays following Christmas and New Year.

Ontario provincial employees will have two 3½ day weekends.

The Magazine Controversy

One very important part of a country's culture is its literature. This may take a number of forms other than the classic and time-honored novels and poetry by which earlier and other nations are known. Literature also involves our country's magazines, periodicals and newspapers.

Of late a number of Canadian publications have either ceased publishing or altered their format in order to keep the attention of the Canadian public. Foreign publications have grown considerably in distribution, some even finding it worthwhile to produce a "Canadian" edition. The latter move has been a profitable one as the publications concerned have drawn much in the way of advertising revenue from Canadian advertisers.

Currently a Royal Commission is investigating the situation with a view towards the protection of Canadian publications from the competition of foreign publications, mostly American, have made on a magazine's lifeblood—the advertising dollar. There is some fear, completely justifiable, that if the current trend continues Canadians will be left without any representation of this form of literature at all.

There has been some loose talk of banning foreign publications. This suggestion is absurd inasmuch as it is an immediate offence against the right of the individual to select his own reading material or magazine.

A much more efficient and calculated to uphold the above right would be an act by the government forbidding: a) the import of any publication which carries advertising by a Canadian firm that does not have a plant or retail organization in the country of the magazine's origin; b) or the distribution within Canada of any locally printed magazine whose editorial content is either directed or derived from a foreign publication of a similar nature or format.

This would serve to stop our advertisers from supporting foreign publishing houses in their efforts to sell goods to Canadians but would not curtail a Canadian firm's efforts to sell its products to another country to the citizens and consumers of that nation.

Provision could also be made that imported publications would only be allowed in Canada on the basis that in the case of advertising appearing within their covers involving a Canadian firm or a Canadian subsidiary of a parent firm abroad, the Canadian address of that firm or its representative must not appear.

Such a move would, possibly, greatly enhance the field at home for Canadian publications whose editorial content is worthy of attracting the favor of Canadian readers.

Too Early To Boast

A Canadian Press report on the reaction of United Nations diplomats to racial discrimination within the U.S. contained an interesting quotation ascribed to "Ghanaian and Nigerian diplomats". This situation there cannot be compared with Ghana and Nigeria where there is no discrimination at all."

That sounds a little smug and perhaps Africans and Asians, too, might do well to consider the possibility that this boast may not always be open to them.

Newly independent Ghana and Nigeria are predominantly Negro countries. It would be surprising if there were discrimination within their borders against the ruling race, although in Nigeria's case selfrule has come so recently worn that perhaps that remark was intended as a compliment to the former white rulers, the British.

What is not at all certain is that these Negro lands will be successful in keeping themselves free of the taint of racial discrimination in the years ahead. There are already distinct signs of racial discrimination in the Congo—by the Negroes against white people. The disease may spread.

Negroes will certainly be able to plead that there is some justification for such a policy on the basis of extreme provocation in other lands—but this is a weak plea.

If Ghana and Nigeria can say, a decade from now, that there is no racial discrimination within their borders, then they will have solid reason for pride.

THE FRUIT TELL THE STORY

What are the marks of a true Christian?

One of the greatest leaders of Christian thought today was the unwearied six marks of a Christian. These are, Loyalty, Courage, Patience, Humility, Freedom, and Generosity. Certainly one more should be added, sanctity. Paul did. When we encounter a person having the six marks of Paul we know that he is a good man. When we encounter a person having the seventh mark (Faith) we know that he is a religious man.

Loyalty is fidelity in the face of opposition. Courage is doing right without regard to the matter how frightened we may be. Patience is not only endurance but is endurance for something truly worthwhile. Humility is the bowing of mind and soul before God's wisdom and purpose. Freedom is the opportunity to grow, the chance to be the best we can, becoming generally broad, loving under compassion toward all men.

Every one of these qualities can make us narrow, bigoted, or superficial if we allow them to be such. They must be nourished and sustained by an open mind and heart, new truth and an open heart toward the truth and people.

Religion is intensely practical. Every-lower religion is not religion at all. It is theory, and cheap theory at that.

An Atomic Bomb

BY HON. ROBERT W. MACAULAY
Ontario Minister of Energy Resources

ARTICLE 2

Once Einstein produced his theory of the equivalence of mass and energy, the possibility of an atomic bomb was no longer theoretical.

The first atomic bomb was exploded in New Mexico, USA, in the month of July 1945.

The first atomic bomb to be used in wartime was exploded in Japan over Hiroshima in August 1945. Within a few days the Japanese sued for peace.

The first atomic bomb was exploded the world has come to face an even more powerful weapon, the hydrogen bomb. The atomic bomb was equal to 20,000 tons of TNT. The present hydrogen bombs are equal to 10,000,000 tons of TNT at present.

The purpose of this article is to describe in a general way how an atomic bomb operates and why it does so much damage. In the next article we shall discuss the hydrogen bomb in the same way.

What is an atomic bomb?

It is an explosion, equal in magnitude to the explosion of 20,000 tons or more of TNT.

The atomic bomb obtains its explosion from something that is found in the uranium of which it is composed.

Atomic bombs are made of either uranium 235 or plutonium.

Uranium is a natural element which exists in the ground in large quantities in Ontario. It is found mixed in with great proportions of other minerals and minerals. The trick is to crush the rock until it is well subdivided and to extract the uranium.

LOOKS LIKE LEAD

Uranium has been done the uranium is then in a powder form, and contains oxygen. This powder is removed then from the powder form and we are left with a uranium metal which looks like the lead in your pencil but is harder and heavier.

The uranium atom is excellent for making bombs because it is very big and heavy. It is also fairly easily and made to fly apart and when it does so energy is released.

The uranium atom has three best parts. Two of these basic parts are called protons and neutrons. They are contained in the heart or nucleus in the centre of the atom. The heart are circling what are called electrons.

If the heart of an atom was enlarged to the size of a golf ball, the nearest electron would be about a mile away. The nucleus is thus like a grain of sand in the centre of a large inflated beach ball.

If the nucleus of a U235 atom is struck by a neutron it breaks into two new atoms which are no longer uranium. In the process of breaking it also releases two or two parts heat is given off as well as a powerful radiation. Also three or so neutrons are ejected which are travelling at very fast speeds thus called "fast neutrons"). The two newly-created atoms are also ejected from the metal, banging into other atoms, creating more heat.

In this way, by splitting a U235 nucleus, heat and radiation results. But the heat and radiation from one little atom is next to nothing. It would take the heat of two billions of U235 atoms fission all together. If that can be done you will have an atomic bomb.

CHAIN REACTION

Going back to our example, you will recall that when an atom of U235 sends out two or three neutrons, these neutrons fly out at great speed and if one hits the nucleus of another atom it will fission it and two or three more neutrons are released in this way a chain reaction can take place and in a fraction of a second billions upon billions one nucleus can, by chain reaction, cause billions upon billions of U235 atoms.

Thus, the object is to create a reaction that goes off, one after another, but so fast, that it is almost instantaneous.

This will occur naturally with U235 but only when a long slug of the uranium is pure U235. The right amount of pure uranium will of itself explode—it will just explodes itself. An atom bomb is created by properly fruit in size of pure U235 in two halves. If the halves are slammed together, they will weld it is called a "critical mass" and it will by itself explode, as an atomic bomb. Thus, there is a practical limit to the size of atomic bombs.

So, if we build a casing and at one end put a number of pounds of pure U235 and at the other end put the same thing and then some way of shooting the one off into the other, so that we end up with the right amount of pounds of pure U235, the atomic bomb will explode at the end.

The bomb can be dropped from a plane, or it can form the nose of a rocket, and with an internal timing device, which can be set for any height. The explosion will start by itself and the bomb will explode at the desired height or depth.

From the bomb come temperatures of well over 1,000,000 degrees and there are powerful shock waves. There is not just blast and heat but also great quantities of radioactive ash which may hang around for years and destroy not only the victim nation, but also the attacker if he tries to occupy the subjugated land.

All atomic bombs in this sense are "dirty" that is, they create debris, which for years may give off dangerous radiation.

Within a millionth of a second the chain reaction goes through a large part of the mass of uranium raising its temperature to millions of degrees which stage the mass starts to blow apart. As the mass flies apart, it is no longer a critical size, so the reaction stops. This is really low efficiency, the trick is to get complete reaction before the mass begins to fly. This is really low efficiency, the trick is to get complete reaction before the mass begins to fly apart. This trick is done by surrounding the bomb by using a shield around the bomb which reflects the escaping fast neutrons back into the mass for greater efficiency. The shield (b) to hold the mass together a few fractions of a second longer. It is critical longer.

MEASURE OF EFFECTIVENESS

The two parts of uranium that are fired at each other are critical, that is, when they combine they are super-critical and produce a bomb the size of a grapefruit that destroys in the age of 20,000 to 50,000 tons of TNT.

Even at that, most of the energy of the atom bomb has been wasted and is unconserved.

It is more than likely with the new method of the mass to uranium (the centrifuge process mentioned in one of the articles discuss) that any country will be able to build a bomb as powerful as the bomb dropped on Hiroshima.

Very quickly now may go beyond the point of no return.

In the next article we shall discuss hydrogen bombs and their effects on earth with the following article entitled "The Bigger and Better Bomb Fell on Hiroshima".

Bigger Loaf Brings Fine

St. Thomas Times-Journal

Bakers bake loaves of various shapes and sizes, reports Winchester, England, there is a "bigger loaf" and a "smaller loaf." He has to register it with the authorities as such — a 1lb one or 2lb.

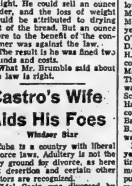
Eyeing his craftsmanship one day, he found it had taken one ounce to 1lb it would make 2lb loaves and a penalty would accordingly he changed the shape by adding one more chop to it.

The authorities pounced on him. They said he was under weight. He could sell an ounce short and the extra ounce would be attributed to drying out of the bread. But an ounce more to the 2lb in the cold summer was against the law.

The result was a fine of two pounds and costs.

The baker grumble said about the law is right.

Castro's Wife Aids His Foes



Windsor Star

Cuba is a country with liberal divorce laws, Adultery is not the only grounds for divorce, but desertion and certain other grounds are recognized.

Fidel Castro was divorced by his wife in Cuba and has taken to the hills in his revolution. She was, curiously enough, the daughter of the late colleague of Fulgencio Batista, the current dictator against whom Castro is trying to overthrow.

She obtained divorce on the grounds of desertion. After her divorce she married a brotherin-law of Batista, namely the brother of his wife. And the former Mrs. Castro's brother is a leader in the White Rose Society, an anti-Castro movement.

It is a strange example of how personal lives can get involved in political lives. There is very much the bitterness involved in the revolution that has contributed to Castro's bitterness in public life.

50 YEARS AGO

December 17th, 1910

The annual Christmas program of the Ontario School for the Deaf was presented with great beauty and—reverence last evening by senior pupils of the school in the auditorium, before an appreciative audience of Belleville and Trenton residents.

The entertainment was wholly in keeping with the season of Christmas being the Nativity Pageant. The lighting effects, the costumes, the devout attitude of the children taking part and the staging of the beautiful carols, made the program one of deep and touching significance, bringing to mind the real spirit and the meaning of Christmas.

Two little girls, dressed in white robes, were accompanied by a lantern bearer, representing Christmas waiting on the stage before the opening of the pageant. The girls sang carols, kneeling at the manger in perfect style; this was possible though the fact that both these singers once had their speech before losing their hearing and were then able to sing on key.

The 10c-size doll, so kindly donated by Miss Annabel Conger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Pegler, to the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. netted $118.20 to the Chapter from the sale of tickets on a draw. The entire proceeds realized from the sale of tickets will be used for the purchase of much needed clothing for unfortunate children in the needed areas of Great Britain.

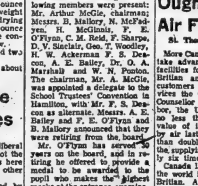
Handled This Yankee Style

Buffalo Evening News

A Russian shoemaker with synthetic instincts put in a regular daytime stint in a machine tool plant and operated his own factory by the light of a kerosene lamp at night. With the help of relatives, he made boots which he bootlegged on the black market at fifty rubles until the authorities caught up with him recently. In the eyes of the Soviet prosecutor, he is a criminal, who violated the laws of the state. But the Supreme Courts must have been reading up on what we had thought was the principle of American jurisprudence — he's being charged with tax evasion.



Ought to Use Air Freight

St. Thomas Times-Journal

More Canadian exporters should take advantage of the excellent facilities for shipment by air to Britain and Europe, Canada's customers specify service, advises the Canadian Commercial Counsellor in London, our neighbor, the United States, shipped no less than 7.4 per cent of the value of its exports to Britain by air in 1959. That is more than double the average of all the supplying countries and nearly six times that of Canada.

Britain has large parts of the world in using air freight to Britain. Air shipments of our goods to that country rose in 1959 on the average, amounted value to 2 per cent of our total exports to the United Kingdom.

That may be good advice to the air lines, but it will not be much help to Canada and British freighters. It would also hit the St. Lawrence waterway.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

GARDENERS SNEEZE AND WEAR IN MIND THEIR ALLERGIES IN PLANNING FOR SPRING

"Dear Dr. Molner: Whenever I work in the garden, my eyes get bloodshot and I sneeze a lot. Does this mean I have hay fever? I don't see any ragweed. They bloom alot on the white of my eye. Will it go away? — S. T."

The basic question here is one which is asked by many people because there are millions of people who enjoy gardening, and a good percentage of these are those that at certain times of year they sneeze, itch, develop a runny nose.

Why? Because some people are not a lot but some, are sensitive to certain things in the garden, fertilizer, as an example.

This is no reason to give up gardening. Fresh air, exercise, enjoyment of nature and relaxe from tensions of civilization are all part of healthful bedening.

But let's face it: There aren't any "perfect" environments which are totally free of allergy for everybody. Some people are humas cosmetics, girdles, jewelry, soap, hairdos, perfumes, certain febrile—somebody is allergic to almost anything. Third is your question, "Sometimes I turned out to be allergic to the white of my eye."

Sneezes are one allergic reaction, and I am guessing this only a hunched of different people by pollen, plants, fertilizer, dust, etc. Hay fever is simply allergy to the pollen of weeds and grasses, and there are several varieties of it. Ragweed is the commonest villain, but there are several others which can cause distress in some people.

Grass fever affects a noticeable number of people. There are some mild athletes as well as the lawn is growing fast in the spring, and it is time for cutting. Anything from chrysanthemums to ragweed can cause some trouble for others.

To take K. T.'s trouble, it could be any of a number of things relating to gardening. A careful skin test by your physician or allergy may will indicate what to avoid to prevent it.

As to the bloodshot eye, it is not unusual for a fit of sneezes to cause a small blood vessel to break in the "white of the eye," but the small leakage of blood which amounts to a drop or fraction of a drop, usually absorbs readily. If not, your physician will take care of it.

Readers who notice sneezing rash, itch or other allergic signs when they are gardening, will do well to try to counteract them with the blooming of certain plants. Also, if you are sure that you're an ardent gardener, you've been planning ahead until now for the spring. Give a little thought to seeking the cause of allergies, if you have them.

"Dear. Dr. Molner: My son, aged 11, has a form of varicose veins in the scrotum. It is very unsightly. Is there any medical advise as to whether it needs treatment or may be ignored. — A. R."

At age 11, I think varicocele might well be treated. It is a decrease in size or starts causing any symptoms, surgery might be considered. The situation, on the other hand, may recede as he grows older. That's why it may be wished for a time, under circumstances dictate surgery.

Note to Mr. S. H. — Edema means a swelling from an accumulation of fluid in the tissues. Causes are very interesting on where it occurs. In the case of edema of the eye, it might be a matter of allergy, called an eye-sensitive edema.

Just Where Is Space?

St. John Telegraph-Journal

People are inclined to talk about "outer space" when it is space and what is known about it.

One who made a few inquiries about this thing called space tried to define its limits by saying that "it starts where the atmosphere ends," and nobody knows where that is except that it's about 1,000 miles up." Instead of calling it "outer space" perhaps it would be "away from the earth."

The atmosphere is what is commonly referred to as "air." It is an invisible and elastic envelope of gaseous matter surrounding the earth and in many ways is like a huge ocean of air, material, life, human and other. Any object leaving the earth will find that it encounters things outside. The point where it has done so is called the "edge of space" which can cause distress in some people.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

EFFORT

William James once wrote an essay on Habit. To me it is one of the greatest essays ever written in its clear, inspiring flavor. I first read it in my College textbook as part of his book on psychology. It may now be published separately and is a little book that should be read by everybody and owned or at least mostly by every young man or woman.

Habit is what we are.

But back of all habit must come effort. Without effort the other words effort must be spent. James says in the beginning of his book "keep the faculty of effort alive in you by a little gratuitous exercise every day."

Another inspiring sentence is this: "Let no youth have any anxiety about the upshot of his education, whatever the line may be. If he keep faithfully busy each hour of the working day, he may safely leave the final result to itself. He can with perfect certainty count on waking up some of the morning outfitted with one of the competent ones of his generation, in whatever pursuit he may have singled out."

Many of our efforts go unspecified. Most of us feel that we do goes unnoticed. But it is the accumulation of all day by effort that finally brings out the task that the world is compelled to notice.

The hero has to give place very often to the man who did the best efforts that we make. We have to keep improving on the best we do — for that too must pass and be forgotten.

Habit is action and a medium amount of contentment come to us by making our best each day and making the best better than it was before.

The greatest credit is due the one who makes the greatest effort

THE PACKSACK
BY GREGORY CLARK

A reader in Saskatchewan asks the Packsack a very acute question.

"As I remember my childhood days," he says, "the best times were the unquestioned heads of the house. They knew the answers to us; but I can't recollect anyone on our street or in our town who would dream of asking questions who had the master hand at all times. It was as natural a relationship as that between teacher and pupil.

"Incidentally, there were no herd laws in those days. Cattle ran at large, chickens went to roost or lay an egg, and only to roost or lay an egg, and the Packsack a very acute question.

"Nowadays, livestock in under strict control. Even in the city precincts on leash. But today the children are the ones who are the heads of parents is that of the cow owner or chicken owner or former times who, to all complaints of the neighbors, replied: Well, what can you expect?

"I ask you, Packsack, what is the world coming to — or should I say, where is it coming from?"

I'm very much in it, if we know that we are coming from, we might have a better idea of where we are going.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

SPECIALIZED BIRDS
By WINIFRED WILSON

Everybody admits that birds are wonderfully made. Small skeleton, covered with very little flesh and some pretty feathers, these tiny bits of life are unbelievably hardy. When we think of the cold they can withstand, the migrations they make, and the length of time they can survive, we are amazed. But certain birds are specially equipped for one particular function.

That champion long-distance migrant, the golden plover, is noted for power of endurance. Breeding from our arctic islands to the southern limit of the tundra, it winters on the plains of South America, from Bolivia to eastern Argentina. The entire 2,400 miles from Nova Scotia to South America may weather permitting, be accomplished without pause, the flocks passing Bermuda, sometimes even the Antilles. What a endurance! The majority of birds fly either by day or by night, resting between flights, but the golden plover keeps straight on. In bad weather a few short stops may be made. Flocks have been seen swimming or floating on the waves of the ocean.

SURVEY IS SUPERVISED

As for speed when the customary, regular pace is considered, the swift with its torpedo-shaped body should be given first prize. The name indicates this. Timed with a stop-watch, it flies and feeds simultaneously at anywhere from 70 to far more than 100 miles an hour. But that is not saying that it arrives at its destination more quickly than other birds. It does not travel in a straight line, but follows the swarms of flying insects. However, this eliminates the necessity of stopping to find food.

Speed may be greatly accelerated by a short spurt when avoiding the enemy, chasing prey, or bringing food to hungry nestlings. Its power of attack is tremendous. This the late Mr. Herbert Hall of the Montreal Branch of the Province of Quebec Society for the Protection of Birds discovered when he climbed out on the ledge of the 20th storey of the Sun Life Building to photograph the young falcons. The mother was nowhere in sight — then suddenly he was struck on the head by her talons, and she soared off carrying his hat.

When control is considered, the 3½ inch ruby-throated hummingbird takes first place. The breastbone, enormous for the owner's size, provides machinery for the wings capable of making more avian helicopter can move. For when there is no column of air than 75 strokes a second. Our wing or, backward, and hover under the wings to assist.

Women's Activities

DESERONTO UNITED W.M.S.

The Christmas meeting of the W.M.S. was held in the parsonage, Mrs. Savage being the hostess.

The devotional is charge of group three was taken by Mrs. Jack Shea. The Scripture reading from Matthew 25 told the story of the five foolish and the five wise virgins. A reading, taken from the United Church Observer, with the emphasis on "fellowship and stewardship," was given by Mrs. M. Dawson.

Mrs. Savage took charge of the study book which dealt with what the United Church is doing for refugees and overseas relief.

The president, Mrs. Gaynor Marshall, conducted the business part of the meeting after which lunch was served by the group in charge.

MOTHBALLS DANGEROUS!

Mothballs should be kept out of babys' reach for they are highly poisonous, easily swallowed and have an eye-calling color.

Women's Institutes

MARMORA W.I.

MARMORA — The Mormora Branch of Women's Institute convened at the girls' Christmas meeting at the home of Mrs. T. M. Babbin with 16 members and two visitors present.

The meeting was chaired by the president Mrs. Wilfred Tinsdill and opened with Christmas carols in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. R. E. Neal was in charge.

Mrs. Ted McCrimmon, district president extended greetings from the Christmas and New Year. Mrs. H. E. Neal read a letter from the Institute pen pal in Wales, and Mrs. Babbin also enclosed a program of their girls' conventions and several good resolutions were noted therein.

A motion was carried that $10 be donated as usual to the Meredith Lodge Nursing Home assist in Christmas baskets to needy and sick.

Christmas carols were the program, Mrs. L. R. Green gave a humorous reading. Mrs. Neal read "The Bespoe Sheep Herders" and "The Shepherds Psalm — Psalm 23".

An unusual contest was put on by Mrs. Tinsdill and was won by Miss Richards.

The hostess served a bountiful lunch complete with Christmas cake.

Second Glance

FROM KETTLE TO CUSTOMER

"First to raise cane . . . sugar cane, that is . . . were the people of Asia. Arabs may have supplied the root of the word, 'candy,' quand' meaning Arabian 'for sugar'—from Lot's "Candy Through the Years."

"Each Christmas season is enhanced in Belleville by a candy shop on Front Street which displays trays of its well-known 'Candy Clove Apples.' These are not offered at any other time of the year, nor in any other part of Canada, so far as is known.

"Had you come by yesterday," said Mr. Wessel, the owner and maker of homemade candies, a nearly-lost art in this modern age, "you would have seen me making the clove apples. But I wouldn't have been able to talk to you. They keep one pretty busy; one has to make and cut the taffy, and perhaps three others to mold and put in the cloves. I made about 75 pounds. But during the holiday season, I average about 500 pounds."

These candy apples have a most festive appeal in luscious colors, green and red, and if you've asked Mr. Wesse how he happened to become a maker of homemade candy,

"There are a few of us today, like myself, who learned to make candy by hand, for no machinery is used, other than that small little mixer you see there, known as a candy furnace, which holds a ton of coal a month. Notice that the floor is tiled, for the inevitable drippies in a pool of various colors, which may be lifted out by the slice of a knife, and so be re-used in the heat.

"Sugar, glucose and water, in substance into a funnel and squeezed it through the opening with a wooden pestle that lay in small pink dishes upon waxed paper placed upon a huge stone slab. These were candy wafers, especially ordered. I used to think bakers worked far too hard, their baking disappeared so quickly, and nothing to show for their efforts.

"But I've been making candy for 50 years and have been in business for myself about 30 years of that time. This stone slab you see here was cut by my father (a tomb stone cutter) for use in confectionery store. Little did my father think this slab would ever hold into my hands to be used by me as a candy-maker, at the time he cut it. No, I do not eat much candy while working but at home I do enjoy a few sweet things rather than pickles or relishes.

"But, since I've been a candy-maker all my life, I must have learned many tricks of the candy making art, carried on from old treasured recipes, and I'm never happier than when busy cooking up a big batch of candy which I know will delight lovers boy with relish. Candy and I have known times good together. There are birthdays, anniversaries, holidays, parties. . . A candy-maker has a hand in them all."

Public School H-S Holds Yuletide Meet

MARMORA — Marmora Public School Home and School Association held its Christmas meeting in the Central School. Following the opening exercises a short business period was held.

The Rev. P. O. Miller, Minister of Marmora United Church, read the Christmas Story and brought the message.

A program was put on by the teachers and pupils of each grade in the school as follows: "Silent Night", "The Wedding of Jack and Jill", and the Kindergarten Rhythm Band, which made the evening.

A bake sale and bazaar added to its financial success.

Scott's United W.F. Elects 1961 Officers

6TH SIDNEY — Mrs. Edison Bird was hostess for the December pot-luck dinner in the dining hall of Scott's church on Wednesday.

After dinner, the president, Mrs. George Pollard opened the meeting with Mrs. A. Martyn at the piano.

Roll call showed six members present. During the past month 14 cards had been sent and one call made. The ladies were reminded that the group is to serve at Scott's sale barn on January 3rd, 1961.

The Christmas carol, "Silent Night" was sung and the 91 Psalm was read responsively. Mrs. K. Faul read the Scripture, Ephesians 6: 10-18. Following prayer by Mrs. A. Martyn.

Mrs. Morley Sine continued the program with the carol "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," and readings by Mrs. K. Sine, Mrs. Bird, Mrs. A. Martyn and Mrs. M. Sine.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Mrs. M. Sine conducted the election of officers as president — Mrs. A. Martyn; corresponding secretary and literature secretary — Mrs. A. Sine; W.M.S. treasurer — Mrs. R. Defoe; Y.W.A. treasurer — Mrs. A. Sine, building fund treasurer — Mrs. Ivan Sine; supply secretary — Mrs. R. Defoe; Christian stewardship — Mrs. K. Faul; Christian citizenship — Mrs. G. Sine; "Missionary Monthly" secretary — Mrs. R. Defoe; card and flower secretaries — Mrs. K. Faul and Mrs. M. Sine; press reporter — Mrs. M. Sine.

Home Is a Sanctuary

By ALMA MASON

Your slow steps drag on the flagstones. The latch on the door feels like ice. You enter the hushed, chill and a sense of deep depression. The cares of the world overtake you even to hover around your sagging shoulders like gloomy ghostly phantoms.

You list your sins to the fire-flies that dance in the dusky walls. Your world-weary eyes peer beyond the flickering of your favorite chair where the contours of your body are sketched there by your tortured soul. Your worn old briar pipe — your only companion through many friendly soliloquies.

Your comfortable quiver as you incline your head against the scent of good roast beef and spices that drift from the kitchen. The furrows on your brow iron out and you see specks of peace with the world.

You stretch your hand to the table ashes. There you see the table need your chair. You stretch your feet to the crackling logs. Gradually, the tightly strung wires of tension unwind and you are once again at peace with the world.

Then you see your rich, golden smile and the dear familiars from the outside world fade away. They are wicked away by the brisk, strong winds of freedom sweeping down from the heights of home and love and companionship.

Shadowy darkness glides through the room and envelopes you in a peace like the peace which encompasses a symphony music; like the peace induced by the mysterious lullaby of a woman's soul buried in green hills; like the peace floating from the perfume of rare, exquisite flowers.

You have reached the summit of the world's woes. You have retreated to your mountain retreat. You are once again a king — a king in a luxurious setting of faith and love and home.

There is a quiet haven
Glowing with a single lamp
Shining from the doors and windows
There our foolish worries cease.
As we step across the threshold
When we close the quaint old door
We forget the cares and burdens,
We leave the din and roar;
There before us shines the fireplace
On the hearthstone sleeps the cog;
There a chair is so inviting
Near the warmly-burning log;
By the fire some cozy apples
And a footstool for the feet,
There, the smiles of those who love us
Home again and life is sweet.

This - - - and That

By MARRIET STEVE...

Last Saturday's column, using for a quotation by Ann Batchelder, suggested that, in their youth, people who later attain greatness did not settle personality problems of it to teacher or parent. This was borne out by a story I happened to read in a old scrapbook about 'Longfellow's first poem.

When Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was nine years old, his school teacher told him to write a composition. He shrank from the task, and his master said: "You may take your slate and go out behind the school house, and there you will find something to write about, and then you can tell what it is, what it is for, and what is to be done with it; and that will be a composition."

Henry took his slate and went out. He went behind Mr. Pinneo's barn, which chanced to be near by, and seeing a few turnip growing up, he knew what that was, what it was for and what would be done with it. He wrote as follows:

Mr. Finney's Turnip
Mr. Finney had a turnip
And it grew behind the barn,
And it grew and it grew,
Till it could grow no taller;
Then Mr. Finney took it up
And put it in his cellar.

There it lay, there it lay,
Till it began to rot;
Then his daughter Suzie washed it
And put it in the pot.

And she boiled it, and she boiled it,
As long as she was able;
Then his daughter Lizzie took it
And put it on the table.

Mr. Finney and his wife
They both sat down to sup,
And he ate, and they ate,
Until they ate the turnip up.

We are not told what the teacher did with this, but I suppose he drew the effort, it is not very much to be sure, and said: "One day you will be a world renowned poet".

Perhaps a more closely at the poems which were cut out of newspapers and pasted in the book, it occurs to me that we may be too hard on some of the "amateur" poetry we read, and make no sense to most of us. Is it any worse, as poetry, than some of these verses which take no effort to understand? The following is the first verse of a poem pricked at random:

Oh, Spring, how I love you!
Your wrong,
Yet for all that I know my heart
will belong,
So hold me in his arms so strong.

My pretty wood quite wrinkled,
Or at this last verse:
"Then whether you the violet
wear,
Or whether you choose the rose to wear;
Yet still, wherever I may be,
The sweet sweet-william is the flower for me."

Bad poetry is bad poetry in any age, but I must confess that, it will die a natural death.

WOMEN OF THE MOOSE

The first meeting of the month was held in Moose Hall with Senior Regent Blanche Priestley presiding. The children's Christmas party will be held this evening.

The next meeting night is the Christmas supper on December 22 for all co-workers. Gowns are to be worn. Each co-worker is also asked to bring a gift to the value of $1 to be exchanged. Put names in gifts.

A draw was donated by Hilda Whitaker and won by Elinor Copeland.

After the meeting penny bingo was played and lunch was served by Hilda Whitaker and her committee.

Winners of euchre were Nellie Scrymgeour, Marg Johnson, Vivian Kelley; lone band, Nellie Scrymgeour; lone band, Mrs. Palbrother, Mr. Kennedy, Bernice Priestley, Mrs. Anderson Donnelly; draw donated by Marg Johnson was won by Hilda Whitaker.

DO YOU HAVE . .

—a marital problem

—trouble with your children

—difficulty in budgeting your income

If so, the Children's Aid Society can be of help and invites you to talk it over with one of the members of its family service department staff. You will find they are sympathetic and understanding of your problem and without cost or obligation you to help yourself. There will be no obligation on your part and you may terminate the contact at any time.

The Society offices at 63 Moira St. West are open from 2:30 to 5 o'clock Monday to Friday each week. For your own convenience it is suggested that you telephone for an appointment. Your call will be treated with complete confidence.

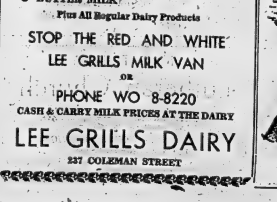
Christmas Concerts

ALLIANCE CHURCH

Like an aura borealis, the rainbow-covered lights filled the large auditorium of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church on Thursday evening with a most fitting atmosphere for the unfolding of the Christmas story by song, pantomime, recitation, star drill and a film entitled "The Kind-Gift".

As a "warming-up" session for the fine program, the large audience enjoyed a sing-along of favorite carols, led by Mr. Jeffrey Ray, following which the diners delighted with their rendition of "Christmas Medley" and later, Bob Landry delighted with a pleasing vocal solo. Other march appreciated numbers included a piano and violin duet by Miss Norma Millard and Audrey Dixon "Silent Night, Holy Night", a boys drill, "Star of the East", Melody Ann Bird and the Lights off; sang a pantomime by the junior 'B' Girls, in flowing white, which with the prettily lighted Christmas tree kept the thoughts turning to the adorable of the new-born King.

TO HAVE A CURRY



Following the brief address by the pastor, the Reverend Beckwith Fisher who extended a cordial invitation to all those present to the church-house Sunday school to come to Sunday school as well as to the parents.

The Film "To Each a Gift" was shown. This centred around a family of three, of which the father, who was trying circumstances had lost his gift of goodness, so much so that Christmas did not mean anything. But; through the gentle love of his wife, and of the little daughter, and their sacrificial spirit by making gifts for each other from their personal possessions; the mother cutting up her wedding gown for a new dress for her little daughter; the little daughter making a scarf from her doll's only quilt for her father; a shoulder cowgay from her doll's only hat for her mother As the spirit of Christmas bore down on the despondent father, he too, looked up, and made for his little daughter a cradle for her dolls, friend, long-treasured foot stool.

The story ended with the spirit of Christmas and the meaning of the Babe of Bethlehem finding lodging in the father's heart; he returns to his Lutheran Church to sing God's to help to "Put Christ back into

by HORACE B. POWELL

O LITTLE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM!

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie;
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by.
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight.

For Christ is born of Mary;
And gathered all above,
While mortals sleep, the angles keep
Their watch of wondering love;
O morning stars, together
Proclaim the holy birth,
And praises sing to God the King,
And peace to men on earth.

How silently, how silently
The wondrous gift is given!
So God obtains to human hearts
The blessings of His heaven.
No ear may hear His coming,
But in this world of sin,
Where many souls will receive Him, still
The dear Christ enters in.

O holy Child of Bethlehem,
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sin, and enter in,
Be born in us today.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell;
O come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Emmanuel.

In this beautiful Christmas hymn the distinguished preacher, Phillips Brooks, describes the birthplace of Jesus as he saw it on Christmas eve, in 1865.

The young rector of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in Philadelphia — he was only 30 years old at the time — went abroad for a year of travel and visited the Holy Land, with other places. It was his good fortune to be in Jerusalem on the day before Christmas, and on Christmas eve, over with a party, of friends he went over to Bethlehem.

Writing to friends at home of the memorable experience, Mr. Brooks told how he and his companions rode out of town (Bethlehem) on the field where, according to the Bible story, shepherds heard the angelic singing of Christ's birth on that first Christmas day. He describes it:

"And we passed," he told his American friends, "the shepherds' fields overlooking valleys and finally Bosker' or 'leading i'm en that night so long ago".

Riding back into Bethlehem, the young preacher attended a midnight Christmas eve service in the Church of the Nativity built on the very spot where it is believed Jesus was born. Phillips Brooks never forgot that wonderful Christmas in Bethlehem. Three years later, when he returned a Christmas hymn for the children and girls of his Sunday School in Philadelphia, he sat down and put his impressions of the scene, and the carol was made.

Phillips Brooks, who was to become one of America's most inspirational pulpit figures, was born in Boston just a dozen days before Christmas, in 1835. His ancestors, on both sides, were descendants of Puritan families.

He finished his preparatory studies at the Boston Latin School and was graduated from Harvard University, in 1855. After a year at teaching Latin, he turned to theology and, when he was first ordination at an Episcopa school in Philadelphia, he was called to serve his first rectorship at Holy Trinity Church, in Philadelphia. It was during this ministry that he wrote his famous hymn.

Lewis H. Redner, who composed the Christmas hymn tune, was organist and choirmaster at Holy Trinity Church at the time. He was also superintendent of the Sunday School for which the hymn was written and was teaching the class of boys to which Mr. Redner, it is reported, told the story many hours of the eventful Saturday night before Christmas, in 1868, writing the hymn melody so precious to Christians everywhere today. He was filled in the harmony the next morning so that the new song could be sung for the first time in the church's Christmas day service.

Dr. Brooks' Philadelphia rectorship lasted until 1869. Then, he began another famous ministry at Trinity Church in Boston. He was consecrated Bishop of Massachusetts in 1891 but died less than two years after receiving this honor.

A Lift For Living

We're Earth's Wandering Stars

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

In next to the last book of the Bible certain persons are called "wandering stars."

Wandering stars in the heavens are a rare sight. Only occasionally do we see a shooting star. And comets are so rare that they are recorded by name and remembered for years. Yet as I write these lines there are man-made satellites circling the world. Their names will long be remembered. Some day they will falter and fall to the earth from which they were catapulted.

The heavenly bodies are so marvelously steady. It is no wonder that the Psalmist exclaimed, "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork." It is strange how any motorist who has tried to thread his way through the traffic of our large cities can disbelieve in a Divine Mind that directs the traffic of the Milky Way.

It has been truly said, "the universal astronomer is man." And we can understand why such brilliant students of the heavens as Robert Ingersoll and Clarence Darrow and the late Sir. James Jeans in England seem so troubled because Revers in a Divine Creator.

WAYWARD AND UNSTEADY

But when we turn the gaze from heavenly bodies to earthly beings, we do not find such regularity and co-ordination of movement. Suppose the mythical man from Mars were to observe the motions of our human stars. Suppose he were to see us scurrying at the intersections of busy streets or scrambling over one another in board walks, cars and trains, or rote the way we jump from one director to another. Suppose he were to observe the wayward and unsteady moral conduct of men. But enough has been said to long enough to see us as we are. Such is the sad case for our children and neighbors and ourselves. Human and cruel that every few years we have a killing our fellow men as our chief occupation.

Would that man from Mars see anything companion to the steadiness and orderliness of the heavenly bodies? Can he be able to figure out any central point by which we human beings revolve? Can he find any harmony? What are all "wandering stars"?

That has been the conclusion of some observers of the human scene. But such a conclusion does not co-ordinate in the world's best minds. Like the Psalmist they look up to the heavens and say, "The heavens declare the glory of God." And they go on with the Psalmist in the same Nineteenth Psalm to say, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." The same God who controls the rolling stellar orbs has also given laws by which human beings can be converted and coordinated from chaos to order. His finding and following of God's spiritual laws for man has been a long and painful process. Apparently society is harder to organize than the physical order of the heavens. Man is greater than the stars. Men are strange beings of dust and dreams. They grope and grovel in the mud but they also climb the ladders of stars.

They have in them something of the fixed which rises in the jungle and something of the angel which goes the Lord. The Creator can control stars and stones and trees without their consent. But He has given men free will, free mind and spirit and God can only win the lord of men with when He wins them to accept His leadership.

LONG, HARD JOB

Hence God had a long hard job in helping man discover His laws of life and in persuading Parallel may illustrate. Some years ago I was complicated machine was exported from the United States to a foreign country. Soon serious defects themselves. Specifications were sent down to the defects. But without success. Then skilled engineers were dispatched. Finally the inventor himself had to go down and set it right.

That, I say, is a sort of parable. Ages ago a very delicate machine called man was set up on this planet. At times he seemed to run well and at other times to run wild. How was man to be adjusted to fulfill his function? Wise men like Confucius and Plato came to give specifications. Lawmakers like Moses and Hammurabi came with blueprints for human behavior. But still men lacked the power and protection to run according to divine specifications.

Then came One who claimed to have the mind of the Divine Inventor. Jesus of Nazareth appeared, saying, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father."

Nineteen centuries have tested Christ's claim to represent the mind of the Creator. While He has not yet brought order throughout the world, Christ has shown how to bring order in the world. Him to them gave He power to become sons of God." More and more men are saying that Christ's followers have not failed because they have never been really tried. More and more are realizing that Christ's way of order, not chaos. Next week we "wandering stars" will study at random and watch for the star of Bethlehem to lead us to the One who said, "I am the way, the truth and the life."

White Shrine Sponsors Yuletide Party

The regular meeting of the White Shrine of Jerusalem No. 11 was held in the I.O.O.F. Hall with Worshipful with a record attendance.

Sec. Annettes
W.H.P. with Sol J. Armstrong
W.C.S. presided.

The business and white Shrine ceremonial of initiation was conducted by the worthy matron following the meeting, the Sol J. retired to the upper hall, for a social time.

Gifts were exchanged with Sol J. Bowen acting as Santa Claus. The two lucky members of partners were: Sol Neo Cathcart and Sol J. Lindsay.

A lovely buffet lunch under the convenorship of Sol J. Chapman and her committee, brought a lovely meeting to a close. The next meeting of White Shrine would soon be here with a Sweetly Christmas to all, and to all a good night."

Women's Activities

EASTMINSTER W.F

The Eastminster Women's Fellowship held its Christmas meeting on Monday evening and opened with the singing of "Joy To The World".

Mrs. Donaldson gave a Christmas meditation. The Scripture was taken from Luke 2 was read by Mrs. Meldrum. Meldrum led in prayer. Mrs. Kline read a Christmas story, "Lively is the Word". The singing of "Silent Night" closed the devotional period.

The business period was conducted by the president, Mrs. Mayhee. Mrs. Meldrum, on behalf of the nominating committee, read the list of officers for Mrs. Kline invited the ladies downstairs to "The Feast of the Seven Toilers". A lovely buffet lunch was awaiting with seven tables all decorated in different colors, for the ladies to sit at.

Thanks were expressed by the president to Mrs. Gardiner and her group for the beautiful lunch served.

Mrs. R. K. — My daughter let her boy friend go to a fire—where did I fail?

Gwen E. — My mother didn't emphasize the dangers till now.

Mrs. R. K.: Because my own mother was so close-mouthed about sex, I probably went to the other extreme and discussed the facts of life with my daughter too freely. I didn't want her to be as naive, unrealistic and embarrassed as I had been.

"To help me do things "right," I took a course for parents given by a child welfare worker. And I read all the prescribed books and pamphlets. In addition, I provided them with the special children's texts which lead them from the "pees and birds and flowers" tales to the truth about human beings.

Well, I succeeded too well I'm afraid! Gwen is relaxed and uninhibited and unafraid of life. But evidently I didn't place enough stress on the "control" since she tells me everything, she confided to me today. I have her steady boy-friend, had gone "all the way" during a beach weekend with Freddie.

In my day, all the sex talk was geared at preventing the dangerous indulgence. I managed to lay down the fears, the shame the ugliness my mother spoke of. But now it appears I played down the "control" part so I can right the wrong I've done Gwen.

Gwen K.: Mummy was simply marvellous all through my child hood. My friends envied me so because I could tell her or ask her anything. She never washed my mouth out with soap for using me for the words or ideas I brought home. Instead she explained. I never felt that sex was "dirty," nor as a teenager did I feel guilty about the sex pleasures.

Now that I'm 20 and about to graduate from college, my predominant feeling about the sex relation is that the girl must be sacred and beautiful. Mother always says that sex is a beautiful act and that's what I was holding out for — too.

When I realized that Ed and I were in love, I felt there was nothing wrong in giving him my heart's description to the test. But I told him that I felt that it was turned white and said, "What if you're pregnant!"

Well, I'm not pregnant and I've promised Mother there'd be no more intimacies with Ed or anyone else I might think myself in love with, until I'm safely married.

You see, Mother never made it clear that it was married love she meant was beautiful!

The Council: This progressive mother made the common mistake of going all the way in furnishing the facts of sex — the vocabulary, the diagrams, the mechanics — and leaving pretty much to chance the right attitudes. Mother simply didn't intend to "sell" her daughter on premarital sex.

As Mrs. K. discovered, the "brakes" are still a vital part of the sex drive. Both she and Gwen (and possibly Ed, too) have had a narrow escape from heartbreak there will be lifetime reverberations of the "test" for all of them.

Our society links the perfect mate to the marriage, for a number of important reasons. Conventional parents approach each other within the framework of a legal and public pledge to care for each other's children. As the song says, is a long, long wedding with freedom and relaxation is a first essential.

Then there's what marriage does to love. I can prove it! Premarital love is mostly protestations and promises and passionate kisses on some giving-up, some sacrifice, but no real deep giving and meaning to the love-making.

Add, too, the quality of the act when engaged in for the husband and wife who have decided to accept responsibility for the care of children who may result from both the act and the love accompanying it.

Gwen will be glad of her protection to her mother, Premarital relations offer the short end of what can be a glorious bargain, and for a girl, the short end can be quite short indeed. With all of reputation, pregnancy, forced marriage and other sordid results, it is not even worth the fear of pregnancy or venereal disease, there are often incera-

Empty a can of baked beans into a casserole. From about one pound of hamburg, make six small meat balls and arrange over the beans. Bake in a 400 deg. oven until the meat is almost done, then pour over the undiluted tomato soup over the meat and finish baking until meat balls are done. That's all it seems the juices from the meat and the filling spread to the beans. With a tossed salad you have a complete meal, with no work. ANSWER:

Your letter is so full of common sense it does help me to be firm with Sue. Occasionally when I bring her in from the garden before mealtime, I am tempted to give her a tidbit but find a bit of celery or apple is quite as satisfactory to her as a cookie or other appetite-killing snack. I want to take this opportunity to thank the dozens of other readers who took me seriously regarding Sue's birthday at Holy Trinity Church, in Philadelphia. It was during this ministry that he wrote his famous hymn.

Lewis H. Redner, who composed the Christmas hymn tune, was organist and choirmaster at Holy Trinity Church at the time. He was also superintendent of the Sunday School for which the hymn was written and was teaching the class of boys to which Mr. Redner, it is reported, told the story many hours of the eventful Saturday night before Christmas, in 1868, writing the hymns melody so precious to Christians everywhere today. Readers' Saturday Column

LETTER:

Since moving here nine years ago at the time of my marriage, I have enjoyed your column, particularly like the warmth and humor, of your anecdotes of your family, God bless 'em! Not so much more homey to know you are cooking for a family and not just for a Home Ec. book. The reason for this note is your plea for help with feeding your little grandaughter as if you really need help! We have three children, 7, 5, 3-4 and 1 months, and the doctor has always said how well-nourished they are, without being overweight. We have only one rule — never force a child to eat! They taste everything on the table, and the odd time do not clean their plates, but usually second and third helpings. I try to balance their meals, but their favorite foods are meat and vegetables and meat, and seldom have dessert as the children eat to be excused after the meat course. We also do not serve bread, except with eggs, and breakfast. About feeding the little one — at that age I don't love to use their fingers, and a few pieces of cubed (cooked) carrots, beets, peas, meat, etc. put on their highchair tray will keep them busy while I get the shovel in the rest of the meal. They also love their own spoon and while they won't be neat at first, can become quite efficient with the whole meal by about 18 months. Perhaps this sounds very young and I've probably forgotten just how messy they were, but both of my older ones were feeding themselves by this age. They enjoy their food and we hope never mind it as a reward or punishment and, as I've said, they are never forced to eat. (Usually when they are not hungry, it is due to their "coming down" with some, which, fortunately, is not often. This is also a cue to look for the measles, or a cold, or just being over-tired.) I hope the above will help you in some small way, and will say thankyou for the wonderful hints and recipes I have gleaned from your column. We all enjoy recipes that are within our budgets and tasty too. Perhaps the following will be of help — it was the result of lack of time and the-day-before-shopping-when - the - larder - was - empty -

COCOANUT YULE LOG

The recipe for Cocoanut Yule Log which appeared in last Saturday's issue of the Ontario Intelligencer, erroneously headed, "Chocolate Yule Log", does not require any chocolate. The correct recipe is Rs entirely follows:

6 oz. whole Brazil nuts, 1-2 lb. pitted dates, 1 cup, jar cocoanut, cherries, drained, 1-2 lb. pkg. vanilla wafers crushed fine, 1 tablespoon finely chopped ginger, 1-3 lb. marshmallows, cut up, 1 teaspoon lemon rind, 1-2 cup undiluted evaporated milk, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-6 teaspoon allspice, 1-6 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-3 teaspoon ginger, 1-3 teaspoon salt, 2 cups shredded cocoanut.

In two double boiler put evaporated milk, marshmallows, lemon rind, salt and spices. Stir occasionally until marshmallows are partially melted. Remove and cool. Mix all of the fruits, nuts and mix very well. Shape into 2 logs about 3 in. wide and roll in the cocoanut. Wrap well and store in the refrigerator until needed and then slice.

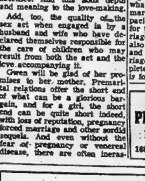
QUESTION BOX

Question: We are entertaining a five-thirty to seven-thirty reception in honor of the member of the House or Representatives from our district. I know he is addressed as The Honorable, but when sending out the invitations it will seem odd to say "In Honor of The Honorable so and so"! What would the wordage be? — Mrs. T. A., New York, N.Y.

Answer: Actually it would be perfectly proper to simply say "In Honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Doe." A United States Representative is addressed on an envelope as "The Honorable John Doe" but he is spoken to as "Mr. Doe" and the same form is followed on an invitation or in a letter. However, if you like to put your other guests know that you are entertaining in honor of a high-ranking man, you may stretch a point and say at the top of your invitation "In compliment to The Honorable John Doe and Mrs. Doe." For the sake of clarity, common sense, has to be resorted to, and I am sure it will cause no criticism.

Question: Please let me know the proper thing to do when I meet a boy I know at church. Do I shake hands with my gloves on, or do I take them off?—Mrs. C. Chilvers, Ill.



Answer: Keep them on. It is not necessary for a lady to remove her gloves when shaking hands with someone whom she meets on the street.

Even more than her well-meaning mother, Gwen will know what to tell her daughter. Premarital relations may incapacitate a girl, and even destroy the real thing which, in marriage, not only protects but also psychic, emotional, moral and spiritual. Only within marriage can the sex act bring complete peace. The marriage act is for the married.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Where Should Old, Lonely Mother Spend Her Final Years on Earth?

By THOMAS COLLINS

"How the widowed mothers who sing, growing old, and for their worried children, will you please offer some solution to this problem?

"My mother is 73 years old and is living alone and unhappily in the old family home in a city 400 miles from where I live with my husband and our two school-age children.

"My mother wants to give up her home and move in with my family. I think this is not best. I do not want to share my husband's time with her. I do not want my children to have their pleasures hampered by my mother's nerves. I do not want my home invaded by an outsider — and a mother is an outsider no matter how dear she may be to you.

"It seems cruel for me to be writing in this vein because I have searched my soul and I believe that I am as devoted to my mother as most married daughters can be. Yet she would bring discussion into my home even though in small ways, because the manner of living which she knows is not the manner of living my husband and I have developed for ourselves in the 20 years of 1960.

"Anything which would make me or my family unhappy in the event my mother moved in with us would tend also to make her unhappy. So perhaps I write you this entirely out of selfishness.

MOTHER INSISTENT

"But what do I do? My mother is insisting that she come to live with us. She has turned down every alternate proposal I have made, including one that she take a small apartment near our home.

"There is no real financial problem involved. Mother has enough income to live comfortably.

There will come a time, at your mother's funeral or in the years after it, when you will feel remorse if you do not provide now what your mother needs — but not necessarily if you fail to provide what she wants.

Does you mother need the protection of your home, or is she just a contrary old woman who wants her way? I suspect, from the way you write, that she's contrary, in that case you have the medicine for your conscience. What then in the practical answer to the problem?

Make a thorough search of your own city for an institutional home where your mother might be happy. The both of you would be happier if you were closer together as she grows old. There are many homes run by religious institutions, where women of your mother's age find contentment. With the home base by you could have your mother over for dinners and weekends, and you could keep an eye on her welfare in the home.

If you find a home that seems satisfactory the officials there will probably help you and your mother on the idea of entering it.

A second solution might be to find a young family who would move into your mother's home — to pay her rent and give companionship. This has worked in some cases of older mothers where nothing else would work.

ANOTHER WINDOW

A third solution might be to find another widow about your mother's age who would move into her home and share housekeeping.

A fourth solution might be for you and your husband to rent a small apartment around the corner from your own home and set your mother up there. Even if you and your husband had to contribute to the expense of the apartment, it could be worthwhile.

An aging mother who is 400 miles away from you with nobody to look after her can be a gnawing worry to you. So a solution that is clear to your own city might be best. Older parents are frequently in desperate need of human attention and will make demanding proposals to their children in an effort to get it. You can't turn your back. But you don't have to ruin your own family's chance of happiness. There's always a sensible way out if you'll work to find it.

If you don't consult a psychiatrist, and neither does Mama.

ONLY SURVIVOR

had been ill and stayed home when his mother and sister flew to New York Wednesday.

Stephen didn't eat much for breakfast Friday, said the family. He would, they surmise, lie just sat there and grinned, she said, asking:

"Then he got dressed up in a pretty gray suit and grey hat with a little feather in it."

Stephen's father took him to the airport and put him on the United Air Lines DC-8 bound for New York.

The boy was excited during the trip and as the four-engined jet sped down over New York—but let Stephen tell it:

"I remember looking out the plane window at the snow below covering the city. It was a beautiful day.

BEGAN TO FALL

"Then all of a sudden there was an explosion. Some place started to fall and people started to scream.

"I held on to my seat and then the plane crashed. That's all I remember, . . ."

The giant craft slammed into the heart of Brooklyn.

And — miraculously — Stephen was thrown clear from the plane's tail section. He landed about 30 feet from the wreckage.

Two New York policemen moving into the area in their patrol car, saw him.

"We saw the child thrown from the plane right after the crash," said patrolman Joseph Manino. "His clothing was on fire. . . . We managed to get the boy out in a snowbank and rolled him around to make sure the fire was out.

Over and over the boy whispered:

"Mother . . . Daddy . . . Mother . . . Daddy . . .

Two priests gave last rites.

CRIES FOR MOTHER

The boy was taken to the Methodist Hospital in Brooklyn, and before he lapsed into unconsciousness, he sobbed:

"Mother . . . she's waiting for me."

And she was. At Idlewild, with his nine-year-old sister, Sandee, Mrs. Phyllis Balfe waited for what seemed like hours before they told her Stephen was alive. She burst into tears and hurried to the hospital, where she was joined later by her husband, who had flown in from Chicago.

Once when Stephen regained consciousness, a minister told him he was in the Methodist Hospital.

"Good," said the boy, "Because I'm a Methodist."

TOT FOUND DEAD

WINDSOR (CP)—Three-month-old Sean Flaherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Flaherty of suburban Riverside, was found dead in his crib early Friday. Police said he apparently suffocated.

"Jest a Second"

"His wife wanted to see the world, so he bought her an atlas."

WITNESSES TELL

Lines jet plunging down in Brooklyn and a TWA Supercontellation falling on Staten Island, after colliding in the fuzzy, snowy air above.

The horror was as widespread as the fragments.

Ted Loughland, 27, raced out of a nearby restaurant. Grabbing a fire extinguisher, he sprayed mutilated bodies scattered over the pavement so they wouldn't catch fire.

THROWN FROM CHAIR

George Burch, 46, was watching television in a first floor corner.

"I heard this huge noise. It threw me out of my chair. I grabbed the venetian blind. Out the window, I saw a mailman lying in the gutter. I put my pants on and ran out in my bare feet. The mailmen got up, then collapsed again, then got up again. He seemed all right. I ran in and got my shoes and socks on.

"I ran toward the scene but I couldn't get closer because of the heat and the smoke."

Others in the neighborhood said they saw a boy dangling in a tree "like a limp doll" until firemen carried him down. They said, too, that they saw "people scrambling around inside a part of the plane still intact."

"I saw one woman standing at the door of the plane ready to step out and she had her arm covering her face," said Damian Hayes, construction worker. "Just then there was a terrible explosion and the plane went to pieces."

HORROR APPALS

Many other people saw the horror, too, and after the first shock they went back into their homes or closed the shades rather than see any more.

And in Staten Island, Edward McKinley, 8, a fireman, recalled:

"I was standing there outside, thinking about putting Christmas lights on the tree when I heard this boom. Then there was this terrific orange ball of fire. Then I saw this plane spiral down like a wounded bird.

"Later I found this suit coat." He held up the coat. Its right arm had been shorted off and red stained the shoulder. A half-smoked pack of cigarets was still in one pocket.

COLLECT BITS

Fragments of humanity and plane wreckage were scattered over several miles. A woman's blouse dangled from a tree. Bits of foam rubber hung like confetti from other trees.

Soldiers began collecting the grim fragments in sacks.

There was an overnight case, with baby pants and a slightly-worn shoe, and the edges were burned and there were red stains.

There was a child's pocketbook, flipped open, wet with snow. It showed a balance of $3.46.

There was one shoe, its knot still neatly tied, its polish still shining.

There was a rosary and a length of sash. . . .

There was a religious book with the Virgin Mother on the cover.

There were, in many places, bits and pieces of Christmas packages.

SENATE GIVEN

on each of which the Senate hears the evidence before sending the bills to the Commons for final approval.

The Senate still has to approve Mr. Morton's bill before it can be given royal assent and thus become law.

Robert McCleave (PC — Halifax), chairman of the committee handling divorce bills, predicted that the senators will "snap up" and "pass it in order to prevent it becoming a mirage that can be snatched away from them."

SENATOR PLEASED

Commenting on the Commons' action, Senator Arthur Roebuck, chairman of the Senate divorce committee, said in a telephone interview from his farm at Cowbourg that is is a "foregone conclusion" the upper house will pass the bill.

He was "pleased" about the bill's passage. Similar bills likely would be passed at the start of future sessions "as a matter of routine."

Senator Roebuck said the bill will have the effect of restoring a judicial function of the Senate usurped by the Commons when CCF members demanded individual examinations of such divorce petition passed by the upper house. Individual divorces now no longer would be used "as a political football."

Couples entitled to divorces now will get them," he said.

The ringing endelessness with which the bill was unanimously passed by the Commons in 1 1/2 hours of debate left observers convinced that the measure will encounter little second reading—approval in principle.

The bill required only 25 minutes to go through the committee stage. An amendment was added to make sure the bill covered the 50 of the 278 divorce cases already referred to the commons by the Senate.

Third and final reading of the 136-word bill required only eight minutes.

Ernest Broome (PC—Vancouver South) said he didn't want Commons members to think that passing Mr. Morton's bill "absolves us from our responsibility at revising the divorce law."

The latest attempt at revision was last year when Mr. Morton argued for 5½ hours the private member's bill of Arnold Peters (CCF—Timiskaming) to broaden divorce grounds and change the domicile law so Quebec and New-foundland residents, instead of coming to Parliament, could seek divorces in other provinces which have divorce courts.

BILL TALKED OUT

That bill was "talked out" with debate going to the last minute allowed without a vote, it fell to the bottom of a long list of other private members' bills before the Commons and stood little chance of being revived again this session.

That same thing could have happened to Mr. Morton's bill. Mr. Howard sent outside the house that he and Mr. Peters knew the measure was coming up during Friday's private members' hour from 5 to 6 p.m., and thought Conservative MPs would talk it out.

It is speculated that government back-benchers were thinking at the same time that he and Mr. Peters would do the talking out. "I think the conservative members are shocked," Mr. Peters added.

Passage of a private members' bill in the Commons is rare. It has not happened in years. In some previous cases such bills have passed after being modified by the government, which took over the bill as its own. But observers could not recall immediately the last time a private member's bill cleared the House on its own merits.

H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West), who piloted the bill with which the bill was passed, said it included the application of common sense on something that had been a problem for half a century.

WITH NEW IDEAS

Mr. Howard said the action was due in part of the new group of MPs with fresh ideas and approaches who were elected in elections gave the Commons, to the work of Mr. Morton and to the work of Mr. Peters and him-self in keeping the divorce-handling question free from issue.

Mr. Peters said the problem had been only partly solved. The Commons was handing the job over to the Senate to do alone, and "the upper house probably wouldn't handle it any better than it had in the past.

If the Senate was not more active about divorce and did not handle the matter in a "more legalized manner" than in the past, it might be necessary for the Commons again to take up the question.

Mr. McCleave said he did not want to leave Mr. Peters' remarks left on the record unchallenged. The Senate did its utmost in dealing with "this most vexing problem." The Commons could safely leave handling of divorce in the senate's fine group of people very conscientious about their work."

SENATOR VON ZEALY

Mr. Peters added in a corridor interview that if Mr. Morton's bill clears and gets outside the hurdles and becomes law, "the Senate will be on trial." He added:

"If the Senate doesn't run its divorce procedure) right, they will be abolished. If the Senate doesn't function properly as divorces, it has nothing else to do. The Senate can justify its existence if it handles divorces properly."

1960 in Review

Government's Main Defence Manoeuvre Was a Retreat

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's main defence manoeuvre in 1960 was a retreat.

The retreat was from its 1959 decision to acquire nuclear weapons for the Canadian armed forces and was made against the advice of the defence department.

Like all good political tacticians, Prime Minister Diefenbaker and his senior cabinet colleagues conducted the withdrawal by such a roundabout route that nobody could be certain for a long time that it was a withdrawal.

The first faint hint of a new policy came from External Affairs Minister Green in testimony before the Commons external affairs committee.

Mr. Green refused almost point-blank to talk about nuclear weapons and shrugged off the subject as a matter within the sole ambit of the defence department.

TAKES CONTINUING

Later, before the Commons defence committee, Defence Minister Pearkes said the cabinet had made no decision on acquisition of nuclear warheads but that negotiations were proceeding with the United States defence department to that the warheads could be obtained "if and when required."

In October, Hon. Douglas Harkness, former agriculture minister, assumed the defence portfolio while Mr. Pearkes was appointed lieutenant-governor of British Columbia. He was immediately faced with the Bomarc problem.

Mr. Harkness is known to favor nuclear weapons for the forces. He couldn't, naturally, fly in the face of government policy. He said nuclear weapons wouldn't be needed if a disarmament agreement was achieved.

Late in the year, Mr. Diefenbaker declared that Canada wouldn't obtain nuclear weapons unless it had "quality of control" over them. This is impossible under U.S. law which dictates that American nuclear warheads must remain in U.S. custody and can be fired only on the authority of the U.S. president.

DO NOT URGENT

Mr. Diefenbaker indicated it might be months before the government reached a decision.

The matter is not considered urgent because the armed forces haven't yet got carriers for the warheads. They are scheduled to start getting them late next year. The Bomarc anti-aircraft missile, a 700 mph reconnaissance bomber and Honest John artillery rocket.

The Liberals in 1960 joined the CCF in attacking the non-nuclear policy for Canada.

Mr. Green was evidently advocating the same policy privately to the government—with considerable success because Mr. Diefenbaker was on his side.

One nuclear carrier with Bomarc—was discussed often in the Commons in the first half of the year but not at all in the second half when it began to succeed finally in flight tests.

BUILD TWO BASES

The original Bomarc failures caused the government considerable embarrassment. The U.S. House of Representatives caused even more by cancelling the Bomarc program but funds were restored by the U.S. Senate. Canada is building two Bomarc bases, at North Bay, Ont., and Le Macaza, Que., but the U.S. will provide and pay for the missiles themselves.

For the entire year, Canada and the U.S. talked about a plan for—Canadian purchase of a U.S. fighter and U.S. purchase of a Canadian transport plane — without any final agreement being reached.

The Commons defence committee met 27 times to study the 1960-61 defence budget of $1,867,000,000. Its main conclusion was that the budget didn't contain enough funds for new weapons—less than $300,000,000.

A $40,000,000 pay increase for the armed forces in October won't make this problem any simpler in 1961.

WEST HUNTINGDON

Cheese Producers Name New 1961 Officers

WEST HUNTINGDON — The Hastings County Cheese Producers Association met in the town hall, Ivanhoe on Monday afternoon for their annual meeting with a good attendance present. Mr. Gordon Bailey was chairman for the afternoon's program and Mr. Philip Carr, secretary and treasurer recorded the minutes. The auditor, Mr. Fred Beckett, gave his report all of which were adopted. Mr. George Pollard was present and he was called upon to conduct the election of officers for 1961. Those then honored were: president — Gordon Bailey; 1st vice-president — George Wood; secretary-treasurer — Philip Carr; directors Sidney Township — George Heasman; Thurlow Township — Percy Ray; Tyendinaga Township — Ray Clarke; Rawdon Township — Leslie McKeown; Huntingdon — Leslie Blakely; Hungerford — Harry Coulter; Marmora — John Bell; Madoc — Ed. Robinson; and/or — Fred Beckett.

The voting delegates were; the president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, Fred Heasman and Allan Ketcheson.

In assuming the chair, Mr. Bailey said he would do his best for the Association and he urged the members present to attend the meeting in Toronto early in January.

Mr. Sid MacDonald brought greetings to the Association.

Mr. Roy Ellis, president of Hog Producers' Association, was present and talked on the cheese situation also the hog question.

Mr. Ernest Henderson, the inspector, brought a most helpful address on the "Care of Milk," stating that the milking machines should be kept extra clean and the milk brought to the factory on time. He also introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Baker, who is a director of Dairying. Mr. Baker apologized for being late but said he always wanted to attend the Hastings County meeting, stating that much good came from the discussion groups.

Mr. George Wood thanked the speaker for his outstanding address and presented him with a handsome cheese.

Mr. Hector Arnold was the next speaker. He explained how the price of cheese was arrived at; how some cheese was shipped back home from England for inspection. He urged the patrons to get their milk to factory early as the cheesemakers are kept busy from six o'clock in the morning seven days a week. He predicted a scarcity of cheese before spring.

On a motion of George Heasman and Verna Harry that a resolution be sent to the government asking for more money for cheese was carried. Mr. Moore and Mr. George Pollard were present and each had been inspectors. They each gave short speeches.

Cheese and crackers were served to those present.

A door prize of cheese was won by Ernest Reid and George Carlisle.

Fails in Appeal Against Fine

VANCOUVER (CP) — Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi lost an appeal Thursday against a contempt-of-court conviction for which he was fined $1,000.

The unanimous ruling of three judges of the British Columbia Court of Appeal said "we have been gravitated inevitably to our decision."

The minister was fined for subverting his department to send $75,000 to Clyde W. Thornton of Troy, Mont. An earlier court order had ruled that up to $2,000 was to be paid by the highway department to the Montreal Trust Company.

The order was the result of an injunction obtained by Burton Glacier of Seattle, who was owed $95,000 by Thornton.

Big Four, West Will Play Interlock

East Rejects 16-Game Sked

TORONTO (CP) — The Big Four football league decided Friday to stick to a 14-game schedule for each team in the 1961 season.

The league turned down the idea of a 16-game schedule to conform with the Western International Football Union. The possibility that the Big Four teams would add an extra two games next season arose after the two leagues agreed to a two-year trial of a partial interlocking schedule for next season at a meeting last month in Vancouver of the Canadian Football League.

F. G. (Teddy) Gardiner, general manager and president of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, said after a meeting of representatives of each team that the two clubs in the six-club Eastern Conference, Ottawa, favored playing with a 16-game schedule. He said Toronto Argonauts and Montreal Alouettes were inclined towards playing two more games but they did not press the idea of a 16-game schedule.

Gaudaur said the possibility of adding two more games in 1962 in the second year of the trial period of the interlocking schedule was not ruled out. He said the merits of this will be discussed at a meeting in the East-West interlocking schedule works out next season.

MAY DRAW TODAY

The drawing up of the interlocking schedule is expected to be done today at a meeting of the general managers of the Big Four and WIFU clubs. The meeting was called by Commissioner Stanley Hator of Winnipeg and it is hoped many details of the East-West games can be worked out.

Under the schedule now planned every city in both leagues will see the other teams over the two-year period. Every Eastern team will play every Western club each year, with two games at home and three away. The following year they'll have three games at home and two on the road.

Tickets for seats between the goal lines for interlocking games will cost an extra 25 cents. This will go to

Top NHL Scoring Marks In Danger

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Some of the National Hockey League's prized scoring records are in jeopardy because of an upsurge in scoring this season.

Most notable among the records in danger of being broken are goal and point marks posted by a player in one season.

Going into five weekend games, the league's sharpshooters had registered an imposing number of 543 goals in 69 games, an average of 8.1 goals a game.

If the same weekend games are scheduled tonight, with league-leading Montreal Canadiens at home to New York Rangers and Boston Bruins playing the Maple Leafs at Toronto.

Sunday Montreal is at Boston, Toronto at New York and Detroit Red Wings take on the Black Hawks in Chicago.

The juniest goal-scoring average, with half of the season nearly over, is considerably higher than what it has been in recent seasons. Since the league adopted a 70-game schedule in 1949-50, the average has ranged from 4.8 to 5.8.

RECORDS SEASONS GIVEN

There have been several reasons advanced for the increase in scoring.

The players seem to be concentrating on offence and not on their energy for scoring goals," says Canoe Coach Clarence Campbell.

Both are in a position where they could tie or surpass Maurice Richard's record of 50 goals, set during the 1944-45 season. The Rocket established his record when the league played a 50-game schedule.

Geoffrion could also put in a bid for Richard's record. He has 21 goals so far.

The Boomer could also establish a new record for total points. He now leads the league with 46 and if he could maintain that pace he would wind up the season with 107 points, 12 more than Moore's high of 95 during the 1958-59 season.

Moore and Bellveau would also finish with 100 points or better at the rate they're going now. Moore getting 103 and Bellveau 101.

JEAN MAY DO IT

Bellveau is challenging the record set last season by 26-by-1 player in one season. Toronto's Dave Keon is the closest at present while playing with Montreal is Jean Beliveau.

The giant Montreal centre has 29 assists in 30 games.

Mahovlich is within shooting distance of two other records—most goals by a left-winger and most goals by a Toronto player in one season.

Joe Malone, a Montreal great of a bygone era, holds the club scoring record for most goals—44—by a letwinger. He established the mark in 1917-18.

The Toronto club's mark is 37 goals, a record held jointly by Gaye Stewart and Sid Smith. Stewart set the mark in 1945-46 and Smith, since traded to Chicago, equalled it in 1955-56.

Win Six in Row

Junior Wings Flying

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Red Wings, who for weeks looked like favorites for the end-of-season cellar spot in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, Friday night extended their current winning streak to six games with a 3-1 victory over Niagara Falls Flyers.

The win, before a crowd of 2,00 at the Falls, moved the Wings to within two points of second place, now shared by the Flyers and St. Michael's College.

The other two junior A games played Friday each ended in ties. St. Michael's came from behind to post a 3-3 tie with Toronto Marlboros at the Coliseum in Barrie and a goal by Jean Ratelle in the last minute gave Guelph Royals an 8-8 deadlock with St. Catharines Teepees.

Hamilton got off to an early start. Two goals by Lyle Porter and a single by Marcel Lacelle did give the Wings a 3-0 lead into the second period.

The Flyers' Howie Dietrich scored at 14:42 of the third on a tip-in from Ed Westfall's shot from the point.

CAUSE FOR SCORELESS

At Barrie the two Toronto clubs were scoreless into the last period.

The Marlies took the lead twice, on goals by Garry Jarrett and George Standing, but the Majors scored things up both times with Bill MacMillan and Ron Draper as the scorers. The tie left Marlboros in the cellar, two points out of sixth place.

The Guelph - St. Catharines game, played before 2,100 fans at Guelph, was a close battle all the way.

The Teepees opened with a 3-3 first period lead and were ahead 5-4 at the end of two. Guelph took a 7-6 lead in the third only to have St. Catharines score two quick goals and regain the lead.

ANDRUS HAD THREE

Paul Andres scored a hat trick for Guelph. Marcel Labelle were sentenced to 18 months each, Gordon D. Nelson, 30, was sentenced to six months. All pleaded guilty.

Murray Hall had the Teepees with a goal and five assists. Ray Cullen had four assists and scored twice, with Larry Burns, Howard Kellough and Duke Harris adding singles.

The tie gave the league-leading Bell-Orlawa Royals a point, placing them five points up on the two second-place clubs. For St. Catharines the game left them in sixth place, one point behind idle Peterboro Petes.

The Petes go to St. Catharines Sunday night and the Majors to the first half of a Sunday double bill at Oshawa. The second half has the Hillmen and Marlboros at home to Hamilton.

Pegs Ready For Czechs

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons wrapped up their training for the world hockey tournament for an eight-game tour of Czechoslovakia with an easy 10-1 victory over the Intermediate A Winnipeg Rangers.

Although Maroons managed only one goal in the first period there was little doubt they would walk off with the victory. Only the sharp goaltending of Allie Reynard got the Thistles out of the first period with a respectable score.

Winnipeg rapped home three more unanswered goals in the second period and another two in the third before Kenora managed to get on the scoreboard.

Maroons leave for Czechoslovakia Monday afternoon. They return Jan. 5.

JAIL THREE

WELLAND (CP)—Three Welland youths were sentenced Thursday to a total of 28 months in jail on charges of theft of newspapers from a Globe and Mail vending box. John Dandino, 19, and Ronald Clouthier, 20, were sentenced to 18 months each, Gordon D. Nelson, 20, was sentenced to six months. All pleaded guilty.

Hockey Hints

By Lloyd Peers

"GET BEHIND IT"

Many hockey experts claim that Glen Hall of the Chicago Black Hawks is the best goalkeeper in the N.H.L. Certainly every opposing player, on opposing players, agree that he is one of the toughest to beat on a clear chance. He often comes out with that big save that does so much to help a lift the boy right off a team.

The Chicago netminder has much to teach the young goalkeeper — he is exceptionally cool and relaxed even under the greatest pressure and has a perfect style. — Knees a slightly bent, shoulders and arms loose and ready to move, feet slightly apart for good balance, especially adept with his stick he is very quick to get any loose puck to the side, away from his feet. He's perhaps the big feature to learn from Hall is the way he gets his body behind every possible shot. — Keeps a good catcher in baseball quickly moves his body over in front of a wide pitch, so Hall tries to get his body behind the shot. Most young goalkeepers are content to stop one place and reach for the puck or flash it with his arm, but Hall — he knows that the puck will bounce off the floor from a bang or an arm or even blast by through sheer force. But when he does he will race back and going to stop. So learn to move either way to get in front. For more hints send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10c c/o Hints, 84 — 8th Western Hockey League cellar-dwellers will have to wait.

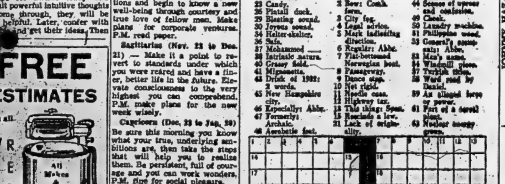
Hence, be sure to give a formal academic education as well as spiritual training that is of the highest. There is a quality genius in this chart, so be very understanding, too. A wonderful success here!



MUSIC CRITIC STABS

TUCSON, Ariz. AP)—A radio disc jockey was stabbed Thursday by a studio visitor who disagreed with his choice of music. Disc jockey Ron Irvin was operating station KAIR alone early in the day when the man dropped in and objected to the records he was playing. Irvin said the stranger whipped out a knife and began slashing. Irvin's back needed 30 stitches.

GOING INTO THE COIN - OPERATED LAUNDRY STORE BUSINESS?

You're Wise — But Be Sure of the Distributor's Complete Know-How Before You Buy!

ASK THESE QUESTIONS :

Does the distributor have thousands of satisfied customers in operation selling you untried, unproven equipment or an inventory spare part? Can he place your store based on actual experience? What has been the success of the stores he has set up? Does he have a full time store opening and continuing service department?

ALD is the national organization that has planned and helped build over 10,000 Licensed Westinghouse Laundromats and Dry Cleaning Stores in the United States and Canada. HOUSE ADJOURNS

Russell), inspector of the suburban Ottawa town of Eastview.

DEFEND SELVES

Mr. Michael Grat. Boisvert for Both Mr. Warrender and Mr. Russell defended themselves in violent sessions.

An act to establish portable pensions for workers was introduced by Kenneth Bryden (CCF-Toronto Beaches) but Mr. Frost indicated it would die on the order paper. He said portable pensions need a requirement of the future.

Unemployment was given full debate, although all three parties agreed its solution was the responsibility of the federal government. the debate was adjourned until the next half of the session.

The select committees on the administrative and executive problems of government, automobile insurance, cost of drugs, crop insurance and land appropriation were given permission to meet during the adjournment period.

Vitrolic debates on unemployment and on certain Ottawa MPs charged the spotlight with two royal commission reports dealing with Power Corporation, Transport Commission and the Niagara Parks Commission.

CHARGE JUDGES

CCF Leader MacDonald charged that Chief Justice Judge Ian Macdonell and Mr. George Gale, Conservative member of the Ontario Court of Appeal with drafting reports to favor the government.

Mr. Frost said opposition members who made such allegations should have resigned their seats when the charges were not proved.

Philip Hoffman (PC — Timiskaming) elected to the House by acclamation, was blocked from taking his seat for more than two weeks due to a technicality.

Mr. Hoffman, a retired civil servant, was found to accept more than $2,000 in accumulated holiday and sick pay benefits.

Later, the Legislative Assembly Act was amended to spell out certain exemptions to the' law, allowing Mr. Hoffman to take his seat.

ATTACKS LIBERALS

In a heated, often bitter debate Friday, Mr. Warrender charged the opposition with urging the government to spend its way into some dictatorial control over local councils.

He said Liberal Leader Wintermeyer is ignorant "of the whole concept of municipal affairs."

Mr. Wintermeyer attempted to reply but was ruled out of order on the grounds he had spoken in the Throne Debate. A point of order of the motion to adjourn the debate was defeated by a 56-10 vote.

Mr. Warrender, criticizing the somewhat of a lightening but not too strong. Relax.

ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER, Saturday, December 17, 1960 15

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Be very diplomatic today so that you do not get into trouble with your higher - ups. Security and success in your career is vitally important to you at this time, so strive for greater efficiency and higher credit, too.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Don't permit surprises to waste your time today with unrealistic fears for getting rich quick, etc. Be thorough with what has been tried and what has not been tried in due course of time. Then you will be safe and secure.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — It is best not to give in to that temptation to make radical changes or go against the advice of experts and good friends. Do not be impulsive or hasty people. Take it easy — you will find that conditions are better than you think.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) — Some inner worry has you in quite a dither today and you are very likely to be too critical of associate things and cause damage. Control your emotions especially kind with co-workers instead and all will be well.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) — This is one of those days when you might gamble a little on something or make radical changes because you feel unsure of conditions. Take it easy. Enjoy some form of entertainment that is inexpensive. Relax.

Libra (Sept. 23 of Oct. 22) — You must be particularly wise in handling affairs connected with home and family today or things could get out of hand. Be sure to the Golden Rule and you can do no wrong.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — Don't give anyone a chance to hurt you financially today, but if you — drive carefully and work hard and efficiently you should. Forget that secret worry that is bothering you. Be most kind and courteous with everyone.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) — Take time to figure accurately what your true worth is, and then act up a bookkeeping system that is simple and easy to maintain. And if you start practicing economy, you will soon know a far greater abundance.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Important you dream well and to good taste before you step out into the world of activity or you can be very great later.

Comedian Mort Sahl Says Canucks Saner Than Yanks, 'Unlike Nation of Snobs'

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — Mort Sahl is a lean, brooding individual who a critic describes American as "a nation of snobs" and says of Canadians: "They are much saner."

Then with a flashy smile tempering a hostile off-stage mood, he remarks flippantly: "At the age of four I chose freedom and defected to the West."

This is the comedian's way of saying he lived the first four years of his life in Montreal where his American parents ran a tobacco shop before the family packed up and returned to the U.S., moving to Washington and then Los Angeles.

Now Sahl is one of the hottest numbers in the U.S. nightclub circuit, hailing in about $7,000 a week, delivering a line of comment that ranges to the words of critics from topical satire to a witty college romp of type of humor to political and social shams.

At 32, Sahl is still a man on the run, restless and angry and forever reaching—new television programs and new films, new newspaper columns and the writing of books. He wants to move out of the nightclub circuit altogether. He hates to be called a comedian. He wants "to sing the glories of man."

Sahl is just one of a number of Canadian-born entertainers who have tasted fame and success in the United States.

They range from such Toronto products as orchestra leader Percy Faith and retired actress Mary Pickford to roof - singer Paul Anka of Ottawa, songwriter - actress Gisele MacKenzie of Winnipeg, television star Art Linkletter of Moose Jaw, Sask., and old-timey Guy Lombardo of London, Ont.

NO NATURAL COMIC

But Sahl stands alone, an enigma, for he is no natural comic and looks no vast storehouse of humor. On stage in his V-neck sweater, Sahl "approaches" as he calls it—he delivers a rapid-fire commentary on current events, bitter criticism and satire on the day's news.

Off-stage in his dressing room where he is besieged by college professors and congressmen, governors and cabinet members, college students and society figures, Sahl is a dark - eyed, serious-minded individual who balks at the need of "watering morality in society" and of "the crying need to ban the atom bomb."

He gets angry when you ask if he is left or right of centre in his political outlook. Obviously he has been a few mutterings among some calibers that he is a "lefty." Sahl says he is neither left or right; that he once was asked he has to follow his beliefs that "everyone should try to be his own man."

He worries about such big problems as the lack of leadership in the West; weaknesses in the Western alliance and corruption in high places.

He spurns most contemporary authors, saying they tend to cater to "feminist detail," and yearns for a return of "virile early post-war works, such as Norman Mailer's The Naked and the Dead.

Sahl has performed in many

POPULARITY GROWS

Mort Sahl, 32, born in Montreal to American parents, has become one of the most popular comedians on the U.S. nightclub circuit. Regarded by critics as the "thinking man's comedian," his humor includes satirical criticism of world events and politics. His trademarks are stage are a loose-fitting sweater and open-necked shirt. (CP from AP).

Canadian productions. He describes Vancouver's Civic Auditorium as "the best in North America." He terms some of Toronto's actors. "He has appeared on Canadian television programs.

The thought that struck him about Canadians is "that they seem to be more interested in our politics than their own." He figured the reason for the attraction is the bigness and wealth of the United States and because "American politics are more wellmilla than yours."

But he is fond of Canadians, endeared by the confusion that they are not "like the American nation of snobs;" that they are "saner" and more reasonable.

Sahl, once married to a college sweetheart, Joyce Haber, divorced, has come a long way from those earlier post-war days when he hoped to become an army officer and then lost the ambition; when he was graduated from the University as an engineer and lost his taste for that field.

He also has come a long way from the days when he hungered for nightclub work and was thrown down until one night in 1953 the Purple Onion, a small, low-priced nightspot in San Francisco gave him his chance at $75 a week.

HAS WIDE APPEAL

Since then he has amassed fans in low and high places. He has been close to the Democratic side of U.S. politics. One of his greatest fans is Adlai Stevenson but he fires cracks at both sides of the political fence.

He is an avid follower of the news. His day may range from 10 a.m. until 5 a.m. Every spare hour is devoted to newspapers, to the headlines and editorials.

What is the secret of his success?

Sahl doesn't say but in an interview he let drop at one point that "I say what is in peoples' minds." He seems to echo their worries and doubts fears and feel their sadness at the turn of social trends.

So they laugh with a touch of sorrow when he describes American soldiers in Korea who defected because "turncoats who stood steadfast."

"They refused to give anything except their name, rank and the exact position of their unit," he added.

And it may be the same kind of laughter and sorrow when he talks of the missile gap and says that if Russia steals all American secrets, "they'll be two years behind."

President-elect John Kennedy's youth, the religious issue in politics, the Democratic tactics of the American Medical Association—all these are targets for Sahl satire. Do those criticized become angered? No, says Sahl, "they graciously take it in good humor for I get very few letters."

And why with all his cash does he insist on wearing the schoolboy trousers, pegged; white shirt without tie and light beige V-neck sweater?

It is my trademark. The audience would feel cheated if I disowned it."

Senator Euler Urges Admitting China to UN

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States should drop its "foolish pretence that Formosa is China" and admit Communist China to membership, Senator William D. Euler (L—Ontario) said There day.

"China should be brought in, and representatives of the other countries should meet the representatives of China personally . . . and so lay the foundation for a state of coexistence, the alternative to which is a suicidal war," he told the upper house.

Senator Euler, Canada's minister of trade and commerce from 1935 to 1940, also called for greater trust of Soviet Premier Khrushchev. He had heard Mr. Khrushchev speak at the UN in September and considered him, although insulting to some extent, "quite sincere in his desire to avoid war."

In the final analysis, the only way to foster peace was to trust the Russians.

Senator Euler called for scrapping of Canada's Bomarc missile programme — "eminent military authority" — whom he did not name—had said the Bomarc was of no use as a defensive weapon even if equipped with a nuclear warhead.

Senator Euler made a plea for continued Canadian trade with Cuba.

He took sharp issue with Senator David Croll, also a Liberal, and also from Ontario. He said Senator Croll advocates that Canada "play the tail to the United States fife" in the matter of exporting goods to Cuba.

Crofton

CROFTON — Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Munro—and Keith—called on friends in Wellington, on Friday evening.

The sympathy of the community is extended to the family of Mrs. Alex. Mrs. George Sidney, who passed away at Prince Edward Memorial Hospital, on Thursday, when the funeral was held in the Ainsworth funeral home, Toronto, on Monday, Saturday. Interment at Burr's Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Munro attended the funeral of Mrs. Will Quigley, at the Ainsworth funeral parlors on Monday, at Wellington. Interment was in Burr's Cemetery. Sympathy is extended to the sorrowing family.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Salisbury and Janet of Belleville, spent Sunday with Mrs. H. Snider.

W. A.

The W.A. met at the home of Mrs. Richard Hall on Wednesday afternoon. An exchange of Christmas gifts were handed out from the beautifully trimmed tree and names were drawn for a secret pals for another year.

Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Walter Selder.

Tax Reductions May Be On Books In 'Baby Budget'

Finance Minister Will Give Details on Tuesday

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's fast growing export sales helped cut the country's deficit in international trade in goods and services to $114,000,000 in the third quarter of the year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

It was less than one-quarter of the deficit during the April-June period, and the smallest third quarter deficit since 1953.

Commodity trade produced an "unusual" $89,000,000 surplus during July-September, the bureau said. In April-June there was a merchandise deficit of $178,000,000.

Payments for so-called "invisible" items such as tourist travel, payments for foreign investments and freight costs, produced a $203,000,000 non-merchandise deficit. This was a reduction from a $288,000,000 deficit in the previous quarter.

This put Canada's balance of payments ahead during the first nine months of the year at $894,000,000 compared with $1,133,000,000 in the same period last year.

More than 95 per cent of the nine-month deficit was in merchandise non-merchandise transactions —$846,000,000. The merchandise trade deficit was cut to $130,000,000 for January-September from $419,000,000 a year earlier.

Meanwhile, there was a conviction that the flow of the foreign capital which has served to finance most of Canada's balance of payments deficit.

The bureau said there were two notable features: A "substantial" inflow of capital for direct investment in Canadian enterprises and businesses, and a "sharp" decline in the inflow of capital resulting from sales of stocks and bonds.

The country gained $146,000,000 in long-term capital during the third quarter—more than enough to finance the current account deficit in the period, but the lowest three-month figure since the final quarter of 1953.

In the first nine months, the inflow of long-term capital financed more than 95 per cent of the current account deficit.

Woman Dies And Frankford Driver Hurt

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Mrs. Marie Plunkett, 46, of Toronto, died Sunday night in hospital here of injuries suffered earlier in the day in a two-car collision at the intersection of Highways 115 and 28.

Three others remained in hospital today, all in satisfactory condition.

Mrs. Plunkett, driver of one car, suffered internal injuries to the chest, collarbone and left leg. Her son Allistair, 11, was released after treatment for minor injuries but another passenger, Mrs. Nell Plunkett, 40, of Mills was in hospital with chest and right arm injuries.

Mrs. Cecil Reid of Frankford, driver of the second car, had chest and knee injuries and her husband injuries to the ribs and right hip.

40 ACCIDENTAL DEATHS REPORTED ACROSS CANADA

Thirty of Victims In Road Mishaps

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Roads made hazardous by ice and snow produced a heavy accident toll during the weekend in Canada's two central provinces.

Ontario had a total of nine traffic deaths and Quebec 11 in a rash of one- and two - car crashes, most caused by winter conditions.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. local times to midnight Sunday showed a total of 40 accidental deaths across the country — Ontario leading with 9, Quebec 11, Manitoba 3, Saskatchewan 2, Alberta 4, British Columbia 6, Nova Scotia 2, New Brunswick 2, Prince Edward Island 1 and Newfoundland 1.

Fires claimed six victims, three of them in Ontario in separate incidents. In Scarborough, a Toronto suburb, David Marsh, two, died in a fire that police said exposed before hundreds of spectators in football park Sunday. He had wandered out alone 24 hours before.

The only shooting death involved Nelson Elijah, 22, of Kettle Point Indian reserve, near Sarnia. His shotgun went off accidentally.

Fifty-year-old Mrs. Cecil Davis, of Niagara Falls, Ont., was found dead inside her burning home. George Sunday. She is believed to have fallen Saturday night.

Other Ontario dead:

David Foster, 3, hit Friday night by a car while returning home from a church Christmas party in Campbellford. He died Saturday in Peterborough Hospital.

Dr. Harold Windrim, 60, killed in a collision between his car and a truck in London, Ont., on Saturday.

AB John Franklin Gyruky, 21 visiting his Woodstock home on Christmas leave from RCAF Bonavanture, died Sunday when his car plunged to the frozen surface of Mud Creek near Woodstock.

Miss Jules Butler, 53, of Brantford, killed Saturday night when her car skidded on an icy curve and hit a power pole near Simcoe.

Ten Persons Say They Saw Two Planes Collide

NEW YORK (AP)—Two teams of federal investigators began intensive questioning today of at least 10 persons who claim they saw the fatal Tuesday airliner collision—worst in aviation history.

As the Civil Aeronautics Board opened its inquiry, the exact fatal of dead still could not be determined.

Israel Denies It Seeks Atom Bomb, Is Engaged in Research With France

LONDON (CP) — The Israeli embassies in London and Paris confirmed today that France and Israel are engaged in joint atomic research but said it "in no way concerns only the use of atomic power for peaceful purposes."

Both Israel's ambassador to Britain, Arthur Lourie, and the Israeli Embassy in Washington denied reports published in London that Israel is trying to build an atomic bomb. Some of the reports said the French were helping secretly.

Information was said to have reached U.S. intelligence agencies that Israel would be capable of exploding its first nuclear device within a year. The Washington Post said Israel had developed a nuclear reactor sa- fellite within a few years.

Canada's Disarmament Hope May Be Lost in UN Shuffle

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) — Canada's disarmament hopes have at stake today as the 15th United Nations General Assembly tackles three of its toughest problems while driving for recess Tuesday.

The assembly's 96 member political committee was scheduled to debate disarmament and Canada's plea that a resolution for a renewal of East-West negotiations be put before the process which continues to March 7.

The assembly itself also moves to resume its debate on the situation in the Congo, Where—and if—this debate is finished today or tonight the assembly is expected to dive into the discussion of the Algerian Rebellion, now in its seventh year.

A 24-country Afro-Asian resolution was passed by the political committee Thursday, asking the assembly to recognize Algeria's right to self-determination and to decide a referendum for that purpose. "shall be conducted in Algeria, organized, controlled and supervised by the United Nations.

But a key paragraph failed to get the two-thirds majority that would be needed for adoption in the assembly. The vote was close, marked in doubt. France claims the 8-year Algerian war is outside the UN's jurisdiction and has boycotted all debates on the problem.

Two other resolutions were introduced by Afro-Asian countries to the UN assembly.

One of them, sponsored by 11 former French colonies in Africa, would have the General Assembly invite France and the nationalist rebels to negotiate on a cease-fire and a self-determination referendum.

A rival proposal, put forward by Cyprus, would have the assembly recommend a referendum in Algeria under UN auspices so that Algerians could decide their own future.

Of the three main topics of armament, the Congo and disarmament, Canada has expended most energy during the assembly's session on disarmament, although it also is keenly interested in The Congo as a cooperative force to help the UN Congo force and a member of Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold's executive committee.

While a total of 17 disarmament resolutions have been submitted, the political committee was expected to shelve at least half of them and perhaps more in view of mounting pressure against voting on any controversial issue that could further aggravate the tensions between East and West.

In actions Sunday the assembly:

1. Called on South Africa by a two-to-1 vote to revoke all race segregation measures affecting the mandated territory of South West Africa. It asked the UN committee to visit the territory to recommend ways in bring self-government there.

2. Voted 81 to 0 to hold a plebiscite in Western Samoa in late 1962, on independence for that former German colony now managed by New Zealand.

NATO to Wait for Kennedy Ere Deciding Nuclear Policy

PARIS (CP) — Ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization council ended Monday night on a U.S. proposal to equip NATO with a nuclear striking force.

The Scanlon ministerial council also shelved suggestions for a spring NATO summit meeting. It decided to reconsider the U.S. nuclear "concept." Chairman Dean Rusk of the United States and Green of Canada had made this proposal Saturday.

The U.S. proposal indicated they are ready to wait for the election of President - elect Kennedy, before deciding on their proposal, particularly the conditions under which they would use force pegged to polar missiles.

The first time a NATO summit meeting has been held entirely was in 1957 when the council decided to equip NATO with nuclear weapons ballistic missiles.

The three-day NATO talks that ended Sunday dealt with a host of other topics, but came to few conclusions. The impression the administration was not repre- sented.

President Eisenhower's top aides put forward the blueprint for a joint medium-range ballistic missiles under combined control in the apparent move to induce U.S. allies to forego independent nuclear programs.

But there was little immediate sign this manoeuvre would succeed. The reaction of the allies at it plain she intends to go ahead on her own atomic striking force.

The offer hinged on several big conditions, including a "satisfactory" agreement by the allies on how to pay for the force, and the changing of a U.S. law that now makes it illegal for the United States to put nuclear warheads in foreign hands.

This is the way the proposed plan would work:

Under submarines, each armed with 16 Polaris missiles with nuclear warheads, would be placed in the Mediterranean and North Atlantic command provided by NATO. Each submarine would control 160 missiles costing about $1,000,000 each.

These additional 160 missiles, including some solid-fuel Persh- ings, could be set on launchers on land or sea.

A spokesman at the NATO meeting put great emphasis on the flag of the ships programs. They said the United States has no hard times and her allies must shoulder a greater share of the cost of defending Europe.

Making his proposal for a NATO summit meeting, Green had suggested spring of 1961 at Ottawa or Athens as the meeting place. Secretary-General Paul-Henri Spaak of NATO said the Canadian proposal was "neither

$18,000 Missing From TCA Jet Flight to Malton

TORONTO (CP) — The RCMP said today it is investigating the disappearance of $18,000 in gold coins on a Trans-Canada Air Lines flight from London.

The coins, consigned to the Bank of Nova Scotia head office in Toronto, were shipped air express Dec. 14 on TCA jet flight 810. The package vanished before the plane arrived here.

Robert Bateman said the coins were to have been used for display purposes by the bank office.

The jet flew from London to Malton, Ont., via Toronto. It was not known whether the package left the plane before or after the last stop, Malton.

Airline investigators said an investigation has been launched and the Police Force, has been called in.

They said word may have been leaked that the package was carrying the gold in British and United States dollars and gold pieces.

BRIDGE REPEATED

The gold was aboard a London jet. It was not aboard when the plane left Montreal. After a search, the jet moved on to Winnipeg and Toronto and was also searched at both stops.

The gold was originally shipped by Zurich International Airport, Switzerland.

Superintendent F. H. Woode- Johnson of the RCMP said here he can learn nothing definite about how the gold disappeared."

It was the second shipment of gold to vanish from aircraft during or at departing from Malton.

On Sept. 24, 1952, $215,000 shipment of gold from Europe vanished from the tarmac as it was being to be loaded aboard a TCA North Star. It was never found.

DEATH FOLLOWS HUSBANDS

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A woman who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the shooting of her first husband 24 years ago has been charged with murder in the death of her second husband Ada Thompson McLamb, 52, was sentenced to two to five years, but it was suspended on pay of $500 fine, in the death of her first husband. Police said her second husband, Josephus McLamb 60, was found shot to death today.

MAIN BURGLAR ALARM CABLE CUT IN MONTREAL

27-Square Mile Area Cut off by Break

MONTREAL (CP)—Police said today the sabotage of cables connecting alarm boxes to the burglar alarms appeared to be the work of a single individual rather than part of an underworld plot.

"A man stood on a fence at 7 p.m. in full sight of telephone to chop the cable," assistant police chief Clement Rosner Lougher said. "It makes no sense."

Neighbors who watched two men cut the lead-covered cable with an axe attempted to call police but found their telephones were dead.

Police Sunday threw heavy patrol over the area affected and only one break-in was reported. Consolidated Mercantile Credit Company was entered but nothing was stolen.

FEARED CRIME WAVE

A heavy assault on the area by police Monday followed the first odd evening shift patrolmen have had to stay on duty through the night.

"A full investigation is to be made," Chief Inspector Lougher said. "But it appears to have been a single effort."

A spokesman for Dominion Electric Protection Company, the firm that operates the burglar alarms, said the culprit could not have disrupted all the alarms because it connected the alarms.

"We don't know its location myself," he said.

The police carrying more than 200 wires and connected to police headquarters and the Dominion Electric Protection Co m pany, provided protection for about 200 banks, trust companies, fur depots and other businesses in the downtown core area.

Police fears that the break was the work of an organized gang of burglars was based on subscribers found their telephones dead and several phones had their receivers ripped out.

Leo Tremblay, co-ordinating chief of operations, said early today "we're working on the assumption that the person who did this were after the big money."

The area cut off extended from Mount Royal to suburban Riviere des Prairies, 27 square miles from Ville St. Michel in the east to town of Mount Royal in the west.

While a Bell Telephone crew worked to repair the cable, the Dominion Electric provided police with 50 walkie-talkie radiophones in the area. Police were put on foot patrol.

Phone calls went out to some of the 180 other Dominion Electric clients whose protection was cut off and to go off duty at 4 p.m. and stayed on to guard premises and make night patrols.

A Bell Telephone official said the cable was severed at about 8:00 p.m. when a number of subscribers reported their phones were dead.

However, one couple reported seeing the cable being broken at 7:00 p.m. They told police they thought the men cutting an axe at the lead-coated cable. "It took about 15 blows."

200 Workmen Said Trapped By The Blaze

40 Burned or Injured, 3,500 Working on Craft

NEW YORK (AP)—A raging fire broke out today aboard the new U.S. aircraft carrier Constellation at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Early reports said at least 40 men were burned or injured.

An estimate of the number of men aboard, fitting out the $250,000,000 carrier for commissioning next March, was 3,200.

Men were seen jumping into the water from the 97,000-ton ship and a police launch picked up the dead and injured taken to hospital for treatment of burns.

Ambulances removed 20 men from the dock, and police said at least 20 more were waiting. At least 200 workmen were said to be trapped by the fire.

Police said the information came from a shipyard worker who was removed from the blazing ship.

Smoke poured up forward of the superstructure as rescue workers fought with hose lines and faces masked.

A construction worker said the fire followed a blast of aviation fuel.

Fifty fire trucks were at the pier. The boats played streams of water over the carrier's side to stellation from the harbor. The fire was just above freezing.

Police Fear An Increase In Death Toll

MUNICH (AP)—Police fear an increase in the death toll of the ski disaster that plunged this gay Bavarian capital into mourning during the weekend.

A total of 46 persons were known to have been killed after the crash of a Canadair transport plunged into a downtown street Saturday, sheared off a church steeple, exploded in flames and burned a crowded theatre for like a blazing mass of twisted wreckage.

Forty-eight bodies were recovered from the wreckage and one of the victims died in a hospital. But the charred condition of the bodies made identification difficult. Only 20 had been identified to all Munich families to report relatives had failed to return home.

It was learned Sunday that a Belleville, Ont., girl previously not listed among the dead was also aboard the plane and was killed in the crash. She was Pte. Elvira E. Sherman, 20.

All 29 Americans aboard the plane were members of a group of young students at the University of Maryland's Union College here, children of U.S. military personnel, and were bound for a holiday reunion with their parents in Britain.

Trading Stamps Said Legal By Supreme Court

OTTAWA (CP) — The legality of trading stamps and the validity of Canada's largest chain food company were upheld today by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The ruling in a unanimous decision dismissed an appeal by Attorney-General of Manitoba Attainin Gerow and judgment ruling that stamps issued by Dominion Grocers Company (Manitoba) Limited and its subsidiary Dominion Grocers Alliance store are not illegal lotteries and fall within the meaning of the Criminal Code.

The Manitoba appeal was heard in October by a bench of Justice Patrick Kerwin. Mr. Justice Gerow wrote the main reasons for judgment and Mr. Justice Ritchie concurred in by Justices C. H. Locke, Roland Ritchie, Douglas Abbott and Ronald Martland.

Mr. Justice Gerow also wrote supplementary reasons.

Evidence in the cases against the chain was given at trial that a customer—a Winnipeg detective —received stamps on the purchase of goods. He asked for 1,000 stamps in addition and in one case was given two or three cups and to the other a pretty pin.

Magistrate C. W. Tupper of Winnipeg found the two companies not guilty and his decision was upheld in Manitoba county and court by the Manitoba appeal court in a 3-2 decision.

The majority decision of the Manitoba appeal court said the Criminal Code spells out in specific terms the circumstances which make up a trading stamps lottery and the fact that the stamps in question are redeemable at any time on demand puts them outside the code.

Moscow Accuses Portuguese of Repression

LONDON (AP)—Moscow Radio broadcast today that Portugal is attempting to "drown in blood" growing demands by its African colonies for freedom.

The broadcast claimed reports published in Lisbon said that Mozambique and Angola had declared

It gave a list of alleged incidents dating back to March 29, 1959, and stated that thousands of Africans had been shot or jailed since then.

On the March date, Moscow claimed, police in Angola arrested hundreds of Africans in Luanda, Angola, on suspicion of participating in the liberation movement.

'Not at All to Taste of Orthodox,' Green Grates on Tory Colleague

LONDON (CP)—"Mr. Green is not at all to the taste of the orthodox."

That was the Guardian of Manchester today in an aside on the leadership of the NATO council, which ended yesterday ministerial session Sunday.

The reference is to remarks made by External Affairs Minister Howard Green in Canada about the impact of colonial issues on NATO.

In a discussion Saturday marked by unusually plain speaking, Green challenged those who raised the question at NATO support in the United Nations on colonial issues affecting such NATO members as Belgium and Portugal.

Several other foreign ministers spoke in the same vein.

Sharp opposition came from some other countries, particularly France.

The Guardian's account of the colonial debate says:

"The Americans seem to have put through it all in generous silence. Lord Home, the British foreign secretary, used some gentle humor about Canada's sensitive colonialism; but some of those present detected a certain tension between the Queen's two Tory foreign secretaries.

"Mr. Green is not at all to the taste of the orthodox."

The dispatch is under the byline of Leonard Beaton, former Ottawa correspondent who now is the Guardian's defence correspondent.

Beaton says the debate indicated some sarcastic references to an "Oslo-Ottawa axis." This alludes to the tendency during the last decade or so for the external affairs department of Canada and Norway to operate on a remarkably similar wave length.

Canadian officials have themselves acknowledged this affinity in foreign policy between the two countries.

CITY HALL CLOCK HAVING HARD TIME TO STRIKE RIGHT HOUR

Cold weather, old age, or may be just plain lost of attention, is slowing down Old Betsy, the city hall clock.

Old Betsy is still keeping time but her striking mechanism is apparently out of whack — just an hour out that is.

When it is one o'clock, Old Betsy comes through with as even dozen strokes of the gong and so on around the clock.

Maybe someone could have it fixed.

FIREMEN AWAIT RETURN OF HELMET

Like the English ghost who roamed the castle looking for his head, the Belleville Fire Department is looking for a fireman's helmet. Unlike the English ghost, who apparently didn't know where his head was and had to search for it, the local firemen know where, or at least who knows where their helmet is and are waiting for it to be returned.

It was lost from a fire truck at the Canniflon cloverleaf at Highways 401 and 33 when firemen were answering a call last Monday at about 10:30 a.m. A local resident observed the occupants of another vehicle stop and retrieve the wayward helmet and reported the car's license plate number to the local department.

Says Fire Chief Gerald Vance, "I can't understand why they haven't returned it as yet, but they have only 48 hours more before we shall have to turn the matter over to the proper authorities."

GRASS FIRES IN DEC. KEEP FIREMEN BUSY

Local firemen were quite busy, to say the least, over the past weekend. Ten alarms in all were answered the majority of them being grass fires.

On Saturday there were two such fires. Both on Marshall Road at 1:22 p.m. and the other at the end of Pine Street at 2:36 p.m. With the exception of a false alarm at 10:05 a.m. there was no other activity on Saturday.

Sunday was quite different however with a total of five alarms for a raging grass fire on Bay Drive in Bayview. The first alarm came in at 11:10 with additional alarms being sounded at 1:20 and 1:27 p.m. A recurrence of the fire occasioned additional alarms at 3:24 and 5:46 o'clock in the late afternoon before the trouble was finally stilled.

Other alarms on the Sunday were a local gasoline on College Street at 11:36 a.m. and an investigation at 102 Byron Street at 10:15 p.m.

Service of Thanksgiving Ends Centennial Celebrations Of Belleville Masonic Lodge

Centennial celebrations of The Belleville Lodge, No. 133, A.F. and A.M. were concluded Sunday at an afternoon divine service of thanksgiving in the Masonic Temple on Foster Avenue. Rev. A. M. Laverty, chaplain of Queen's University, was the guest minister, whose sermon concerned "Thoughts on Christmas".

The Belleville Lodge was founded December 22, 1859, and a few years ago moved into a new temple on Foster Avenue. Scores of Masons and their families attended the service, and were welcomed by Wor. Master C. A. Stanley Smith. Greetings from the Grand Lodge were extended by Rt. Wor. J. R. Gregg and the invocation was said by Wor. Bro. Smith.

Two solos were sung during the service by Bro. James Bentley.

The responsive reading was led by Very Wor. Bro. E. F. Smith and Bro. George A. E. Mountford read the lesson from the book of St. John.

In his sermon which was personally inspired by lifting, not by trampling underfoot, it is in forgiveness of self, that peace is found.

"We stumble upon the secret at Christmas, when the magnificent lie valies, we let it slip away," added Dr. Laverty. "The spirit of good will and forgetfulness of self, which is abroad at Christmas creates a feeling and taining a happiness we know at no other time, it is almost like an out—and with it goes our peace. For the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace.

"The Jesus of the Manger and the Cross spoke a lie to the conscience of mankind.

"Something else His life tells us it speaks forcefully and persuasively of the truth that God is with us and not against us as most have so often feared," he said.

Following the service, wives of the officers of the lodge were entertained during a buffet lunch.

He was the son of the late Charlie and Cassie Young of Ameliasburg, and came to Manitou forty-seven years ago. His wife, Annie, survives; also two brothers, Harold and Clarence of Ameliasburg.

Three Inches Snow Dumped On District

Belleville and immediate district had its first taste and sight of real winter Saturday morning with residents waking to find that Old Man Winter had dumped three inches of snow on the ground.

Saturday night approximately the same amount of snow had fallen in the Picton, Napanee and Kingston districts.

Apparently well prepared for the first evidence of snow, the city's public works department had its snow removal equipment out during the night with most of the city's main and sidewalk system being plowed at an early hour today.

Snow shovels also got their first workout of the season as householders turned out to shovel sidewalks and paths.

City and provincial police reported no serious accidents as result of the slippery streets but that did not mean motorists did not have their troubles.

Many of the grades in the city were reported slippery as were highways leading into the city.

Possibly one of the more slippery spots was No. 14 north on Bees Corners where traffic was tied up for some time as southbound motorists stalled on the hill. A bus and several cars were reported involved in minor mishaps, ranging from sideswipes to rear-end collisions.

Parties Involved Advised to See Their Solicitor

Belleville city police have ruled as being outside their jurisdiction a weekend slapping incident involving a man and woman on a local parking lot.

Police say the parties involved have been advised to see their solicitor if they wish to carry the matter further.

It seems a lady motorist had left her car parked near the loading door at the rear of a Front Street place of business. A truck driver wishing to unload and finding the doorway blocked with the ladies automobile re-locked the ignition and moved the car.

Then the lady returned and asking what business the man had in moving her car, slapped his face.

Not to be outdone, the man in question slapped the woman back.

The women called the police.

After hearing the story the police advised it was a civil matter.

A. O. Drysdale Helps Present Brief to Frost

A. O. Drysdale of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, a director of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, was a member of a delegation that took body which met recently with Premier Leslie Frost and members of his cabinet. Mr. Drysdale is manager of the Canada Cement plant at Bath and Anne, proposed more intensive education and technical institution as a remedy for unemployment.

The meeting was arranged so that the Ontario Chamber's policies and resolutions which were adopted at its annual meeting could be presented. It is understood that the Ontario Premier offered the full cooperation of his cabinet in respect to the Chamber's plan for improving the facilities and wares to the province of the Trent-Severn Waterways.

IN MEMORIAM

ANDREWS. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, John Andrews, who passed away December 19th, 1959.
Remembrance is a golden chain.
Death cannot break that link.
To have, to love and then to part,
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
Time years may wipe out many things
But this they never can
The memory of the happy days.
When we were all together again.
—Sadly missed by wife Edith and family.

ANDREWS. — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, John Andrews, who passed away December 19th, 1959.
—Ever remembered by son Jack, daughter-in-law Jean, grandchildren Jack, Judy and Wayne.

FRY. — In loving memory of a dear son and boy-friend, Harry, who passed away December 19th, 1959.
Sunshine memories outlasts all.
Lovely remembrance outlasts all.
Sorrow remembrance is the bitterest thing.
Memories Mind and Heart and brother Percy.

FRY. — In loving memory of a dear brother, Henry J. Fry, who passed away December 19th, 1959.
Just a thought sweet remembrance, dearest.
Just a memory and end true;
Just the love and ever devotion.
Of those who think of you.
—Sadly remembered by sister Hilda, Toronto.

TOPPING. — In loving memory of a loving husband and father, Ross Topping, who passed away December 19th, 1959.
Who has taken suddenly one year
Without a word of warning.
We are left to cry and today, dear Ray,
But then it's nothing new to us
We thought about you yesterday,
And we'll think of you tomorrow.
We will think of you forever,
We will think of you always,
For to us you were so dear.
—Sadly missed by wife Ruth, with Sonnie and sons Donald and Kenny.

BCI Glee Club Stages Fourth Annual Pageant

The age-old story of the first Christmas was presented by the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational Glee Club Sunday afternoon as they staged their fourth annual Christmas pageant, "The Great Deliverer."

The school auditorium was packed almost to capacity for the annual Christmas pageant directed by Mr. G. H. Cassidy who in the words of School Principal, Mr. C. E. Phillips, "has come up with something bigger and better each year."

Colorful costumes and realistic stage lighting added to the enjoyment of the three act pageant.

First scene of the pageant had its setting in the temple where citizens gathered to talk about the promised coming of the Christ Child. Second scene was along the road to Bethlehem and the final act was the Nativity scene with Mary, and the Christ Child at the front, surrounded by the shepherds, and the Three Wise Men at the villagers in the background sang "Adeste Fideles."

Adding to the enjoyment of the two-hour show was a double quartet composed of James Fisher and Cathy Cook, first soprani; Hugo Fortin and Kenneth Bond, second soprani; John Tooth and Jim Jarvis, tenors; and Gordon Twiddy and John Coombe baritone.

Hotels, Liquor Stores Open On Election Day

It is election day in Belleville today, but the governments liquor stores, hotels and wine shops and local hotels are not observing the "dry" rule.

In all instances the policy is "business as usual."

Under ordinary circumstances hotels, liquor and beer stores would be closed by the order of the day of any federal, provincial or municipal election.

But today in Belleville there is an election only for one Separate School trustee and one for the League Locarno Act, a Separate School board election does not call for closing of stores or hotels.

Election for public school trustees do come under the act, however, and for this reason hotels were closed in Belleville two weeks ago when there was a by election for trustee in Ward 4.

There was little advance poll interest for today's Separate School Board election with just a vote being cast at the advance poll at city hall.

Legion Christmas Concert Well-Attended on Sunday

TRENTON — The second annual children's Christmas concert was held in the Legion Hall yesterday afternoon. Ken Craddock, vice-president of the Legion branch, acted as master of ceremonies and the program was under the direction of Mrs. Irene Prime.

A ray doll act, staged by Bill Sells of Belleville and little Miss Valerie Sells, was, in the opinion of the audience, the "producers' entertainment. Few people present were able to guess until part way through the act that the loose-jointed, wobbly rag doll was, in fact, a child.

Equally popular were tap dance numbers by Judy Lynne McKnight of Belleville. Judy's love of hula hoops came to the tap dancing routines. Her reputation as a hula hooper spread far beyond the borders of the Quinte district.

The opening number on the program, which featured the singing Morrow sisters of Stirling (Ruth, Helen, Margaret and Kate), proved to be the hit of the leading lady, little Miss Debbie Lee Kinsella, although some what reluctant to step onto the stage to portray a sleeping child on Christmas Eve, was equally reluctant to leave the set and proceeded to take bow after bow.

The candy canes were: Barbara Lee, Lorraine Huber, Kerry Dale Ligaire, Lianne Jeffery, Roberta Lee Thomas, Marguerite and Susie Gravelle, with Rosemary Bate at the piano.

A reindeer ballet starred: Beverley Bain and Glenda Crich, with Debbie Johnston, Patsy Kelly, Shelagh Cavil, Mary Clare Andrews, Susan Petrie and Susan Fleming.

Following the program, the youthful orchestra and the children in the audience were given a pre-Christmas treat of chocolate milk and cookies.

Legion Party

TRENTON — More than 200 children, dependents of Legion members, attended the Legion Christmas party Saturday.

Santa Claus distributed candy and chocolate milk. Entertainment was supplied by a film and Roger McGhee.

President Bill Lawson extended a welcome to the parents and their children. Party arrangements were under the direction of entertainment chairman George Ament.

James F. Day Will Continue Construction

TRENTON — Builder James F. Day, who excavated the base of a hill below a 320,000-gallon water tower, said today he will ignore the Public Utilities Commission's protests and continue construction.

Commissioner C. A. Baker said children playing in the area might be buried alive if the 35-foot, 90 degree bank collapsed and hinges to be bonded if the task tipped over.

Mr. Day said the whole thing was "absolutely ridiculous" and that he would continue construction until stopped by a court order. He said that when he purchased the lot the town knew he would have to dig into Mount Pleasant in order to get enough room on which to build a house.

He said none of his critics really knew what water tanks are all about, because they weren't engineers. He would be glad for someone to fall off the mountain by walking a few feet back to the town-owned side where a 200-foot drop existed, he added.

Christmas Gifts Catch Fire In Cupboard

TRENTON — Firemen were called to the home of Ross McGeachy, 25 Middle St., Saturday evening when fire broke out in a pile of Christmas gifts hidden in a cupboard.

Although damage was slight Fire Chief Cecil Ellis stressed the "near-miss" from more extensive damage as the house formed part of a frame terrace block. Had the fire not been discovered and put out quickly, other parts of the building might have been affected.

The department also answered a call Saturday to the Rhine and Danoh paper company where a switch on a piece of machinery became overheated.

A car fire and a grass fire took the fire department to Sidney.

CANDLELIGHT SERVICE

TRENTON — A candlelight and carol service was held in King Street United Church on Sunday afternoon with the senior and junior choirs participating.

Soloists were Mrs. Earl Cruikshanks and Leonard Coverdale.

Miss Frances Keeler played a violin solo during the offertory.

The senior and choirs were accompanied by church organist, Roy Kendall and pianist Norman Harris.

Estimate Damage At $1,175 As 5 Cars Hit

TRENTON — Police investigated seven accidents on town streets yesterday. Most of the accident were attributed to the snowstorm and slippery streets.

One chain-reaction was set off when a car driven by Joseph Valcher, 28 Henry St., Stirling, was in collision with a car driven by Edward Tebb, 17 Water St., Trenton, then was in collision with another car driven by Lambert M. Bertoli, R.R. 3, Trenton with a car driven by Lambert car, driven by Vic Tesolin, R.R. 1, Trenton, slid sideways, struck a fifth car, owned by Irene Moriarty, 109 King St., which was parked in front of home.

Damage to all five cars was estimated at $1,175, the Bertoli and Valcher cars receiving the most extensive damage.

Jimmy Uttley Night at Club

TRENTON — Although Jimmy Uttley is unrelated with Mrs. Uttley in England, the traditional "Jimmy Uttley Night" was held at the Canada Club Friday night.

The program was arranged by Don Hasty, Jim Duncan, Lloyd Worrall and Bruce Cardy, members of the veterans and associate ranks of the club.

More than 100 persons joined with the Salvation Army corps singing carols with the Army band providing background music. Following the caroling, club members enjoyed dancing and a social hour.

FIRE DEPT. PARTY

TRENTON — Full-time and volunteer members of the fire department entertained their wives and children at a children's party Sunday afternoon. The children enjoyed a visit from Santa, who brought gifts galore; two films and chocolate milk and cookies. The mothers were not forgotten, each one receiving a large box of chocolates.

SEE TARIFF CHANGE

One important tariff change seems likely in the budget. The throne speech announced the government's plans to revise the tariff definition of goods "of a class or kind made in Canada."

Under this decision, imports of goods of a class made in Canada, lower rates if they are not of a kind made in Canada. The practice has been to grant higher tariff protection if Canadian production of the imported article exceeds 10 per cent of total Canadian consumption of it.

The government's budgetary expenditure estimates for the year now total $2,369,020,323—excluding an expected $500,000,000 for old age pensions which aren't counted in budget accounts. Not all of these appropriations are spent in full.

But there will inevitably be further government spending estimates to come before Parliament before the fiscal year ends. As yet there has been no request for additional money for the dwindling Unemployment Insurance Fund, or for increases in veterans' disability pensions forecast in the throne speech.

Belleville Man Writes Article For Magazine

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — An article by Rudi L. Swerdfeger, of Belleville, Ont., answers the question "Why Do We Want to Teach?" in the January issue of the Southern Baptist family magazine, Home Life.

First, make sure there is time in the family schedule for friendly talks with a teenager, suggests Mr. Swerdfeger, a social worker. Then have something to say to him, something that will stimulate, encourage and guide him. Finally, say it in love, not scolding or condescending — not as a judge handing down a verdict.

"Home Life" is published by the Baptist Sunday School Board here and is distributed monthly through Southern Baptist churches.

Two Northbrook Youths Charged With Theft

Two Northbrook youths, Leslie Marshall 18, and Ronald C. Thompson, 17, have been charged with the theft of approximately $35 in groceries from a car parked on a local parking lot.

The groceries were recovered at Northbrook by police and returned to their rightful owners.

Police say the two Northbrook youths had met in with an escapee from the Woodstock boys' training centre, who allegedly stole a car at Tavistock. The boy from the Woodstock school is not believed to have had anything to do with the grocery theft.

Struck by Car, Campbellford Boy, 5, Killed

CAMPBELLFORD — David Foster, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Foster, Campbellford, died Saturday in Peterborough Civic Hospital from injuries received when he was struck by a car on the Bridge Street W., at 10 p.m. Friday night.

Campbellford police report that the boy darted out of the entrance of the Pentecostal Church with his mother and sister and was struck by a car, skidded directly into the path of a westbound lumber truck driven by Charles Potts, 19, of Campbellford.

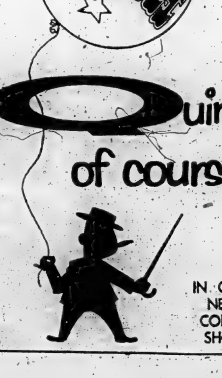
The boy and Mrs. Foster had attended the Sunday School Christmas party at the Pentecostal Church.

He was taken to Campbellford Memorial Hospital. Later, when surgery was found necessary, he was rushed to Civic Hospital in Peterborough in a Campbellford police cruiser by Police Chief Sam Baird and Const. Clarence Donoghue.

He died of injuries shortly after arriving at Civic Hospital.

No charges will be laid against Potts.

David is survived by his parents and five brothers and sisters, Mary Jane 12, Florence 12, Stephen 10, Agnes 11 and Leon 8.



An inquest has been ordered.

Lost Problem

There was an old song which inquired, plaintively, where the flies went in the winter time. If one starts to think about it, it is an intriguing question. But nowhere near as intriguing as what has happened to some of the problems of other years.

For instance, a quarter of a century ago the question which was frightening the social workers of this country was how Canada was going to curb the production of morons. The mentally defective, we were told, were producing large families and, in the course of time, the whole population would have this taint in their blood. There was talk about the imperative necessity for the legalization of forcible sterilization of the mentally unfit.

Whatever happened to that problem? By this time, if the experts had been right, we should have been flooded by morons. And we are not. Oh, it is true that today we hear a great deal about the problem of the mentally retarded, but it is made plain that children so handicapped come from families where parents and brothers and sisters are normal. They are not the same children whose arrival we were once awaiting with dread.

Of course, the days when the picture of a country populated by congenital idiots was being painted were days of depression, when the birth rate was at a low ebb. It wouldn't be correct to say that nobody in his right mind had children in those years—but certainly many did avoid starting families, for reasons which could have been either selfish or completely unselfish. The mentally defective just did what came naturally. But surely the flood of births since hasn't just buried that crop of morons which we were so earnestly predicted.

Just what happened to this problem, anyway?

Surplus Teachers and Homes

Times change.

In North York a current squabble centres around the fact that the school board has on its payroll 110 more teachers than it needs to staff all the rooms in its schools.

It is true that these teachers have been kept busy acting as supply teachers and instructing special classes. It is also true that there will apparently be a shortage of teachers in the near future, as 100 of the regular teachers in North York are quitting, most of them because they are about to become mothers, which should absorb almost all the "surplus" and leave nobody available for "supply" work made necessary by illness and similar routine problems. Still the difference between this situation and that which was common only a few years ago, when many rooms lacked properly qualified teachers, is striking. How much of the difference is real and how much is the result of a difference in emphasis, we do not know. Perhaps not all the "surplus" North York teachers are really qualified. Still, it is interesting, almost as interesting as learning that there are 2,000 unoccupied homes in the township, a sharp contrast with the acute shortage of housing accommodation which once existed.

Unemployment Costly

The Windsor Star, dealing with the effects of unemployment, makes an important point which, we suspect, is too often overlooked. Unemployment insurance not only benefits workers, it says, it costs the governments, federal, provincial and municipal, a lot of money. Governments, of course, get their money from taxpayers.

"Private employers," says the Windsor Star, "may save themselves money by dispensing with workers. This saving, all too often, is at the expense of the taxpayers." That argument needs to be carried one step further. Private employers are also taxpayers. Some of the money they save by laying off workers they have to pay out in additional taxes. We wonder whether there are not occasions when, with a little fore-thought, men might be kept at work, with profit to all.

Marie Antoinette's dog house sold recently for $15,000 at a Paris auction. Some wealthy Parisian is evidently looking for a comfortable place of refuge in case his Christmas gift selections fail to make a hit. (Stratford Beacon-Herald.)

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THAT COMPLETE SUFFICIENCY.

Are you afflicted with fear? Efficiency at present is sufficient to what do you fear most?

A hundred persons to whom these questions might be addressed would probably give many kinds of answers, but the majority would undoubtedly say that whether they fear most is the uncertainty of the future. Will we have enough money to get through and live comfortably in our declining years? Will our children be able to fulfill the ambitions we have for them? May disease strike us down, or our loved ones? You may say that this is a fear about money and accidents and disease, but basically it is a fear about the uncertainty of the future.

We need always to remember that everything is in the hands of God. For He who is our sufficiency, as atomic bomb in 1,000 times the power of the present bombs. At the bikini test, a destroyer half a mile away sank in five minutes.

People caught in the open within some miles will be blinded for life, the heat and light flash will burn to a crisp unprotected flesh and collapse within miles. Unprotected wood, miles away, will be scorched all with a swiftness beyond the perception of man. In some hilltop animal miles who is unprotected will survive the blast, but the land may be poisoned for many months or years, depending upon the radioactivity used.

For those who are concerned with greater detail of a hydrogen bomb, it is the result of a hydrogen bomb produced by the fusion of light atoms. The hydrogen bomb as it is called. Although it may not necessarily be a hydrogen bomb, it is unprotected will survive the hydrogen bomb, but hydrogen bombs will not accomplish destruction until they are heated to 100's of millions of degrees C.

The easiest stage of a clean strike hydrogen bomb is a fusion and explosion an atomic bomb is the encircling of a wrapping of hydrogen fusion fuel. The atomic bomb explodes and heats the hydrogen fusion fuel, these fuse and explode. The process releases tremendous energy. (The hydrogen and tritium which is a gas — they must be solid or liquid). About 15 lbs. of tritium fusing would have the power of 15 megatons.

A more complicated sequence (dirty) hydrogen bomb is where an atomic bomb start a tritium-deuterium reaction which produces enough heat to start deuterium-deuterium reaction plus the heat of an atomic bomb produces enough heat to start deuterium-deuterium reaction plus the heat of an atomic bomb explodes and heats the hydrogen fusion fuel, these fuse and explode. The process releases tremendous energy. (The hydrogen and tritium which is a gas — they must be solid or liquid). About 15 lbs. of tritium fusing would have the power of 15 megatons.

When one nucleus of uranium is split into two it flies into two parts and gives off a ray of, also gamma radiation. (This process is called fission).

When the two nuclei of two hydrogen atoms fuse together in a passionate embrace, the nuclei disappear and one atom of helium is left behind. But the one atom of helium does not equal the weight of the two atoms of hydrogen, so, the difference has gone off in energy. (Heat and gamma radiation).

Finally a hydrogen bomb is billions of billions of billions of hydrogen atoms that come together or fuse in pairs or other combinations, but as the pairs combine, the difference in the new atom that takes the place of the two "parents" over the two parents and the difference is given off as radiation.

To have enough hydrogen in a compact enough space to manage requires that hydrogen atoms be frozen, and at 435 degrees below zero Fahr. will turn to a solid in a contracted form. So, the hydrogen must be kept below a cold at 435 degrees below zero. Before the fission will take place the hydrogen will have to be heated to millions of degrees C. temperature. How can this be done?

Speaking generally it can be done in this manner. An atomic bomb in the middle of the hydrogen solid — some must be in a container in a fraction of a second to a temperature (millions of degrees) whereupon fusion will take place. A hydrogen bomb, unlike the atomic bomb, will be of any size. Hydrogen, unlike uranium, has no critical mass — but it must be triggered by immense heat to fuse — to explode.

Put another way — an atom bomb will go off by itself by merely placing the correct amount of uranium together in one piece — boom! A hydrogen bomb won't do that — it has to be heated to millions of degrees to explode.

LITTLE FALL-OUT

With a hydrogen bomb there is heat, concussion, radiation, but little fall-out (what is called) to remain behind to destroy animals and man for years to come. A hydrogen bomb, in essence can be a clean bomb.

The nations of the Russians and the U.K. have found ways of making a hydrogen bomb clean. Nations that will publish that will poison the air and the land in which the bomb falls.

The atomic bomb that fell on Hiroshima was said to be equal to 20,000 tons of TNT. The latest hydrogen boms are at least 2,000 times more powerful. If one is released the result will be horrible.

Temperatures will reach into the millions of degrees. It will depend upon how high above the ground the bomb is exploded as to how much induced radioactivity there will (the points) that hangs around the neighborhood to be carried by the winds may take 10 years to kill — but kill it will.

Large buildings would be push ed over bodily up to several miles from the point of explosion. Buildings would be squashed like a pie. Many cars would be. Debris may be carried for miles, carrying like a ball in a China shop. Section damage will be immense. Major damage to homes may extend up to 20 miles in, all directions, and minor at twice that distance.

Four square miles of Hiroshima were totally destroyed by

The Hydrogen Bomb

BY HON. ROBERT W. MACAULAY
Ontario Minister of Energy Resources
ARTICLE #3

The process of creating an atomic bomb can be used for a vast variety of peaceful uses quite beyond destruction. It's a great advance that man cannot utilize for construction, rehabilitation and medical treatment the money he is setting aside for destruction.

Every moment of time to time returns to what seems to be some of the lower instincts and wipes out lives by the thousands or hundreds of thousands, as if he had been issued a passport to oblivion or a mandate for destruction.

Every process of destruction of the past, including the atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, can be dwarfed — by the hydrogen bombs — (dirty or clean) — of the future (powerful nuclear drops one in anger, with or without provocation).

So we all realize that it may not be long before many nations, large and small, can possess their own arsenals of atomic or hydrogen bombs thanks to the centrifuge and other processes of refining uranium. Would Castro have let a hydrogen bomb go had he had one? Would Hitler in the Middle East struggle — would the frequent South American revolutions? Who knows? Who is to say? But his risks are too frightening. We can do nothing about it.

If a atomic bomb is the fission or splitting of the nucleus of a uranium atom in a rapid series of chain reactions (see previous article).

DIFFERENT PRINCIPLE

A hydrogen bomb does not work on the same principle at all.

A hydrogen bomb is the fusion or joining of light nuclei, instead of the splitting of a nucleus.

When one nucleus of uranium is split into two it flies into two parts and gives off a ray of, also gamma radiation. (This process is called fission).

When the two nuclei of two hydrogen atoms fuse together in a passionate embrace, the nuclei disappear and one atom of helium is left behind. But the one atom of helium does not equal the weight of the two atoms of hydrogen, so, the difference has gone off in energy. (Heat and gamma radiation).

Finally a hydrogen bomb is billions of billions of billions of hydrogen atoms that come together or fuse in pairs or other combinations, but as the pairs combine, the difference in the new atom that takes the place of the two "parents" over the two parents and the difference is given off as radiation.

To have enough hydrogen in a compact enough space to manage requires that hydrogen atoms be frozen, and at 435 degrees below zero Fahr. will turn to a solid in a contracted form. So, the hydrogen must be kept below a cold at 435 degrees below zero. Before fusion will take place the hydrogen will have to be heated to millions of a second to be heated to millions of degrees C. temperature. How can this be done?

Speaking generally it can be done in this manner. An atomic bomb in the middle of the hydrogen solid — some must be in a container in a fraction of a second to a temperature (millions of degrees) whereupon fusion will take place. A hydrogen bomb, unlike the atomic bomb, will be of any size. Hydrogen, unlike uranium, has no critical mass — but it must be triggered by immense heat to fuse — to explode.

Put another way — an atom bomb will go off by itself by merely placing the correct amount of uranium together in one piece — boom! A hydrogen bomb won't do that — it has to be heated to millions of degrees to explode.

LITTLE FALL-OUT

With a hydrogen bomb there is heat, concussion, radiation, but little fall-out (what is called) to remain behind to destroy animals and man for years to come. A hydrogen bomb, in essence can be a clean bomb.

The nations of the Russians and the U.K. have found ways of making a hydrogen bomb clean. Nations that will publish that will poison the air and the land in which the bomb falls.

The atomic bomb that fell on Hiroshima was said to be equal to 20,000 tons of TNT. The latest hydrogen boms are at least 2,000 times more powerful. If one is released the result will be horrible.

Temperatures will reach into the millions of degrees. It will depend upon how high above the ground the bomb is exploded as to how much induced radioactivity there will (the points) that hangs around the neighborhood to be carried by the winds may take 10 years to kill — but kill it will.

Large buildings would be push ed over bodily up to several miles from the point of explosion. Buildings would be squashed like a pie. Many cars would be. Debris may be carried for miles, carrying like a ball in a China shop. Section damage will be immense. Major damage to homes may extend up to 20 miles in, all directions, and minor at twice that distance.

Four square miles of Hiroshima were totally destroyed by

"If he's looking for a donation from me for the building fund, he'd better start pulling some of his punches."

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

December 19th, 1930

Seventeenth, British war guests will get their first taste of a Canadian Christmas Tree, Santa Claus and all the holiday trimmings on Friday, when the members and the officials of the Imperial Veterans' Association will play hosts to them and to the children of their own Association in the annual Christmas party. The little Britishers will be special guests of honor, and nothing is being left undone to make their first Christmas in Canada a typical one.

Flight-Sergeant Edward Smith and Mrs. Smith of Ottawa, spent the weekend with the brother of the latter, Mrs. Willow of Catherine St.

Mrs. A. F. Sillman has returned to her home in Woodstock after visiting friends in Belleville and Ontario.

Miss Margaret Fairbairn of Charles Street is visiting her sister, Mrs. Richard Jacoby in Detroit.

Patronesses at the annual Assistant Ball to be given by the Cadet Rangers are: Mrs. Leo S. Biggs, Mrs. W. N. Poxon, Miss Ivy Dickens, Mrs. T. Arnott, Miss Annie Tuite and Miss Hilda Collings.

Members of the Army and Navy in Canada took No. 201, visited the home of the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. Herbert Willetson of Shirley Street, and presented Mrs. Willetson with a token in appreciation for the services rendered so faithfully by the association by her husband.

Spider Helps Build Roads

Christian Science Monitor

In the days of old it was the spider and the fly (as we were helped a king reclaim his throne). Today there is the spider helping to build roads! Rather indirectly, to be sure, for roads are an engineer's project. But down in Texas way there's a Black Widow spinning yarns of web that ultimately will be used as cross hairs in some 2,200 levels and transits, which are optical instruments at the state highway department.

She doesn't work cheap; 50 feet of her web costs $15 — and "no feely no work's". However supplied a fat fly she can produce as much as $100 worth of silk at one time.

The valuable thread is coaxed from the spider by simply pushing her from a small rack, and by keeping her so suspended she spins the single strand which is then carefully rolled onto a bar. Only this single strand, and not the multiple strand which is used in textiles, is fine enough for the cross hairs in the instruments, and the web is also rigid enough to stay straight.

Medium-sized spiders are said to do the best job.

Although one poet exclaims, "the spider's touch, how exquisitely fine", yet this gossamer strand is strong enough for second round of antibiotics and antihistamines. She's hardy to boot, and my head aches day and night. But I must say I can see nothing wrong with my web. Would being allergic to something and causing me EARS."

Serum antibiotics, especially if heavy doses are needed, can cause tinging in the ears. Sinus pinch on the pocketbook.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

TENSION, NOT EXERCISE, INJURIOUS TO ULCERS

Dear Dr. Molner: Do setting-up exercises — bending, stretching, jumping, kneeling before and after meals? I have a duodenal ulcer. Some sort of exercise in the morning would be more alert to start the day's work.

"However, for the last six months, since I knew I had an ulcer, I have stopped all exercise, as a great deal of walking because I work for the city. I have played a lot of golf, but have stopped that, too, being I am so anxious to heal the ulcer.

"I would like to go back to exercises and golf if they will not interfere with the healing of the ulcer. — E.D.K."

There are varying degrees of ulcers, naturally — some big, some small; some healing, some long standing. By the same token, ulcers do not duodenum take varying times to heal."

Bear this in mind as I give you the answer.

An ulcer, in a simple sense, can heal more readily if the patient has complete physical rest. That is, the ordinary activity for all ulcer patients. Obviously some patients cannot limit their usual work. They might. It is true, got past the severest stage where the ulcer patient takes a complete rest for a time. But it is just as practical, because there are lots of things that would be harmful for us, in many more ways, but, we can't always afford them.

Now another point: Exercise, in itself, is not injurious to the ulcer. But one has to weigh the possibility to exercising and have complete rest, at the same time. Follow me?

Now let's go a step further. After six months or sticking carefully to your diet and following, after-meal rest periods, as your physician specifies, I see no reason why moderate exercise of the types we're discussing should not.

After six months, with suitable care and following instructions, it is reasonable to assume that an ulcer is pretty well healed.

There is one thing to keep in mind. Exercise, or exercise, to the point of fatigue, is not going to be good for an ulcer. Nor is it good for the person who is subject to ulcers to get himself all tired out in sports that create tension. Tennis and golf, if used in the right way, are two of the things that contribute to ulcers.

Therefore, let the ulcer patient judge himself honestly. If he finds he is getting tired, he needn't worry about the game or the exercise. It is the type of fellow who is struggling every minute to get a good every minute to get a good every minute to get a good lead over his opponent that is the fellow who is struggling every minute to get a good lead over his opponent that is the fellow who is struggling every minute to get a good lead over his opponent that is the fellow who is struggling

Retarded, Crippled Kiddies Enjoy

The Shriners' Christmas Party

The light of excitement and sheer enjoyment shone in their eyes.

It was reflected in the eyes of their hosts.

It was not an ordinary Christmas party with its gay, carefree laughter of happy, healthy children.

It was one of those intermittent period days that brings untold joy to retarded and crippled kiddies and a glow of happiness to members of the Belleville Shrine Club.

Saturday in the handsome new wing of the Shrine Club, some forty of these less fortunate kiddies revelled in the Yuletide celebrative atmosphere.

Party committee chairman Noble George (Mickey) MacDonald, and his aides saw to it the children lacked for nothing.

They had cookies, chocolate milk, ice cream, candy, coloring books, movie cartoons, stage entertainment topped off with the big thrill of the afternoon, handsome gifts presented personally by Santa Claus.

The Shriners proved perfect hosts. The wing was colorfully decorated. A brilliantly illuminated Christmas tree drew the kiddies' wonder and admiration. A mechanical Santa flashing varied lights added its effect to the Yuletide scene.

Children voices raised in happy chorus as Christmas carols were sung, led by pretty Miss Sheila Canning and backgrounded by the piano wizardry of Jimmy Corradi.

Shrine perfect Noble Ken Vivian acted as master of ceremonies in the absence of Noble "Mickey" MacDonald. He had fine support in the efforts of Nobles L. Crawford, Orliff Lloyd, R. Sargent, Jack Allis, Alex Pierson, Allan Dempsey, John Weese, C. MacBrien, Fred Preston, Doug Storey, H. Plumpton, Harry Abbott and others.

FINE CONTRIBUTIONS

Special mention should be made of the fine performance of Noble Bram Humphreys in the leading role of the afternoon.

Other fine contributions to the success of the party were those of Mrs. Audrey Parkhurst, chairman of the Retarded Children's Association and her associate Mrs. R. Johnson; Mrs. Ethel Kellar of the St. John Ambulance, Miss Canning and her talented group of youngsters and Mr. Tom Stovell and Miss Constance Stovell for their stage entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Stovell staged a "Punch and Judy" performance that had the children a half-hour of sheer delight and a lot of the Shriners a touch of childhood nostalgia. It was brilliantly executed. In a fine professional manner.

Miss Canning a "veteran" of Shrine Christmas children's parties, marked her tenth annual appearance as an entertainer. She made her debut at the tender age of seven as a singer and dancer.

An outstanding stage attraction in her own right, Miss Canning has taught a class of youngsters that showed fine talent in their performance at the party.

In the group were Miss Canning's nieces, Shelly Douglas and Lynne Langman and nephew Brian Douglas. Others were Sharon Warner and Wayne Warner, son and daughter of the group's fine pianist Mrs. Shirley Warner.

Miss Canning offered a solo "Christmas in Killarney" and "The Christmas Song". Brian and Shelly were heard in solo and duet and the entire group in chorus numbers.

The children also enjoyed the fine entertainment provided by the movie cartoons supplied by the Kiwanis Breweries. They were presented by Elmer Hardy the company's district representative. Shrine appreciation to Carlings for their contribution to the children's' enjoyment was expressed by club president Vivian.

Crippled children from Belleville, Trenton and Tweed were present.

High School News

By SHARON PLENDALL AND GAYLE McDOUGALL

"Santa Claus is coming to town."

Old St. Nick will be here four days earlier this year to be on time for the Keyettes' Mistletoe Magic, Dec. 31.

Each noonhour lately a crowd of sweet-toothed students can be seen in the rotunda buying their Keywie Kandy Kane. Not only the students of Moira like them, but also a certain Math teacher has shown his weakness by "borrowing" bites from the candy canes of the fairer sex.

The Keyettes of Moira have heard that it's more blessed to give than to receive, so they are collecting toys and food to make someone's Christmas happier.

Although students have shown little interest in setting up assembly programs this year, three groups have set a good example if others will only follow.

The Student Parliament's assembly was a parade of talent and the participants deserve credit for a job well done.

On another occasion Mr. Wallington gave an interesting talk encouraging the students to consider careers in chemistry.

Last week G-11-A presented their protegee, highlighted by four of their boys' version of the Highland Fling.

Fourteen boys and three girls demonstrated their skills on the mats, parallel bars, horse, balance beam and in doing exercises at the Boys' Athletics assembly last Wednesday. Mr. Perry, recently appointed head of the Physical Education department, climaxed the program with a lightly humorous definition of the rule of an official.

In keeping with the Christmas spirit the Library was decorated by the energetic members of the Library Club. Bells, streamers and wishes for a Merry Christmas adorn the walls and blackboard.

The Keyettes are planning to decorate the whole school early this Saturday morning, following the tradition started last year. A special occasion next week will be the Christmas dance "Mistletoe Magic," to be held in Moira's gym from 8.30 to 11.30 at regular dance prices. Come out to meet Santa Claus and share the fun under the mistletoe.

2nd Brownie Pack Holds Enrolment

FRANKFORD — The 2nd Frankford Brownie Pack held its enrolment ceremony and Christmas party in Frankford Community Hall, Wednesday evening.

The enrolment ceremony which was preceded by games, was performed by Brown Owl Margaret Vancoy and Tawny Owls Mary Johns and Janet Turner.

The following new Brownies were enrolled: Paulette McLean, Melinda Wetlaufer, Helen McHutter, Margaret Turner, and Eleanor Townes.

Five Brownies, who earned their Golden Bars this year were: Ruth Rose, Deborah Hamilton, Gloria Patrick, Ella McMillan, Bonnie Turner.

Following the ceremonies, the Brownies entertained their parents in the lower auditorium with some Brownie songs and Christmas carols.

Gifts were exchanged after which the Brownies served refreshments to their parents and Mrs. M. Machala, district commissioner.

Bags of candy, supplied by the local association, were then distributed and the meeting was closed by the Brownie "Taps", and the Brownie "Squeeze".

Foxboro W.I. Holds Yuletide Meet

The Christmas meeting of Foxboro Women's Institute was held in the hydro evening at the home of Mrs. M. J. Waller with 32 members and visitors in attendance.

Words of welcome were voiced by Mrs. C. Bamber, president, who presided.

Mrs. William Hodgson led in the singing of "Joy to the World", with her own Hawaiian guitar accompaniment.

Thirty Christmas gifts had been received and were arranged by individual members as the meeting. These will be delivered before Christmas to Senior Citizens of the County now in residence at Hillcrest County Home.

A sum of money is to be sent to the Salvation Army for their Christmas Relief Fund.

A committee was appointed to purchase and deliver gifts to the shut-in residents of the village.

The story of the First Christmas from the Gospel according to St. Luke, was read by Mrs. M. J. Waller and several carols sung in unison. A Christmas reading was given by Mrs. J. E. Reynolds and a humorous one on the exchanging of Christmas gifts by Mrs. C. H. LaRue.

Nancy Reynolds and Roseanne LaRue delighted their audience with two duets, "The Holly and the Ivy" and "White Christmas".

Mrs. H. G. Gay, leader for the course on "Window Treatments" was in charge and expected that 20 ladies will complete this course before Summery Day, February 22.

Two most interesting demonstrations were given by Mrs. J. Ewing. The first was a large Sands Mail Bag made out of red oilcloth in the shape of Santa himself. The mail to be deposited in his tummy just above his belt. The second demonstration was the making of a beautiful green and gold Christmas Spray to be hung on the door during the festive season.

This was made with weeds and evergreens, the only cost being the gold paint.

Everyone took part in a Christmas contest which was won by Mrs. William Hornbrough her prize being the aforementioned Santa's mail bag.

A delicious party lunch was served.

Woman Cabinet Minister Happy In New Post

VICTORIA (CP) — The slim little woman looked at the pile of mail on her desk and remarked: "I feel something like a John F. Kennedy the Second."

Mrs. Bula Brown was obviously overwhelmed by the public reaction which followed her appointment last month as minister without portfolio in Premier W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit Cabinet. She is the first woman to sit in eight years.

"I've had the most marvelous letters from all sorts of people—businessmen, housewives, servicemen—congratulating and encouraging me. I've got a lot to learn and this is wonderful encouragement."

American-born Mrs. Brown, 38, has attended all cabinet meetings since her appointment Nov. 18. She found them "pretty well what I expected—but of course roundtable meetings are nothing new to me."

Mrs. Brown has long been a member of various youth and other committees at Vancouver where she represents the Big Point Grey riding. In her new job she's been so busy getting established she hasn't got down to making any recommendations or starting any projects.

But when she does they will be mainly in the field of human relations — welfare, correctional institutions, rehabilitation and the like—things she has long dealt with in private membership.

She has been a member of the legislature for four years. Her husband—Gene, 41—is a progressive Conservative member of the legislature during the Conservative-Liberal coalition government from 1941 to 1952.

The wife of a Vancouver business man, Mrs. Brown has a married son and is a "grandmother cabinet minister." Her two grandchildren are David, 14, and Sue, 11.

Former Spanish Tennis Queen Still Quite Active

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MADRID (CP) — In a country where women are definitely the second sex, one of the few whose personality shines strong and clear is Lili Conderas de la Valdesa, better known as Lili Alvarez.

Once the toast of international tennis, now a writer and lecturer, she is one of Spain's leading feminists, as sartorially active as in the brilliant days when she swapped aces with Suzanne, Helen Moody and tennised in mixed doubles with Jean Borotra, the bounding Basque.

Thirty years ago, her trim good looks and dashing play captivated centre court crowds at Wimbledon. They christened her "La Senorita." She spoke five languages fluently, excelled in skiing and won automobile races in Malaisia.

"She was the belle of the ball," a friend recalled. "She could have married anybody."

For three seasons she was the world's No. 3 woman player, losing the 1926 final to the mighty Helen Moody. "La Senorita" could raise her game to great heights but the poker-faced American was the steadier player.

BECAME REPORTER

After retiring from tennis, Miss Alvarez married the Spanish Civil War for a London newspaper and settled in Madrid which she considers a "homelike" capital.

Today, slim, chic and distinctive, she wastes no time on nostalgia. Matriarch of the Bourbons not just "compensations" for life in the French Riviera, she's writing on a book about men and women and doesn't envisage a dull moment.

She holds firm views, quietly expressed, but copious of comments, a reporter recalled them: "Spain is a country of contrasts, there will be "shooting in the streets" within three weeks. The Spanish Victory Dance is "inspiration" in their faces and great personality in their color. But Frenchwomen are the richest and most fulfilled of all, combining depth of culture, with womanliness and sophistication.

"Of course, I am very keen on the Spanish woman. In one way, she is a rather lazy person but in another she is infinitely successful. She goes as a real opening occurs. Some of the taboos disappear, she will show that she is made of real good stuff."

With the pride of an indulgent parent, she took a Canadian reporter to talk to students at the University of Madrid. On the way back, she ordered the chauffeur to follow a pleasing car.

"Look! That's what I mean about this resourcefulness of Spanish women."

The young motorist driving had a baby on her lap, handling the steering wheel; another child in the front and three in the back.

The brown - haired Miss Alvarez, in her 50s, was born in Rome, was a serial beauty champion at 11 and spent the next 20 years in a suitcase. She still stresses physical fitness and writes occasionally of a special link between sport and religion. "The latest book, on lay spirituality, has gone into its seventh edition.

Intellectually alert, she thinks all women should furnish their minds. At one point, we stopped to watch the "farrare types" — the pretty young girls of Madrid who spend hours "arranging themselves" and then go to admire portals on the boulevard of that name.

"Poor things! They think there is nothing to do in life but look pretty."

Tabernacle E.A. W.M.S. Meet Jointly

On December 14, a joint meeting of the afternoon and evening groups of the W.M.S. was held in Tabernacle United Church.

Brief business items were conducted by Mrs. R. Ketcheson, president of the afternoon group.

Mrs. J. M. Smith, president of the evening auxiliary for their executive group.

It was reported that a large bale of used clothing had been shipped by the WMS and thanks were expressed to the Keen Age Club for paying the shipping charges.

Mrs. J. M. Smith sang the beautiful solo "O Holy Night."

After joining in a sing-song of Christmas carols, the ladies were addressed by Mrs. Post-ion of Centenary, who spoke on "Christmas Customs in Far-off Land," as she remembered them.

Women's Institute

CHATTERTON W.I.

The December meeting of Chatterton W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. R. Denville with 15 members and two visitors present. The president presided at the meeting.

The business was short, say outstanding bills were paid. A donation of $10. was bought for the U.N.E.S.C.O., a project for Thailand.

Plans were made to give gifts and cash vouchers to shut-ins of the community for Christmas.

A gift was presented to one of the members from Holland, who had just received her Canadian citizenship papers.

New names for the year's scrapbook sisters were drawn. The convener, Mrs. Gerald Irvine, took over the meeting with an interesting program.

The Christmas story was read and the following book part as the story was being read, a solo by Mrs. Gardner, "Away in a Manger" sung by Miss Hilla Carson and Miss Greta Tuismall, a guitar solo by Mrs. Douglas Frost, "Silent Night."

Mrs. Frost Maclinnes gave a piano solo, "Star of the East" and Miss Marilyn Denville a reading, "For Christmas Eve."

Games and contests and the exchange of friendship sister gifts concluded the meeting.

A large portion of canned goods for the Salvation Army was turned in.

The hostess and assistants served lunch with a demonstration of baked "Alaska" which was enjoyed by all.

Community Ladies Hold Stork Shower

FRANKFORD — A member of Ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. Harry Hains on Wednesday evening to honor Mrs. Jerry Vagg, in a stork shower.

Mrs. Hains' dining room was decorated with pink and white streamers and the large clothes basket centred the dining room table decorated in pink, blue and blue.

The social evening was enjoyed. Mrs Vagg opened her lovely gifts and thanked her kind friends.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Hains, assisted by Mrs. M. Wrightly.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a woman's page editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and see it work here.

Charlotte F.— I feel like a machine, not a person. I must get away.

Leo F.— I can't get away from my job. Why should Charlotte?

Charlotte F.: We're married 13 years and have four children, three in school and a two-year-old toddler. Lately I've felt so grouchy I don't know how my husband and children put up with me.

Even though I get a good night's sleep and am in good health, I wake up tired. I drag myself through all the routine as a housemaker and mother, even to fixing a pretty face for the benefit of Leo and the kids.

But I'm not enjoying anything. My food has no taste, the cute things the children say don't really register, and I wonder what's happened to my pep.

I don't know where to go or for how long. All I know is I can't get straightened out going around in circles this way.

Leo F.: Running out is no answer. I get the same feelings of being pushed, and hurrying around and getting nowhere, but I stick to my work in the grocery store and after a while the feelings go away.

Charlotte is too conscientious. She's a perfectionist. The baby's white shoes get polished three or four times a day. The pots and pans in the kitchen shine like a row of mirrors. All that takes a toll on her pep, and leaves less for the kids and me.

I tell her to take a nap each afternoon during the baby's rest. Maybe that'd perk her up. But instead she opens the sewing machine, irons curtains or makes out lists of what she plans to do the next day.

I know Charlotte loves me and the children. She can show it the way I do, by sticking to her job.

The Council: Both Charlotte and Leo would be amazed at what just 24 hours Absent With Leave could do for the weary wife and mother. Instead of telling Charlotte to get back on the track ("telling," by itself, is useless), Leo could perform the rescue operation by offering her a whole beautiful weekend of solitude, silence and separation from kith and kin and kitchen!

She'd come back a new woman. After "sleeping it off," she'd be able to commune with herself, "hear herself think," and survey her life from the outside looking in instead of from the bottom of a heap of chores which keep her from seeing the full outlines of things. At present she's too drained and depleted to sort out what's important.

Most husbands can work out this sort of "leave" for a harried homemaker. It just never dawns on them; alas, that time is the answer for stitch grumpiness, depression and ineffectiveness. The gal feels too "driven" and sees no relief in view. Breaking it up with a short "recess" gives her a breather in which to count her blessing!

The religious can do this in their "retreats." The wealthy manage it easily. All Charlotte needs is a chance to get her values straight, to decide what's first, second and third in her life.

Leo's similar feelings of futility can often be dissolved in the course of his work, with it many contacts and innovations. Women like Charlotte, however, who lose their sense of direction and purpose can usually regain it by the simple — though rarely tried — expedient of going A. W. O. L. which in domestic terms can stand for Absent With (Husband's) O.K. and Love.

Christmas Dinner Menu 1960

By Mary Moore

We have had a little consternation — Eleanor and I. The question was would you like to have my suggestions for your Christmas dinner menu this early in the week? I would certainly want to know one week in advance what I planned to serve on Christmas Day and so would she. So here it is.

CHRISTMAS DINNER MENU

Christmas Star Canapes (see below), Christmas Cocktails (see below), or Broiled Sugared Grapefruit Halves (see below); Roast Turkey (see tomorrow); Giblet Stuffing (see tomorrow); Rich Brown Gravy (see tomorrow); Cauliflower with Shrimp Sauce (highly recommended—see below); Creamy Mashed Rutabaga Scallop or Delicate Mashed Turnip; Individual Asparagus and Tomato Salads with Lemon Mayonnaise (see below); Plum Pudding (given here November 14); Hard Sauce (given here November 16th); Salted Nuts; Assorted Fresh Fruits; Coffee.

CHRISTMAS STAR CANAPES

Cut day-old white bread into star shapes and fry on one side in butter until under side is golden. Remove and drain on unglazed paper. On unbuttered side spread

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

MONDAY

Homemade Pea Soup; Cheese Omelette; Hard Rolls; Individual Fruit Salads: Bananas Dipped in Marmalade and Chopped Nuts, Grapefruit Sections, Pineapple Crescents with Fruit Cream Dressing; Coffee.

anchovy paste thinly and top with olives from stuffed olives.

CHRISTMAS COCKTAILS

(Serves 12) 4 cups hot water, 2 cups sugar, 1 small can crushed pineapple, juice of 3 lemons, juice of 4 oranges, 1 26-oz. bottle canadian water, and food coloring.

Prepare a syrup of the water and sugar and boil 15 minutes. Cool. Add fruit, juices and red coloring to make bright red. Add carbonated water at serving time.

BROILED SUGARED GRAPEFRUIT

Cut large chokes grapefruits in halves and remove seeds. Cut out centers. Loosen pulp from membrane with sharp knife. Sprinkle each half with 1 teaspoon sugar and a few shakes of Angostura bitters and place on broiler rack. Broil 4" from burner until hot and flecked with brown.

CAULIFLOWER WITH SHRIMP SAUCE

This is very popular. In lightly salted water to cover boil a large cauliflower broken into flowerets until crispy tender. Drain and turn into a pre-heated serving dish. Pour over Shrimp Sauce. Heat 1 can of fresh frozen cream of shrimp soup with ¼ cup commercial sour cream (or light sweet cream) and ¼ cup blanched, toasted, slivered almonds. Season with a little salt and pepper and pour hot over cauliflower in serving dish.

INDIVIDUAL ASPARAGUS AND TOMATO SALADS

Carefully remove asparagus tips from cans and drain well. Allow 3 stalks for each individual serving. Place side by side on small lettuce leaf. Arrange three small wedges of tomato beside

MODERN MANNERS

— Carolyn Wagner Shaw —

DO YOUR SMOKING MANNERS STINK?

On a recent airplane trip, I noticed a young woman who was seated next to an elderly gentleman. Busily occupied in puffing on a cigaret she was completely oblivious of the fact that the smoke was blowing directly in the face of the man beside her. Finally, in desperation, he turned to her and, with great dignity, asked, "Does my not smoking annoy you?"

This little incident brought home to me how thoughtless we sometimes are with regard to the effect our actions have on others. Smokers particularly seem to be very inconsiderate of the asparagus. Top asparagus with a small spoonful of lemony mayonnaise.

Note: Tomorrow I'll give you details for roasting your turkey and stuffing and making giblet gravy.

those about them. Why can't they realize that non-smokers are entitled to politeness and consideration?

During the next few weeks you will probably be mingling with more people than usual. Are you going to go blithely along, blowing smoke in their faces, or are you going to smoke in an unobtrusive way, making sure that you bring annoyance to none. How about checking the following questions? If you answer them honestly, perhaps you may stumble on some bad habits you may not even realize you possess!

When you are talking, do you always take the cigaret out of your mouth? If you don't, you should. Nothing is more unpleasant than to try to make conversation with someone who mumbles a cigaret at you as he talks.

Do you always ask permission to smoke, when you join a group where it is evident that no one is doing so? Some think this is an outmoded custom. I don't. It's common politeness to ask permission.

Of the male gender, do you always throw your cigaret away immediately, when you stop to chat on the street with a woman acquaintance? You are not being a gentleman if you don't!

Do women who smoke on the street realize how unfeminine it looks? Take a peek at yourself in a mirror in a store window sometime, and you will see what I mean.

When visiting in someone's home, do you adhere to the following good manner when smoking: If no ashtrays are on the dining table, do you take the hint and not even ask if you may smoke? Do you forego putting a cigaret out as anything but an ashtray? Dropping them into used cups, glasses or on the edge of dishes is not only messy, it is unpardonable.

"Do you chaperone your cigaret, or do you let it go out alone?" This slogan, adopted by an insurance company, is a clever way of warning those who leave lighted cigarets hither and yon. Charred furniture is only a minor result of this vicious habit, cultivated by many otherwise thoughtful people. Many lives have been lost each year, and millions of dollars in fire damage because of this carelessness.

DEMONSTRATE — A group of sign-carrying marchers demonstrate near the Russian embassy in Washington in protest over trade negotiations between Canada and Cuban government of Premier Fidel Castro. The demonstrators walking along Massachusetts Avenue were forbidden to get closer than 500 feet to the embassy, which is not visible. (AP Wirephoto)

Anti-Castro Placards Seen At Embassy But Canadian Woman Pickets Picketers

WASHINGTON (CP) — Nine-teen shivering Cubans, carrying anti - Castro placards in chilly weather, demonstrated at the Canadian Embassy Sunday while a tall, attractive Canadian woman picketed the picketers.

"I resent this," said 35-year-old Sybil Dennis of Vancouver, a stenographer of the Pan-American Health Organization. "If these people are mad at Canada, who don't they picket the Cuban Embassy and leave Canadians alone."

The demonstrators, urging that Canada not increase trade with the regime of Premier Fidel Castro, claimed their "Ranks had been thinned by threats of reprisals against their families in Cuba."

Dr. Ramon Escandon, a young physician who co-organized the march, told police he received threats against his own life and that many of his associates had been threatened by a Castro government representative at the Organization of American States.

He had hoped that 120 persons would turn up—he got only 19 women and nine men. One of them was accompanied by a five-year-old daughter. She was taken out of the parade when photographers trained their lenses on her. Her father said he didn't see anything to happen to her. Police asked Escandon whether he wanted special protection but whether he would place formal charges against one of the Castro representatives he named. Escandon declined.

Some of the women demonstrators said they received telephone calls Saturday night warning of reprisals against their families in Cuba.

They said this was the reason some of their friends did not turn up.

However, Hector Esterer, one of those who led demonstrations at the Canadian Embassy last Monday, said his own associates decided Friday night their point had been made and that another demonstration was unnecessary. He did not turn up.

On Friday Canadian Ambassador Arnold Heeney received a formal note from the so-called Cuban Democratic Revolutionary Front which operates in the United States — deploring any pact which would provide Castro with essential goods cut off by a U.S. embargo.

The note emphasized that any future government replacing Castro would not "honor any obligation or agreement of the present Marxist regime of Fidel Castro."

Heeney was reported to have replied immediately that he would have no big trade deal pending between the governments of Canada and Cuba. He also referred to government statements in Parliament that Canada was not not allow trans - shipment of American-made goods to Cuba.

The demonstrators Sunday were kept by police 100 feet from the embassy in accordance with local rules against picketing in front of diplomatic missions.

The Cubans marched in a circle carrying placards which bore such statements as Lovers of God, Freedom and Democracy, Join Picketing Against Canada's Aid to Cuba; Canada is Sweeping Civ! Democracy; and Canada —Don't Help Communist Government.

Miss Dennis, who served with the women's division of the RCAF during the Second World War, turned up with a sign scribbled in red chalk saying: Cube, Not Canada, is Communist. Canada Fought for the United States.

Police allowed her to march by herself on the ice-caked side walk about 20 feet from the Cubans. The whole affair lasted about a half-hour. Later some of the Cubans came by to read Sybil's sign, but made no comment.

Sybil said she is a native of London, England, who became an Canadian after RCAF service. old made Vancouver her home. Barents Sea last July 1.

Lobster Fishing Industry Hard Hit by Storm

HALIFAX (CP)—Gales ripped the Maritimes Saturday for the second time in six days, toppling small buildings and further crippling Nova Scotia's south shore lobster fishing industry.

One fisherman was drowned when his small boat overturned off the east coast about 30 miles from here under winds up to 90 miles an hour.

The lobster industry suffered heavy losses up to 60 per cent in a 65-mile-an-hour wind and snow storm which swept the Maritimes last Monday. Many fishermen now figure they have lost all their traps and plan to quit. The season is three weeks old.

BLAMES REDS'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Saturday blamed the Soviet Union "and its partners" "forthefrstrickdarkness" for the fratricidal war in Laos. It condemned as illegal Russian delivery of arms to Leftist rebel forces. The U.S. also demanded anew the prompt release of two U.S. airmen held in the Soviet Union on espionage charges since their RB - 47 aircraft was shot down over the Canadian-Born Woman Active in California Politics Named Treasurer of U.S.

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)— Mrs. Elizabeth R. Smith, a Canadian-born woman active in California politics and with a background in business, was picked Sunday by President-elect Kennedy as treasurer of the United States.

She is the first woman named to a top government post in the new administration.

Mrs. Smith, 60, a hard-working Democrat will take over the $17,000-a-year post now held by Mrs. Ivy Baker Priest, a Republican.

Announcement of her appointment was made at a press conference here by Kennedy's press secretary, Pierre Salinger.

Mrs. Smith, a Democratic national committeewoman from California, was present in Palm Beach.

Mrs. Smith, who lives in Kentfield, Calif., was once co-owner of a dress shop, worked as a newspaper feature editor, and on the public relations staff of the local Red Cross. She has been a close political ally of Governor Edmund Brown of California and is a member of the governor's advisory committee on business.

She was born of American parents in Montreal, and grew up with the city's elite. At the age of 21, she elected to become an American.

She majored in Far Eastern civilization at Michigan University and in 1931 studied with the Coco Foundation in San Francisco, a private organization training men and women for careers in public affairs.

She has been active in Democratic politics since 1946, and a national committeewoman since 1956. She was a director of the Rose Mackinburg Company, Lincoln, of Montreal, which she owned with her two brothers. The firm was sold last June.

MARRIED TWICE

Mrs. Smith has been married twice. Her first husband was killed in a fall when his polo pony bolted. Her second marriage, to Frederick H. Smith IV, ended in divorce last year on grounds of extreme mental cruelty.

She has a 17-year-old son, Donald, and a married daughter, Mrs. Robert Crawford of Milford Village, N.Y.

Few days administrations, the treasury post has been held by a woman. Before Mrs. Priest—an Eisenhower appointee — President Truman named Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark of Richfield, Kan., as treasurer.

Santa Reverses Usual Direction To Stage Party

GREAT WHALE RIVER, Que (CP)—Santa Claus reversed his usual direction Saturday and travelled 800 miles north to stage a mammoth party for Indians and Eskimos at this quonset-hut community on the shores of Hudson Bay.

The barren waste of this subarctic radar post was all tinsel and trimmings with merry Christmas spelled out in Cree, Eskimo, French and English. But the sentiment was etched with more whimsy in smiles on the children of 95 Eskimo and 87 Indian families who were showered with gifts from the RCAF and the northern affairs department.

Cast in the Santa Role, was Air Commodore J. R. Harvey, chief staff officer, Air Defence Command. His Christmas run was from St. Hubert, Que., in a plane loaded down with more than 2,000 gifts for the 400 natives who live at the base with the 175 white residents.

THOSE TWO BEAUTIES

The day featured dog - team races, snow-shoe sprints and two beauty contests — one for the Crees and another for the Eskimos.

Judges chose Mrs. Caroline Mesty, a 46-year-old widow with a winning smile, over 15 other contestants. Mrs. Mesty's husband, Jacob Weetahuk, 30, wils of an Eskimo interpreter, took the other crown over 24 contestants. She had her infant son Jim cradled on her back.

Red was the predominant color in the Indian women and while for Eskimo.

Eskimo jigs and reels, where a single dance can last up to half an hour, ended the party.

SLIDE KILLS NINE

PINEROLO, Italy (Reuters)— A landslide thundered down on the mountain village of Prarnolo at dawn Sunday, killing at least nine persons. The victims were two entire families of five men and four women.

Mute Boy Dies Of Exposure On Bluff Slopes

TORONTO (CP)—A five-year-old boy, mute since birth, died of exposure early Sunday on the bleak slopes of Scarborough Bluffs after apparently wandering aimlessly for hours, unable to ask his way in 20-degree temperature.

The body of David Marsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Marsh of Scarborough in east-end Toronto, was found by a dog owned by a member of a party which had sought him for almost 24 hours.

David was the fourth member of his family to meet a tragic death. In late three March children were lost in a fire. His parents had required months of treatment for shock after being informed of the fatal blaze. There are three other children.

David wandered from the home of his grandfather, Harry Marsh, where the family had been visiting, about 11 a.m. Saturday. He was found Sunday morning by Arthur Martens and his pet poodle, when the dog began barking and led him to the body of the boy.

David died because he had not the resources of a normal boy. He was unable to call out to searchers and could not ask for directions.

At times 700 persons were involved in the hunt for the boy.

They were recruited by mobile loudspeakers. Additional searchers were asked for from the pulpits of many Toronto churches Sunday.

FIGURET

A.R.M. Peter peeked into the bag of fruit. "Peaches, eh!" he exclaimed."And some pears. Just what I like."

"Yes, I know," Mary told him. "The pears are for Wendy as many cents each as the number of peaches I get, and the peaches cost as much each as three of the pears. The whole lot cost a dollar."

The must have taken quite a while to figure that out.

How many had she bought?

(Answer tomorrow)

Friday's Answer

$1.04 altogether.

Canadian Soldiers Serving In Every Part of World

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian soldiers will be spending Christmas this year from the Middle East to the Far East, from the Arctic Circle to the Congo equatorial belt.

In 1960 the Canadian Army completed a decade of the most extensive operations in its peacetime history. Canadians served under the United Nations, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and at home in the vital role of planning national survival in nuclear war.

More than 67,000 Canadian troops helped fulfill Canada's international obligations in the last 10 years. Half saw service in the Korean War. Another 30,000 kept Canada's 2,500-man NATO brigade group at full strength in West Germany.

Others are serving with the UN Emergency Force on the Gaza Strip and with the truce commission in Indochina. Canada also has soldiers serving as UN observers in Palestine, India, Pakistan and Korea.

Regular and militia forces are taking part in the planning for national survival under nuclear war. Army commitments include early warning of attack to the Canadian public and re-entry operations in devasted areas.

The army aims to qualify all troops in first aid under the St. John Ambulance and 17,000 soldiers have already received official certificates. Mobile columns are planned for national survival duties involving the regular and militia units.

In London, Ont., the 2nd Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment has maintained a state of combat readiness as Canada's standby force to assist the UN if called upon.

CELEBRATE 50TH

PORT ROWAN (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Chester J. Thompson Sunday celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. They have lived in this Norfolk County village for the last 40 years. They were married in Port Wilkam.

Minor Hockey

The Peewees played their final games prior to the Christmas holidays at Memorial Arena Saturday morning with once again close scores featuring most games.

There will be no Peewee or Bantam hockey next Saturday morning but will resume on December 31.

The Blue shaded Quinte by a 3-1 score. A Picard and D. Lambert scored the Maz goals and J. Kiesz assisted on one. Lambert saved Quinte from a shut-out with an unassisted marker.

The Browns edged Canadiens 3-2 with B. Parsons banging the game's only goal on a play with F. Goodfellow.

Maple Leafs also chalked up a one-goal victory, squeezing past the Black Hawks 3-2. D. Lenz, A. Bradley and D. Bland triggered the Leaf goals, all solo efforts. G. Rumley netted both Hawk goals with R. Musgrove helping on one.

Red Wings blanked the Rangers by a 4-0 count, L. Moore was a two-goal man for the Wings while L. Hatchford and S. Tebworth had a goal each and D. Roper one assist.

A three-goal performance by R. Hannah sparked the Bruins to a 5-1 victory over the Barons. R. McDougall scored once and assisted on two other markers while F. Noble also scored. J. Hobbs had the Baron goal with an assist for J. McCreary.

Rangers and Red Wings battled to a 4-4 tie in one of the five Bantam hockey league games played Saturday morning.

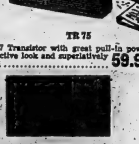
Scoring for Bruins, Chadsteis and Macs took vicffries in the other games. No games are scheduled next Saturday but play will resume on December 31.

The trio of Fullerton, Olsen and Harrington looked after all the Ranger points in their spirited with the Red R. Fullerton had two goals and an assist, D. Olsen had one and two assists, Harrington had one and one, B. Loft, G. Muir, J. Pearson and L. Elder scored for the Red Wings. Muir, P. Forbes and D. Hewitt drew assists.

Maple Leafs edged the Black Hawks 2-1 with goals by D. Maddison and Bob Tomaso. K. Hannah replied for the Hawks.

L. Stewart scored the winning goal and assisted on another as the Bruins shaded the Barons 3-2. B. Hallam and F. Hitchie also scored for the winners. D. Adams and R. Post were the Baron marksmen. R. Drydale, J. Ling and R. LaPrim drew assists.

Macs defeated Quinte 3-1. J. Blakely, R. Eves and J. Dolan had a goal apiece while Blakely and M. Pitchell picked up assists. T. Casson had the Quinte goal with help from D. Fickes.



Canadiens squeezed past the Browns by a 3-2 score. H. Thompson, B. Culleton and S. Lancaster had the Mah goals while D. Irwin, R. Pearson and L. Thomas drew assists. F. Smith and J. Meens clinched a goal and assist each for the Browns.

Strokes are no longer helpless, according to medical spokesmen. Invisible resulting from strokes now can be reduced or prevented through prompt treatment.

Hull-Ottawa Widens Lead To 16 Points

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hull - Ottawa Canadiens continued to set new records as they widened their lead to 16 points in the Eastern Professional Hockey League standings over the weekend.

A 7 - 0 win over Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds in Hull Saturday set a new undefeated record of 16 home games for a season and brought to 11 the number of games in Hull-Ottawa's current unbeaten streak at home and early.

Kingston Frontenacs got their weekend off to a flying start at home Saturday night by drubbing Sudbury Wolves 8 - 3. But the Frontenacs ran out of steam in Kitchener Monday and bowed 7-3 to Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers.

Sudbury came back from the Saturday defeat to take Montreal Royals 7-4 in Montreal the next day.

MONTREAL HOLDS LEAD

Canadiens were left them on top of the league with 47 points. Left winger Yves Locas fired three of the goals while Keith McCreary, counted twice and Terry Gray and Billy Carter got tallies. The scoreless Thunderbirds retained a slim hold on second place with 31 points.

Kingston's win over Sudbury was on a hat-trick by Don Blackburn and singles by Stan Mavrinac, Cecil Hoekstra, Freddy Boone, Real Chevrefils and Hardy Miller. Tom McCarthy and Jack Hendrickson scored for Sudbury.

Kitchener - Waterloo downed Kingston on pairs of goals by Don Rochefort and Len Fonzo with singles by Duane Rupp, Bob Roberts and Chris Bavis. Don Blackburn, Real Chevrefils, George Gosselin, Randall Mitchell, Dick Meissner also scored for Frontenacs.

Three goals by Sam Bettio, two by Jack Martin and single by Tom McCarthy and Jack Hendrickson paced Sudbury to victory over Montreal. The Montreal scorers were Gus Black and Wayne Connelly with two each.

ARREST 30

DURBAN (Reuters) — Shock troops and police Thursday arrested 30 persons in an all-out campaign to restore order in the simmering Durban reserve of Eastern Cape Province. A government official said the arrests followed a recent wave of murder, arson and "faction fights" which resulted in a virtual state of emergency being clamped down on the territory.

Badminton Club Defeats Picton Racqueteers

The Belleville Garrison Badminton Club wound up the inter-club tournament season here Saturday night.

The Picton Badminton Club was the guest organization although they went down to defeat after some spirited competition.

The Garrison racquet-wielders took 15 points of a possible 18, a highly creditable performance.

One of the highlights of the post - tournament ceremonies was presentation to the winners of a very unique "travelling trophy". This in turn will be presented to the host club when Belleville plays out of town after the New eYar holidays.

The Picton club was entertained in the Christmas spirit in the armories officers' mess following the matches.

RIDERS WANT IVY

REGINA (CP)—Saskatchewan Roughriders still are hopeful of acquiring the services of Frank (Pop) Ivy as head coach of the western Interprovincial Football Union team.

Ridge president Bob Kramer and Clair Harnett, a member of the club's management committee, just returned from St. Louis where they talked to former coach of the Edmonton Eskimos who is now coaching St. Louis Cardinals of the United States National Football League.

Although unsuccessful in receiving a definite commitment from Ivy, Kramer said Riderhaven't given up hope on the possibility of signing him for the 1961 season.

Emile Griffith Defeats Unbeaten Cuban

NEW YORK (AP) — Emile Griffith of New York vaulted into a virtual sure shot at the welterweight boxing title Saturday night by unanimously outpointing Cuba's top - ranked and previously unbeaten Luis Rodriguez on a 10-round split decision at Madison Square Garden.

It was a close fight all the way, with numerous clinches, but unrelated action and nothing close to a knockdown.

Referee Mark Conn called it for Griffith five rounds to four with one even. Judge Bill Recht voted for the Virgin Islands-born contender, 6-4. The other judge, Tony Castellano, scored it 5-4-1 for Rodriguez. Griffith weighed 147¾ pounds, Rodriguez 148.

Griffith now is promised a match title bout with Benny (Kid) Paret of Cuba, who successfully defended his crown a week ago against Argentina's Federico Thompson in the Garden. The 22-year-old New Yorker who has zoomed to the top in something less than three years, posted his 32nd victory against two defeats.

Rodriguez, the hawk-nosed Cuban sensation, suffered only his first loss in 36 bouts. Rodriguez outcotrolled Paret in two previous 1959 bouts in the then rated No. 1 contender for some time.

Rodriguez was at his best with a probing straight left and with a two-handed body attack, which he unloaded often. The beaten challenger had this better of it in close and shot home several telling counters, but Griffith's combativeness won him the fight.

CLAIMS RECORD

WASHINGTON AP)—The U.S. Navy claimed Thursday a world altitude record of about 17 miles for a jet attack plane carrying a payload of slightly more than one ton. The height reached was 91,450 feet, which would exceed the officially recognized record of 87,000 feet set last year by a Russian pilot. The flight was made Tuesday by Cmdr. Leroy Heath and his navigator, Lieut. Henry Monroe.

Bowl Games

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Penn State, powered by two units of almost equal ability, wore down Oregon's thinner forces Saturday for a 41-13 victory in the second annual Liberty Bowl football game at Philadelphia Stadium.

Oregon scored first on an 8-yard first quarter drive, but the rest of the sub-freezing afternoon the easterners controlled the game, played before a crowd of 116,634 hardy fans.

Penn State's Dick Hoak scored two touchdowns and passed for another.

Hoak, who alternated at quarterback with Galen Hall, intercepted two Oregon passes in the final quarter. He followed up the interceptions by racing for an 11-yard touchdown and passing 39 yards to Dick Pae for another, turning the game into a rout.

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Ray Poage, a 205-pound sophomore, provided the power for a 71-yard fourth quarter surge that set up a 30-yard field goal and permitted Texas Longhorns to tie Alabama 3-3 Saturday in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

Dan Petty's kick came with just four minutes and one second remaining in the game, witnessed by a crowd of 68,000.

Until Poage cut loose with his power plays it had appeared the tough defensive battle was to have been settled by a 30-yard third quarter field goal by Tom Brooker, a 200-pound Alabama junior.

Argos, Als To Play U.S. Teams

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts and Montreal Alouettes will play pre - season exhibition football games next summer against teams from the U.S. National Football League.

Lew Hayman, managing director of the Argos, confirmed Sunday that his club plans to continue the games, started in 1950, but the choice of an opponent will not be made for some time. Hayman said several teams from teams in the American League have been received, but he wants an NFL opponent for the Toronto team.

Montreal Alouettes' venture, if it succeeds, will mark the first time in a decade they have met a U.S. team.

Perry Moss, general manager-coach of the Alouettes, said "Canadian football can't help but benefit from playing teams better than ours. That's the only way to improve."

Commercial Hockey League Results

Jones Motors continued along their way at the top of the Belleville Commercial Hockey League last night by scoring a 7-3 victory over Booth TV's.

In the loop's other game, Williams Brothers tightened their grip on second place with a 7-4 win over the fall-end Joyce Real Estate crew.

No more league games are scheduled now until January 8th.

Doug Dafoe was the Jones Motors sparkplug last night, scoring three of his team's seven goals and assisting on two others. Pug Keller also starred with one goal and four assists. Pete Weston and Bobby Boyle each had a goal and assist. Billy "The Kid" McGuire one goal and Ron Pointer one assist.

Cam McKenna was the trigerman on two Booth markers while Chuck Rowbotham bagged the other. Gordie St. Louis had the lone assist.

William Brothers' scoring was evenly distributed with only Bert Faulkner scoring twice. The other goals went to Lee "Wiener" St. Denis, Jack Lucas, Dennis Kerrnish, Wayne Waite and Bob Brooks. Lucas helped on a pair, Jack Hughes, Faulkner, Kerrnish and Gord Green one each.

Doug Moreau fired a pair of the Real Estate goals while Pat Gilmour and Bill Vesterfelt had a goal and assist apiece. Wayne Fox and Bryant slap drew assists.

League scoring statistics released on the weekend show Bert Faulkner as the loop's top scorer, with 19 points, including ten goals. Pug Keller follows with 18 while Doug Dafoe has 17, Pete Weston 13, Chuck Rowbotham 10, Leo St. Denis, nine, and "Shaker" Baker seven points.

Ron Dulmage of Jones Motors has the best goals - against average, a 2.6 mark, while Bob Green has 2.2. Claude Carr 4.3 and Jack Gilby 5.2.

MADE CUBAN SALES

BRANTFORD (CP)—Two area farmers said Friday night they have arranged to sell cattle and dayold chicks to Cuba. H. J. Schleisener of nearby Jerseyville said he is selling 42 Ayrshire cattle to Cuba on cash terms. Gordon Misener said he has made a cash deal to send 1,000 chicks and 150 cockerels to Cuba every week for eight weeks. He said 25 per cent of the cost was paid before he started shipping. and Jack Gilbey 3.2.

Senior Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Captain Lou Bendo's goal in the last minute of regulation play Sunday enabled Windsor Bulldogs to salvage a 1-1 tie with Chatham Maroons and stretch their lead at the top of the Ontario Hockey Association senior series to six points.

In other OHA senior weekend action, Saturday, Strathroy Rockets climbed out of the cellar with a 3-2 win over the Stratford Indians.

Windsor leads the league with 27 points while Stratford and Woodstock are in second place with 19, Chatham is in fourth with 16, and Strathroy in fifth with 13, one point more than Galt.

At Windsor, Bendo's marker came at 19:26 of the third period after Chatham had taken an early lead on a first period goal by Eddie Burch. A scoreless overtime period followed.

At close, clean game saw only one penalty handed out. Chatham goalie Al Bennett made 36 saves, and Windsor's Ross Childs 30. The lone penalty went to the Maroons for tripping in the second period.

At Strathroy, Stratford opened the scoring when Billy Flick scored early in the first period. Cec Cowle evened things up later on in the period.

In the second frame, Don Mayes scored for Strathroy but Ken Cockburn tied the game at 1:32 of the third period. Willie Hess scored the winning goal of the game at 16:37 of the final period.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior A series Abitibi Eskimos trounced Rouyn-Noranda Aloueties 9-1 at Iroquois Falls Sunday and Thunder Bay Port Arthurs defeated Kirkland Lake Blue Devils 5-3 at Kirkland Lake.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

That amiable, likeable, jolly old trackman-sports columnist Jim Coleman spilt his tongue, gave a halt to each check and wrote a column in that morning newspaper anent the Methuselahs being sent overseas to represent Canada hockey-wise.

The honorable James was referring to the Winnipeg Maroons who were selected by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to meet the Maple Leaf Jr on upcoming exhibition series in Czechoslovakia.

Jim poked a humorous finger at one Bill Jurdo who played for the New York Rangers during the Roosevelt regime and points out that Wilson is past forty.

Coleman also in extremely light vein suggested that they dig out King Clancy, Dit Clapper, Taffy Abel and others of that venerable era and send them overseas.

Actually the Maroons' trip to the land of the Pilsen and silvervein doesn't mean a thing as far as Canadian prestige is concerned. The Czechs invited a hockey team to play a series there during the holidays and the Maroons were selected by the guardian CAHA.

How and why they were selected is anybody's guess. They were not Allan Cup winners and as such rate third place below the Chatham Maroons who were outvied and clobbered by the Russians.

Maybe they wrote a prize-winning jingle or held the lucky ticket on an Exhibition Sweepstakes. Or perhaps they wrote a 22-word letter saying why "Scraps" washes clothes whiter than "Bruiser."

Better yet they might have set forth in a "Prize is Right" program why it is understood the Czechs are picking up the tab outside of what the boys spend in Prague's Jalta or International Hotels and the "bright" spots along Wenceslaus Square.

In serious vein, Coleman said, "Are Canadians so smug that they cannot, with profit, copy some European practices? If Canada intends to have a worthy Olympic hockey team in 1964, why doesn't some government agency select a group of young players, along about 1962 and give them an opportunity to play together for a couple of years?"

This department has suggested a Canadian national hockey team on numerous occasions. But in the good old days before the CAHA decided to pick up the overseas tab, the onus was placed on individual communities. Too well is that fad known in this city and Kitchener. That rule is still in effect, outside of financial arrangements.

It appears the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has never believed in national all-star squads.

There is no reason, as Coleman says, why Canada cannot select a club and let it play as a unit for a couple of years.

The veteran Toronto columnist can jibe and poke fun all he likes at the bellicy blisters playing in international competition. But the fact remains that Canadian victories in world tournaments, were due in no small way to the seasoned ex-professional players who played with the clubs.

Al Oslo in 1958 when the Whitby Dunlops brought the world bauble back to Canada, such players as Cornie Broden, Sid Smith, Bus Gagnon, Jack McKenzie and other veteran performers played no small part in the ultimate victory.

In the 1959 world tournament held in Czechoslovakia, the Belleville McFarlands would have had their backs to the wall minus the services of Ike Hildebrand, John Beverley, Lenny Lambrando, Pete Comacher and Gordie Bell, etc.

A "young strong team" may be all right. But if memory is correct a couple of years ago a Russian team touring Canada defeated Ottawa Hull Canadiens, rated the best junior club in Canada, and nearly swept them out of the arena by a double-figure score.

Canadian world tournament clubs, like whisky, have always been better with a little age.

Hodge Proving He Is N.H.L. Calibre

Blanks Blues Beats Bruins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Charlie Hodge is making no bones about it—he'd rather be goaltending with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League than in the minor leagues.

The pint-sized goalie — he weighs about 135 pounds—may yet convince Montreal brass he belongs in the big league if he continues to come up with solid performances.

Hodge played in his 10th and 11th games, since replacing Jacques Plante Nov. 26, as Canadiens blanked New York Rangers 3-0 Saturday and posted a 4-3 triumph over Boston Bruins Sunday.

The victories ran Montreal's record to 10 wins against a single defeat with Hodge in the nets. It was his second shutout.

Second - place Toronto Maple Leafs will be held to a 3-3 tie by Boston Saturday but withstood a third-period rally by New York Sunday for a 5-3 victory.

WINS EDGED HAWKS

Detroit Red Wings won the weekend's only other game, edging the Black Hawks 3-2 at Chicago Sunday.

The results increased Montreal's first-place margin to 4 points. Leafs are next at 39. Detroit 34, Chicago 29, New York 22 and Boston 21.

Bernie Geoffrion took care of Canadiens' scoring in Saturday's game, getting two goals in the third period. The second came after Rangers had removed goalie Gump Worsley in favor of an extra forward in the last minute of play.

Geoffrion also scored once against Boston Sunday, marking the eighth consecutive game in which he's scored at least one goal. That puts him just one game shy of the record set by Maurice (Rocket) Richard, retired Canadien great, during the 1944-45 season.

Jean Claude Tremblay, Marcel Bonin and Henri Richard scored Canadiens' other goals Sunday while Doug Mohns and Charlie Burns tallied for the Bruins.

FRANK ADDED TWO

Leafs' Frank Mahovlich got his 28th goal against the Bruins Saturday and eighth Sunday against the Rangers.

He leads the league in the scoring department and Montreal's Dickie Moore is closest to him with 25 goals while Geoffrion has 24.

Rookies Dave Keon and John Macmillan got Toronto's other goals Saturday. Jimi Bartlett was the big gun the Bruins with two goals and Vic Stasiuk got the other.

Bartlett's second goal early in the third period was the last one of the game. It marked the ninth time in 31 games this season the Bruins tied. And they had to come from behind on every occasion to get the point.

Red Kelly and Bob Pulford scored Toronto's other goals in the game against Rangers. Veteran goalie Johnny Bower made 26 saves as the Leafs stretched an unbeaten streak to five games.

COLLECTS FIRST GOAL

Pat Hannigan and Johnny Wilson scored for Rangers. It was Hannigan's first NHL goal.

Gordie Howe got his ninth and 10th goals of the season to lead the Red Wings to their victory over the faltering Black Hawks.

Howe's second goal came at 17:39 of the third period and spoiled a Chicago comeback. The Hawks trailed 3-0 at one time.

Rookie Howie Glover scored Detroit's other goal while Bill (Red) Hay and veteran Ted Sloan tallied for the Hawks.

Goalie Terry Sawchuk also starred for the Red Wings. He made 43 saves, 32 of them in the final period as Chicago went all out to get back in the game.

Gerry Ehman Flying High For Amerks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gerry Ehman of Rochester Americans is making a strong pitch for an American Hockey League record as a chance to setback in the National League.

The former Toronto forward scored three goals in two games Saturday and Sunday. Goals which scored in eight straight contests — three shy of the AHL record. The 26-old, six-foot right winger whacked in 13 goals in 15 games since being shipped down to the AHL by the Maple Leafs.

Ehman moved two goals while leading the Amerks to a 4-0 rout of Cleveland Barons at Rochester Sunday. Meanwhile Rochester's Ed Chadwick, the AHL's all-star goalie last season, notched his first shutout of the current season.

On Saturday, Ehman scored twice as the Amerks bowed to Hershey, 4-3.

In other Sunday games, Providence Reds whipped Hershey Bears 4-1 on Don Simmons' stiffy and Buffalo Bisons 5-2. Detroit 2-1 two goals, and Buffalo thumped Quebec 4-1, with Chico Maki scoring twice.

Springfield's league-leading Indians shellacked Cleveland 7-3 and maintained their 10-point spread over Buffalo's second place. The Barons beat Quebec 2-1 Saturday but blew the opportunity to gain when they were beaten Sunday by Rochester.

Kramer Refuses

Pro Debut Postponed

MELBOURNE (AP) — Tennis promoter Jack Kramer Sunday was reported to have refused to allow Barry Mackay and Earl Buchholz to postpone their professional debuts for a planned fifth goodwill return to Australian tennis.

Mackay, from Dayton, Ohio, and Buchholz, from St. Louis, had planned to play in the Australian championships in an effort to repair the damage done U.S. prestige by criticism levelled at the American Davis Cup team.

Don Lawrence, a Melbourne writer, reported that Kramer had told him, in a telephone conversation from Los Angeles, that he expects the U.S. aces to have played at least 14 more matches even before the Australian amateur championships open.

Mackay and Buchholz were members of the U.S. Davis Cup team eliminated by Italy in an interzone upset.

REPORTS BLOWN UP

In Sydney, meanwhile, Italy's Davis Cup players, Nicola Pietrangeli and Orlando Sirola, said Sunday night reports of American misbehavior in the intermone were "grossly exaggerated."

The Americans behaved perfectly, Pietrangeli and Sirola agreed.

Italian coach Jaroslav Drobny said he felt the American team played highly from the tantrums thrown by Jerry Buchholz Chuck McKinley and Dennis Ralston in earlier Sydney and Melbourne tournaments.

Lions Blank Bears 36-0

Browns Jolt Giants In Thriller

NEW YORK (AP)—With the two divisional champions in both the National Football League and the American Football League definitely known, Sunday's professional pigskin sport turned into a scrap for second place in the NFL.

Cleveland Browns punched across 37 points in the second half to foil New York Giants 48-34 for second place in the NFL's Eastern division and put the Browns in the runner - up bowl game at Miami Jan. 7 against Detroit Lions. The Lions took the western division second - place spot by blanking Chicago Bears 36-0.

Philadelphia Eagles have been consulting plane schedules for the eastern division title, while Green Bay Packers answered their first western conference crown in 16 years Saturday by beating Los Angeles Rams 35-21.

Houston Oilers and Los Angeles Chargers clinched their respective eastern and western division titles a week ago. They meet in the AFL title at Houston and Eagles and Green Bay will meet the Philadelphia Eagles in the NFL crown Baltimore Colts held the last two years.

WON THE SEVENTH

Cleveland, which has lost six straight games to New York, broke the game wide open when lineman Paul Wiggin stole one of Charley Conerly's passes and raced 30 yards for a touchdown. The Giants, all jubs from the time, Milt Plum passed for three Cleveland touchdowns and Conerly threw for three.

Detroit won the runnerup spot when Jim Gibbons scored through both the Lions and San Francisco fielders on a 67 recorder. Detroit scored more points than San Francisco while dividing two games with them.

Dick Pietrosante scored two Detroit touchdowns and added a club rushing record with 87 yards, 45 more than Ace Gutowsky in 1952.

Two kickoff returns of 78 and 97 yards by Lenny Lyles and Lenny Lyles, one for a touchdown, broke up Baltimore Colts. Baltimore's Johnny Unitas passed for 180 yards to set a NFL record of 7,029 yards in 12 games, beating Sammy Baugh's 1947 mark of 7,000 yards. San Francisco won 34-10.

FAGGED TO VICTORY

Tarkington Quarterback Van Brocklin and second-string quarterback Sonny Jurgensen led Philadelphia to its 38-26 victory over Washington. John David Crow gained 200 yards to spark St. Louis to a 38-7 victory over Pittsburgh.

In the AFL, Los Angeles scored 17 points in the fourth period to beat New York 30-6. San Antonio, 41, 4, Los Angeles veteran, scored 14 points on three field goals and five conversions. Houston also scored 17 points in the last quarter to down Boston 37-21. Billy Cannons scored one touchdown on an 88 - yard kickoff return and set up a field goal with a 39-yard run that started the winning rally.

Jack Spikes scored one touchdown, booted a field goal and three extra points and Cotton Davidson tossed two touchdown passes to lead Dallas to a 24-7 victory over Buffalo.

Pegs Will Play Nine Czech Teams

MELVILLE, Sask. (CP)—Wilfred Marcoux, new manager for an overseas hockey tour today, will play nine teams in Czechoslovakia. Gordon Juckes, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Sunday night.

The exhibition tour starts in Czechoslovakia Dec. 22 and ends Jan. 4. All nine teams are first division clubs in that country.

The senior Maroons start off Dec. 22 against Spartak Plzen on Dec. 23. They meet Slavoy Cesko Budejovice, Maroons get Spartak Praha on Christmas Day and on Boxing Day Vis Chemicalov.

Maroons then meet two junior clubs and senior league Junior players up to 23 years old.

On Dec. 26 they meet Bratislava, on New Year's Dakla Zjs Brno. On Jan. 2 the club will play Dukla Jihlava and in the final game of the tour the exact position will be Tesla Pardubice.

Senior ORFU May Expand Next Year

LONDO, Ont. (CP) — Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen are expected to return next season to the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union, and two more Michigan teams may join the loop, league members were told at their annual meeting here Sunday.

The Dutchies, who withdrew this year because of financial difficulties, are expected to return with the backing of Mennel Alumnae of the Big Four.

Gordon Gilbride, re - elected president, said another entry is being sought from Saginaw, and a third may enter from Flint.

"If plans are carried out, we should have a five-team league in 1961," Gilbride said.

Sarnia Golden Bears, Port Huron-Detroit Raiders and London Lords, 1960 championship Lancaster compete in the league next year.

WILL HOLD SCRUTINY

Gilbride said he will meet in the next few weeks with Saginaw and Flint interests. He said the name of the league will likely be changed to the International Football League.

Perry Moss, head coach and general manager of the Alouettes, visited Kitchener last Thursday and said the Alouettes active backing of the Dutchies would be available in the next few months. He refused to supply a coach if the arrangement is approved. OHFU meetings are held Sunday.

Sarnia Golden Bears representatives said they will likely affiliate next season with a Big Four club, either Hamilton or Toronto.

League Draws Interlock Sked

'Rifle' Not Free Agent, Says Halter

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Sam Etcheverry is ticketed to play his professional football in Canada next year, if he balks at the idea, he can go to court and be a cowboy.

Commissioner G. Sydney Halter, Canadian Football League president, rumors concerning the future of the 30-year-old quarterback by declaring Saturday he is not free to play with any club but Ottawa in 1961.

The Montreal Alouette player, traded with end Hal Patterson for Hamilton Tiger-Cats' quarter Bernie Faloney, and guard Don Luzzi last month, had a no-cut, no-trade clause in his contract with the Als, which meant he couldn't be peddled off without his consent. The Als didn't talk it over with him and immediately speculation arose that the contract breach gave him a free hand to play with any club he wished.

No so. Halter said in an interview during a break in the closed meeting of a series of general managers of the nine pro Canadian clubs.

DECIDED ON GAMES

The managers decided that 20 interlocking games between the Eastern Big Four and the Western Interprovincial Football Union would be played in 1961 and also in 1962-10 in the East and 10 in the West. They drew up a tentative schedule but did not decide on firm dates.

They also recommended a change in the Grey Cup game date, but this has to be passed at the CFL annual meeting in Winnipeg, Feb. 9-11.

Commenting on Etcheverry, Halter said the former University of Denver star must play with Tiger-Cats in 1961 or be waived out of the Big Four and WIFU before he can play with an American team. And no club in Canada would pass him up.

Etcheverry has promised "I'm not officially he will not turn know by Friday whether he is willing to play for them next year.

LINKED WITH GIANTS

He has never said publicly he would go to the U.S., though sources close to him have indicated he might sign with New York Giants of the National Football League.

The general managers will get together again in Pittsburgh Jan. 10 and in all probability, will have concrete East-West games dates to offer at the CFL annual meeting. The Canadians will be in Pittsburgh for the annual American college coaches convention.

Under the tentative interlocking schedule, fans of every Big Four and WIFU team will see the other clubs once in the next two years.

In each year two Big Four clubs will each play three games in the West and the other two will play four games each. The two Western clubs will come East for two games each.

AGREEMENT REACHED

Tentative agreement was reached for the following scheduled of games for 1961 and 1962:

1961 — Eastern teams in the West: Ottawa and Hamilton at Winnipeg, Regina and Calgary; Ottawa and Hamilton play at Edmonton and Vancouver.

Western teams in the East: Saskatchewan Roughriders, Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Calgary Stampeders play at Toronto and Montreal; British Columbia Lions and Edmonton Eskimos play at Hamilton and Ottawa.

1962 — Eastern teams in the West: Toronto and Montreal play at Winnipeg, Regina and Calgary; Ottawa and Hamilton play at Edmonton and Vancouver.

Western teams in the East: Saskatchewan Roughriders, Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Calgary Stampeders play at Toronto and Montreal; British Columbia Lions and Edmonton Eskimos play at Hamilton and Ottawa.

Halter said these schedules would be adopted unless individual clubs run into complications to dates.

The Grey Cup final is certain to be played at Toronto, Saturday, Dec. 2, next year, departing from the traditional last-Saturday-in-November date.

Marlies Clip Wings String, Petes Split

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Last-place Toronto Marlboros took a gamble that paid off handsomely Saturday night as the end of their Ontario Hockey Association junior A game Sunday against the confident Hamilton Red Wings.

Marlboro hauled their goalie out of the net and brought on an extra forward. The move gave them a 3-3 tie to spike Red Wings' six-game winning streak when Howie Menard tallied at 19:54 in the third period.

In Sunday's first game at Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto St. Michael's rookie goalie Jacques Dryden registered his first shutout as Major defeated Peterborough Peter 3-0. St. Michael's now hold second place in the standings, 10 points, three points behind the idle Guelph Royals.

Saturday night Peterborough's winning night as the Petes, defeated St. Catharines' Tekpees 5-4.

FLYERS RETAIN THIRD

The Ido Hockey League Flyers retain third place with 21 points, followed by Hamilton, 20, Peterborough 18, St. Catharines 14 and Marlboros in the hole with 12.

Although their eight-game streak was curtailed, Red Wings still boast an unbeaten string of eight consecutive games.

Gregory Standing and Jim Wilcox scored all the goals for Marlies, Larry Jeffrey tallied Hamilton's only counter once, all in the final frame, for Red Wings.

The Majors never looked back after Petes were handed a penalty at 2:47 of the first period. Larry Keenan opened the scoring and Bruce Draper scored his first of two late in the same period with Keenan and brother Dave Draper assisting.

After a scoreless middle session, Bruce scored his second at the 19:32 mark in the third. Keenan and Dave Draper again assisted. Their lanky novice goaltender refused to get flustered.

It was a close checking game with St. Michael's handed nine of the 17 penalties. Majors' defenseman Paul Jackson was given a major penalty, and Peter Claude Larose a misconduct late in the game for arguing a tripping sentence.

Petes got away to a 2-0 lead in the first five minutes of the opening period in their Saturday game. Hal Draper came back with three goals to hold a temporary margin.

Larose scored two Peterboro goals, both in the first period, while singles went to Stanley Plager, Tom Carty and Reg Mulholland. Desperate goals were scored by Kellough, Murray Hill, and Harry Cully Cullen.

Tuesday night Niagara Falls meets Guelph at Guelph.

NIXON DISMISSED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mike Nixon Saturday was officially dismissed from his job as head coach of Washington Redskins after Washington lost its last game of the National Football League season 38-20 to Philadelphia Eagles. The defeat was the Redskins' ninth against one victory and two ties.

Ti-Cats Sale Is Halted By Injunction

HAMILTON (CP) — Controlling-elect Windsor Copps said, Sunday night that an injunction he obtained Thursday prevented the sale of Hamilton Tiger-Cats football club and that he will make an announcement to board of control today on the matter.

Copps declined to comment further on the club's sale but a spokesman for the team said that his injunction did not hamper the transaction because it was served after club directors had approved $170,000 as the sale price.

Copps said that Toronto interests had offered $170,000 for the team last January but added that "we have more than that at the present time."

Ald. David Lewis Saturday said the man in the street felt "cheated" because the sale was arranged behind closed doors, but suggested that it was not necessary for the highest offer for the club to have been accepted.

Copps said he obtained the injunction from Judge J. S. Letchford because the public was entitled to have its say. Purchasers were J. G. Gaudaur, president of the club, Ross Fletcher, vice-president, and Frank Gibson, H. C. Hatch, Cooper, Cooper, Lawson, J. G. Ross, H. A. Soule, Frank Silva and G. W. Lawson.

Prior to the sale, the club had been communally-owned.

Signor Sirola Man to Beat Says Aussies

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Oscillating Australia, Italy's giant of the courts, and not Nicola Pietrangeli, is the man the Australians fear most in the Davis Cup challenge round starting here Boxing Day.

"We know what Pietrangeli can do but Sirola is always a mystery," said Roy Emerson, veteran member of the Australian tennis squad. "When Sirola is on his game, he is a berserk army by himself."

It was Sirola who crushed Australian Barry MacKay in the fifth and final match which sealed victory into the challenge round for the first time.

"From the beginning I said Sirola was a player to watch," said MacKay. "Because he is so big (six foot seven inches) and seemingly awkward, everybody regards him as a tennis freak. And an number you when he's hitting them."

The Australians, holders of the trophy, will be slight favorites in the climatic series.

Finance Minister Fleming Just as at Home Rowing Boat as Working in Job

By KEN REILLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Picture a stocky figure with greying hair and clipped moustache lounging on a couch in a well-worn sports jacket and open-necked shirt.

Or imagine the same figure, solitary except for a mongrel dog, rowing on the Gatineau River in the hills north of Ottawa.

There are not images Canadians call to mind of Hon. Donald Fleming, the minister of finance. They are true images nevertheless.

Mr. Fleming, 54, is better known as a determined, tenacious and sometimes pugnacious political figure who has become the strong man of Prime Minister Diefenbaker's cabinet.

With little time to relax, he has never appeared as a relaxed figure in the public eye. A broad-shouldered man five-foot-11½ and 170 pounds with serious demeanor and conservative taste in clothes, usually in grey or business suits, white shirts and subdued ties, his public personality contains none of the flair of his chief, John Diefenbaker.

SINGS IN BATHTUB

Lusty singing in a rich baritone seems to come from one totally worked pronouncements on fiscal monetary policy. But Mr. Fleming is a lusty if bathtub baritone as a preacher of financial policies. He's a theatre-lover as well as an accomplished parliamentarian.

Donald Methuen Fleming is perhaps the greatest contributor to the rather austere, almost puritan portrait of him in the public mind.

Hear him on the subject of his personal interests:

"My ambition is to do the best job that lies in my power to do in serving the Canadian people in this office. Beyond that I have to let the future take care of itself. I have learned to live a day at a time and do the best I can as I go along."

Such a declaration from a politician who has twice been a candidate for leadership of the Progressive Conservative party might normally be taken with a grain of salt. But Mr. Fleming delivers it with a convincing air of sincerity.

DEVOTED TO PRINCIPLE

If a desire to be of service is a basic ingredient of his character, another clearly is his devotion to principle.

"When asked, I give an honest opinion. I may express it fearlessly and perhaps bluntly. But the prime minister knows that it subtracts nothing from the absolute loyalty I give him. It is an opinion arrived at carefully."

His attitude toward the fourth estate criticism has a similar basis.

"I don't look back. I don't believe anybody in this position can look back once a decision is taken. I try to make the right decision and, having tried to make that, the criticism just doesn't matter."

To a job that creates his biggest problem — finding enough time to get a proper night's sleep—he brings a strong constitution. He has rarely had a day of illness and keeps up a pace that would wear out a man in anything but the best of health.

Persistent and painstakingly thorough, imperturbable in public, he has his moments of relaxation in a bent for concentrated study.

WATCHES SPEEDING

As boss of a department responsible both for levying taxes and keeping government spending in check, Mr. Fleming says he has a personal philosophy to guide him.

"I like to see people standing on their own feet and not leaning on the state. The treasury is certainly not a grab-bag. Every dollar has to be raised from the taxpayer and the are entitled to have it managed and spent with a deep sense of responsibility."

Pressures, he says, are always present and come from every conceivable direction.

"I try to follow a consistent and understanding line. First, it is necessary to analyze every approach and estimate the real value of it. Some are obvious and some are far from serious. I try to keep my feet on the ground at all times and study the question fairly and thoroughly."

He doesn't think a finance minister can be a theorist in his approach to budgeting.

"He must take a practical approach to the problems that fall within the ambit of his responsibility. In three budgets I have tried to emphasize that policy must be flexible, able to adjust to meet immediate circumstances."

SOBER CONFIDENCE

As he prepared to present his fifth budget Dec. he said:

"I certainly don't subscribe to the idea that we are entering a period of recession. Although there is substantial unemployment, Canadians generally are enjoying prosperity and I think prosperity will continue. My own view is one of sober confidence."

Sobriety and confidence have characterized his throughout his life. His father was a mathematician and teacher at Galt, Ont., and his father's health broke down, forcing the family to live through high school, worked every summer from age 13 until he graduated from university.

Factory jobs, work on construction gangs and as a farm laborer enabled him to repay every cent his family spent on his education at the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall law school. He was a top student and likes to recall that his university and constituency contemporary was history professor, Lester Pearson, and included two other Ontario Liberal cabinet ministers, Paul Martin and Lionel Chevrier.

ELECTED IN 1945

He became a successful lawyer and entered politics through civic affairs, serving as school trustee in 1936 and for six years starting in 1939 as alderman. He was first elected to the Commons in 1945 with a 2,000-vote margin in Toronto-Eglinton.

A staunch churchman, he has maintained close connection with Toronto's Bloor Street United Church where he was an elder and superintendent of the Sunday school. He is a member of the national council of the YMCA and was president of the Upper Canada Bible Society 1946-47.

His uncompromising personal abstinence hasn't relieved his attitude toward those who aren't teetotallers. At a conference that stretched late into the night, he noted the lagging pace and, remarking that a bar car! door would be closing soon, suggested a break.

At home in his modern, split-level bungalow in the exclusive Rockcliffe suburb of Ottawa, he puts in many working hours, usually devoted entirely in a library where there is no telephone.

His 12-to-15-hour working day leaves little time for relaxation but when he can find the time he swims, plays tennis or golf. He and his wife Alice look to summer cottage in the Gatineau Hills last summer and he often rowed on the river with his elder son's mongrel dog, Susie.

Only one of his three children —Donald, 17, attending an Ottawa high school—is at home. David, 20, is studying at the Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph, and Mary, 20, is at the University of Toronto.

The Tracks

NEW YORK AP)—Robert Lisagor's Captain Fair scored a 1½-length victory over Flutterby in the $18,125 Golden Gate futurity Saturday and won the two-year - old championship of the Golden Gate field's fall racing season.

Flutterby, a Canadian horse owned by Calgary publisher Max Bell's Alberta Farms, was a slight favorite.

Captain Fair opened home in 1:36 4-5 and paid $5, $2.80 and $2.40. Flutterby returned $3 and $2.80 and Seascriber $2.40.

The daily double paid $1,502.80 for $2 to the 3-1 shot Lisagor and double tickets and $221 each to three bettors with 287 tickets.

The betrothal and Mrs. Conroy Durrante had a half interest in Cole of the winning $5 double tickets, on Looks Better in the first race and Lou's Lad in the second.

At Miami, Bill Hartack rode Harvard April Skies to victory in the $10,000-added Coral Gables handicap at Tropical Park.

April Skies ran the six furlongs in the fast time of :21 2-5, :43.19 and $2.80. Pied d'Or, running as an entry with Yorky, was third at $2.80. Boom and Board paid $4.80 to show.

Hartack rode one of the seventh race on Greek Star and now has 2,000 victories in his career. He already has clinched the national riding title.

Golden Child TV Premiere On Friday Night Success

NEW YORK (AP) — Television's most interesting weekend comes early—on Friday night, to be exact.

First, in terms of importance, was the television premiere of Golden Child, as operatic retelling of the Christmas story in a setting of California during the 1849 gold rush.

Manfredo, the 90 minute NBC production was excellent. Dramatically, it left something to be desired. The sudden conversion of the gold-mad crowd after the birth of the child came suddenly and without any reason which had not been apparent since the beginning of Act II.

After the first few moments of getting accustomed to the Wild West setting and costumes, the opera held cole's attention to the end.

A short time before that, NBC televised a half-hour News Special. It was a detailed account of the collision of two passenger planes in a few hours, before the New York City.

It was a morbid half hour. The cameras and the microphones seemed as ruthless and cruel as relatives of victims in their stunned grief, to linger on the rescue teams, with their filled stretchers, and all this to a musical background.

General Tendencies: Be sure that you do think out what is right and wrong and eliminate whatever you do not understand. If you don't make it fit into your own personal plans. Then later, make sure you do not become involved in a argument between a friend and an adviser who sees things very differently and between both insist you back, support them.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) You are unlikely to getting good ideas from a complex who follows modern trends and one who has had years of experience. Extract the best from each and utilize to fullest advantage. P.M. be kind to a troubled friend. Stars carry.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Remain neutral during an argument between a higher-up and an associate or you could get into serious trouble. Keep busy by handling any civic matters that will be helpful to the greatest number. P.M. be kind to disturbed partner.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) New outlets are possible for you today, but be certain you've complied any other important affairs first. Then see that you get full attention to worthwhile ventures and clear up any difficulties you may have. Be calm, happy, collected, alert.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) If you are cheerful and smile, you will soon get rid of any quarrelsome that has upset you for some time. But find the ideal type o fentertainment that will be inexpensive so that you do not irk economical partner.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be careful that a close tie does not take out on an innocent associate the ire fel toward you because of some situation over which you have no control. Then later concentrate on more up-to-date ways in which to get ahead in career.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) The ideal day to garner the data you require from many available sources such as paper, TV, personal calls, etc. Put aside any unimportant work and get an early start. Plan itinerary and follow your schedule. Expand.

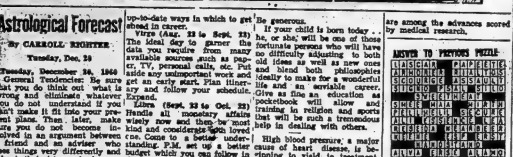
Libra (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23) Handle your finances more wisely now and then by most one. Come to a better understanding. P.M. set up a better budget which you can follow in the future easily.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22) Try not to lose your temper with anyone at home. Think instead how you can best help them and do so. Through understanding you can accomplish wonders. Relax at home in evening. Retire early and get your needed rest.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) That private worry could cause you to lash out at those whom you love the most. So, be sure you control your temper but be particularly kind to them instead. Then carry through with any plans you have made that are vital.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can make plans for a more successful future without sounding all of your hard-earned savings. Talk matters over with trusted ones and do not give in to temptation to dash off to some distant place. Be cheerful, happy.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) While you want very much to lash out at one who is in authority, be careful that you do not for you and your career. You may have been at fault wrong, so be sure you control yourself and have a humble attitude, however.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) You can make a wonderful impression on a bi-ness friend by doing your work in a most efficient and orgeius fashion. Also, get dull details out of the way early. Tonight is fine for assisting that person in need. Be generous.

If your child is born today . he, or she; will be one of those fortunate persons who will have no difficulty adjusting to both old ideas as well as new ones and blend both philosophies ideally to make for a wonderful life and an enviable career. Give as fine an education as pocketbook will allow and training in religion and sports that will be such a tremendous help in dealing with others.

High blood pressure, a major cause of heart disease, is being yield to treatment. The development of new drugs and new surgical techniques are among the advances scored by medical research.

DECISION RESERVED

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Labor Relations Board reserved decision Friday on a certification bid by the Seafarers International Union for bargaining rights for 194 marine engineers on Great Lakes ships. A tricky decision faces the nine - man board in sorting out the legal tangle wrapped around the SIU feud with the National Association of Marine Engineers (CLC) — the latest inter-union struggle that led to the SIU ouster from the Canadian Labor Congress last June.

ACCEPTS TITLE

ASCMAN AP)—King Hussein of Jordan has accepted the title of honorary president of world scouts, it was officially announced here Thursday.

½ AWAKE Nights ½ ASLEEP Days..

Miserable aches and pains to get you down? Don't suffer needlessly. Get Dodd's Kidney Pills. Take them as directed and feel better, feel fine, feel like new. Dodd's Pills are mild and fashion during, but when nature sticks you in the back and makes your whole day a misery, Dodd's Pills are tops. Dodd's Pills are the best kidney pills you can buy. Don't suffer another day. Get Dodd's Kidney Pills. They've helped millions for over 50 years. They can help you. You can depend on Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Scouting activities

By CHRIS F. LEGGAT
CANNIFTON - CORBYVILLE

At the annual meeting of the group committee Mr. Fred Fraser, Eldridge was elected chairman. Mrs. Partridge is president of the auxiliary and their aim is A.S.M. With this wonderful family in the drivers seat the Canniston Council can be assured that this group is in very good hands for 1961. We congratulate Young Fred on his recent marriage and on behalf of the Council and all Belleville Scouts wish them every happiness.

Ralph Stewart, the treasurer reported that the recent scrap-iron drives were quite profitable. Mr. Ronald Paterson was thanked for the use of his truck. The Boy Scouts auxiliary held a euchre party and supplied the refreshments. All the prizes were donated. Akela Mrs. Ronald Paterson requested books for her Cub Pack and funds for a basket project.

CHRISTMAS PARTY

The group and auxiliary will supply candy, coffee and refreshments for this affair which will be held in a few days. A very good evening has been arranged for the Cubs and Scouts. Mr. Cherry, Clarence Reynolds and Secretary Allen Corbette will attend. S.M. Stan Kerr to plan a going up ceremony for the cubs.

The following officers were elected for the 1961 executive: chairman, Fred Furniss; vice-chairman, George Shorey; secretary, Allen Corbette; treasurer, Ralph Stewart; transportation, Ronald Putman and Clayton Sullivan.

WITH BELLEVILLE

Chairman Lloyd Monteith informs us that four Cubs have now been invested and are proud of displaying their royal blue scarves. The new Cubs are Ray Summers, Brian Cleary, Bruce Greatrix and Ken Monteith. Cub master Norm Howard and his 13 Cubs visited the 5th Tabernacle Pack meeting. They have been invited to the Sunday School concert of the Front Road United Church, which is the sponsor of this group. Committee members Ken Hall, secretary; Ken Greatrix and Ernie Preston. A Ladies Auxiliary will be formed very soon.

PARKDALE AUXILIARY

The last meeting of the 1960 Boy Scouts' Auxiliary was held in the community centre.

Mrs. Allen Brooks, presiding, opened the meeting with the Scout mothers' prayer. She expressed appreciation for such a good turn out, 18 members attended, and welcomed three new members of the group. The appointment of social convener had been accepted by Mrs. H. Scott.

A gift was presented to Mrs. Clarie Miller, in appreciation for these meetings and hard work as president of the auxiliary. Mrs. Miller has been a pillar of strength to this group and is very faithful help to the Movement generally. We are sure she will remain an active member.

After the meeting, games were played and a tasty lunch served by the ladies.

Our thanks to Mrs. J. Hukequist, Scout chairman, for this report.

1961 ANDREWS

The Cubs had a Christmas party on their regular meeting night. Cubs generally come up with surprises but these little chaps kept their surprises a secret. Instead of the leaders giving the party it was the cubs who were the hosts. After the meeting (a delightful) lunch was served by Mrs. Hissner, Mrs. Mosher and Mrs. Cook. Cub Akela David Hissner asked the boys and Cub Billy James thanked all the ladies. Entertainment provided by the Cubs included clarinet solo by Gary Brien. Clarke Owen came the surprise. Cub Akela Barry Fraser was born, A.C.M., Ron Busker, A.C.M., Mrs. Tyron and A.C.M., Cliff Tryon with the birthday cake. Final present from the pack. We don't know how the boys kept their secret and we are not going to tell you. It sure was a nice gesture on the part of the cubs. Everybody had a wonderful time. Of course the ladies were decorating in the Christmas fashion so deep in the hearts of small boys. We think the 1961 cubs should be credited with a "Good Turn".

W. Huntingdon

WEST HUNTINGDON — The 100L No. 500 held its annual meeting on Wednesday evening. All the former officers were re-elected to office with the exception of John Moorcroft being elected deputy master.

Mr. George Dyson was a distant guest on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Alex McCurdy.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond visited with son and daughter-in-law, wife, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Hammond, of Oshawa, and also Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hammond, of Cobourg, over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lainson attended the funeral services for Mrs. Lillie Fowler, of Buffalo, on Friday of last week.

Hammarskjold May Ask Peace To Quit Congo

Says UN Force Cannot Intervene in Civil War

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) Debate on the chaotic Congo headed for a showdown vote today as gruelling sessions of the 13th United Nations General Assembly drove for a long holiday recess.

Scheduled to adjourn today until March 7, the assembly discussed The Congo until 3:50 a.m., and weary delegates were called back to resume the bitter debate at 10:30 a.m.

The 99-country assembly heard a warning from UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold that he might ask for power to withdraw the 20,000-man UN force from The Congo if civil war broke out in the stricken young republic.

Behind the legislative phrases of the cool-headed secretary-general could be read a mood of acutely stifling attitude as he declared that the force could not "interfere in the internal conflicts in a civil war."

VOTE CRAKES TWO HOURS

A two-hour speech by Indian Defence Minister V. K. Krishna Menon that slanderously lit other delegates helped delay votes on Communist moves to force pro-Asian resolutions to deal with The Congo situation before the assembly took recess. Menon criticized the secretary-general and the Canadian chairman, Paul Martin.

In another development Monday night, the assembly adopted by a resolution recognizing UN responsibility in helping to promote self-government in The Congo. The vote was 65 to 8 with 27 abstentions.

However, a key provision that would have had the UN guarantee The Congo's right to independence on Algeria's future was defeated. The vote was 46 to 40 with 15 abstentions and a majority of two-thirds is required for passage.

Canada voted "yes" on the resolution as a whole and "no" on the key paragraph.

PARAGRAPH REVIEW

Rejecting the stand of France that the six-year-old Algerian war is a domestic issue outside UN scope, the assembly went on record for the first time in legislating in principle that the UN has a role to play in the Algerian destiny. However, as in past years, it boycotted the Nigerian debate.

Canada's Ambassador Charles S. A. Ritchie, noting earlier in committee that French President de Gaulle has already proposed procedures for ending the war, said that "it is for de Gaulle's plan or a solution of the situation that may be agreed upon." He was on the right road.

Today's agenda, starting with The Congo, included 13 items. One is the election of one non-permanent member to the UN Security Council. Afro-Asian nations have both nominated the candidacy of "colonialist" Portugal.

Menon, in an early-morning speech, criticized Canada's Walter Dinsdale for his opposition to the Afro-Asian resolution on The Congo. Dinsdale said the Congolese rebels had not adequately followed the Congolese mandate up to now.

"No mandate is searched fully by the beginning," he declared. "New things unfold."

URGES STRONGER ACTION

Later he declared that the "mandate is competent—action is not competent."

In his speech Monday, Nesbitt, vice-chairman of the Canadian delegation and parliamentary assistant to External Affairs Minister Green, said he was against "mendacious invective" Soviet Premier Khrushchev on Hammarskjold and added that the real objective of the Communists are "to achieve control more than to subvert what they can't control, and to destroy what they cannot subvert to their own ends."

Combing Hills For Ethiopian Rebel Leaders

Emperor Haile Selassie's troops today combed the Entoto hills surrounding their capital for rebels, smoking out the remaining ringleaders of last week's shortlived revolt.

The troops were under orders to bring the rebels back alive to stand trial for the bloody upheaval which unofficial estimates said killed nearly 3,000 persons, many of them women and children.

At the same time the emperor was organizing a special tribunal to purge from his royal bodyguard officers and soldiers involved in the revolt.

Hundreds of Ethiopian billmen in white jodhpurs and slouch hats drifted into the city and clustered silently around a gibbet in the city's main square. From it swung the body of rebel Col. Workineh Gevebayu, who was reported to have shot five personnel carriers under a gun on himself.

TOP OFFICIALS SLAIN

Officials here said at least 18 ministers and senior army and government officials were killed by the rebels.

The victims were among 50 hostages held by the rebels in the emperor's throne room as a bargaining weapon when the revolt began to turn against them.

The lives of Crown Prince Asfa Wassan and the empress were saved by the bravery of two army leaders, it was reported.

Gen. Mekbonen Demashe flung himself across the empress when he was cajoled by the Addis Ababa police chief into surrendering.

Both the general and the police chief were killed in the struggle.

The empress was held as a hostage of the imperial guard who ignored the orders to submit and instead took her to a hiding place.

Fumes Suffocate Two, 8 Others In Hospital

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Eight workers remained in hospital today after inhaling accidentally hydrogen sulphide fumes that suffocated two men at the Hooker Chemical Co.

The fumes fanned over a 200-yard plant area Monday when a pipe nipple leaked sodium sulphide solution from a storage tank, the company said. The solution formed hydrogen sulphide gas when it came in contact saturated soil in the area, plant officials said.

Thirty-six workers were treated for the effects of the fumes, were released at hospitals and released.

Dead are Patrick Carmody, 43 of Lewiston, the plant security chief, and Ray Slattery, 45, of Niagara Falls, a chemical worker.

Witnesses said Carmody dragged several workers from the plant before he collapsed.

COULDN'T SAVE JOBS

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Mayor Vincent Bradley of Monday night told employees of Canadian Marietta (Ontario) Limited the city could not give the firm its sewer pipe contract to save their jobs. Council recently awarded the contract to Schultz Contract Pipe, Limited for $54,311. It was $2,460 lower than the Marietta bid.

Today's Chuckle

Think twice before you speak, especially if you intend to say what you think.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis: Cold and generally sunny weather will continue over all but the most southern sections of Ontario during the next couple of days. The southern areas are expected to be affected by a storm now centred in southern Missouri and expected to bring mainly cloudy skies and periods of light snow today. Partial clearing will follow the system overnight and Wednesday.

WINTER WORKS PLAN DEFENDED BY MINISTER

100,000 Jobs to Be Provided - - Starr

OTTAWA (CP) — Eight blackbound books tell the story of the government's $50,000,000 winter works program to fight seasonal unemployment in Canada.

Labor Minister Starr kept them arrayed neatly before him Monday as he defended the winter works estimate in the Commons against a "low-like-but" attack from Liberal and CCF critics.

The books, said Mr. Starr, show "exactly what has been happening in every city, town and village since the pre-program."

The $50,000,000 measure under which the federal treasury puts up half the payroll cost for approved works programs was described by Mr. Starr as "the most comprehensive program of this kind ever placed before the Parliament of Canada." He said it would provide about 100,000 jobs—that it would put projects worth $203,000,000, involving 78,000 jobs, had been approved up to last Friday.

DOESN'T AGREE!

Lionel Chevrier (L — Montreal Lachine) said it did nothing to help distressed areas, a field in which a government had completely fallen down.

Douglas Howard (CCF—Skeena) called it a "patchwork" program forced on the Conservative government by the seriousness of the unemployment problem. However, he said works schemes was helpful, but when balanced against the Canada Pension Plan changed on municipal loans, it left municipalities hardly any better off.

Paul Martin (L—Essex East) said it was time to go into the black books to find out exactly what the winter works program meant for two cities—Peterborough and Cornwall.

For Cornwall, said Mr. Starr, it meant seven projects worth $1,000,000 and jobs for 160 men, with the government's share of the total cost set at $58,601.

For Peterborough, it meant 22 projects, 368 jobs, with the government putting up about $77,000 of the $154,000 cost of the payroll cost.

SEEMED INADEQUATE

The figures, said Mr. Martin, revealed the inadequacy of the program. They showed the limited number of jobs provided in areas of high unemployment.

The debate on the winter works program was part of the general debate on the speech from the throne and on the supplementary estimates placed before Parliament covering the 1960-61 fiscal year.

The estimates cover $54,224,918 worth of spending plans. So far, total budgeted appropriations for the federal government run to $3,883,059,223.

Fears Estranged Husband Killed In Plane Crash

BRANTFORD (CP)—A Brantford woman said Monday night fears her estranged husband was among the 128 passengers killed in the airliner collision Friday at Chicago.

Mrs. Jean Dred MacEachern said her husband, Robert, 43, was travelling to Chicago from New York Friday. The name Mrs. MacEachern appears on the doomed Trans World Airlines passenger list from Columbus, Ohio.

A naturalized United States citizen, Mr. MacEachern is an electronics engineer for the U.S. department of defence. He and his wife have two children, Mrs. Robert Plant and Robert, 19, both of Brantford.

Mrs. MacEachern said she has not been able to reach her husband, whom she has not lived with for several years.

She said he was born on Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia.

DROP INVESTIGATION

SOUTH PORCUPINE (CP) — Returning officer C. S. Anderson who investigated charges polling clerks tried to influence voters during the Dec. 3 municipal election, said Monday night the matter is to be dropped. A man had alleged a returning officer told him if he didn't vote for Saturday in the day for municipal elections, the cost of elections would go up. A poll clerk and the returning officer's husband both swore the remark wasn't made.

Last Commander of Auschwitz, Nazi Extermination Camp, Held

FRANKFURT (Reuters) — Richard Baer, the last commander of Auschwitz, one of the most notorious of Nazi extermination camps, has been arrested, it was announced in this West Germany city today.

Frankfurt chief prosecutor, Heinz Wolf, said Baer, 49, a former SS major, was arrested as a result of a country-wide sweep started several days ago.

The search began when the Frankfurt prosecutor's office received indicating Baer was alive and well. It offered a 10,000-mark ($2,500) reward for his capture.

An arrest warrant for Baer has been out since last October. Wolf said last week he was suspected of murdering an undetermined number of persons at Auschwitz, Poland, where he was commandant from May, 1941, until January, 1945.

Canada Longshoremen Back Boycott of Cuban Cargoes

NEW YORK (CP)—The president of the International Longshoremen's Association announced Monday the ILA plan to boycott all cargo shipped to Cuba on U.S. and Canadian ships. Longshoremen leaders promised action.

Capt. William B. Bradley, ILA president, said he expects the boycott to be nearly 100-per-cent effective from Brownsville, Tex., to Halifax. He held a joint press conference with John F. Gallagher, an ILA international vice-president from Saint John, N.B., and Gerard Tremblay, an Atlantic district vice-president also from Quebec.

The Canadians pledged support to the extent permitted by Canadian laws.

Galbraith said Canadian Longshoremen don't intend to harm their friendly relations with the United States by furthering Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's aid.

The U.S. has imposed an embargo on all goods to Cuba except essential foods and medical supplies in retaliation for Castro's nationalization of American property in Cuba worth $1,000,000,000. However, some concern has been expressed in American government circles that embargoed U.S. goods might still find their way to Cuba by being trans-shipped through Canada.

Galbraith noted that the Canadian government has announced that no permits have been or will be issued for the trans-shipment of U.S. goods from Canada to Cuba and that no Canadian strategic material will be shipped to Cuba.

Bradley said Longshoremen would unload Cuban cargo to get to other cargo, but would put the imported cargo back in the hold before the ship sails. He said:

"Now is the time to try to stop Castro from forcing his Communistic ideas on the dockworkers . . . we have not heard from the ILA organizer in Cuba for some time."

Parliamentary Ranks Thin Despite Baby Budget Speech

OTTAWA (CP)—Plans to spend Christmas at home have thinned the ranks of members of Parliament despite the budget due to be brought down tonight.

A check showed many members from East and West coasts already departed. The Commons rises Wednesday night for the holiday, reconvening Jan. 16.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker will fly to Saskatoon and Prince Albert, Sask., with his wife Wednesday night. He spent Christmas the same way last year, visiting his aged mother in hospital at Prince Albert.

The Lester Pearsons, in Ottawa, are going to Florida to join the Pearsons' passenger list from Columbus, Ohio.

A naturalized United States citizen, Mr. MacEachern is an electronics engineer for the U.S. department of defence. He and his wife have two children, Mrs. Robert Plant and Robert, 19, both of Brantford.

Mrs. MacEachern said she has not been able to reach her husband, whom she has not lived with for several years.

She said he was born on Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia.

Police Gazette Missile Base Tale Erroneous

OTTAWA (CP)—Officers at air force headquarters have been reading with open mouths an American magazine article describing the RCAF base at Cold Lake, Alta., as capable of unleashing thousands of missiles at the heart of Russia.

A portion of the article, saying that Cold Lake is the most potent weapon the West has to answer Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's boast that the Russians have the United States Congressional Medal of Honor Astronaut Lieutenant-Commander Alan Shepard, Tennessee Democrat who was apparently trying to tell his colleagues what a powerful force the U.S. had in Canada.

Shepard was injured in the November issue of the National Police Gazette. It is known that the RCAF had nothing to do with the article and that the publication—Valiant Cold Lake, 1960"—is miles northeast of Edmonton.

It carried these headlines: "Why Khrushchev sees red—the missile base that can kayo Russia!"

"Push-button warfare is a reality at Cold Lake. Its arsenal is by air transportable thousands of missiles and rockets can penetrate the heart of Soviet defences."

Ironically, Cold Lake includes weapons range for the testing of air-to-air and ground-to-air missiles and rockets with no more than three or four miles at a maximum. It also trains CF-100 aircrews and has a radar station.

MAY BE LAYOFFS

ST. THOMAS (CP) — Morris Eubanks, division superintendent of the New York Central system, said Monday diversion of freight trains from Fort Erie to its Niagara Falls border crossing may result in the laying off of 30 employees at Fort Erie. He said indefinite diversion was the reason for the diversion, which went into effect Monday.

Firemen Probing Hulk For Victims, 46 Now Dead

Aircraft Carrier Fire Hits U.S. Defence Plans

NEW YORK (AP)—Navy officials today placed at 46 the death toll in a spreading disaster aboard the giant aircraft carrier Constellation, in harbor here.

Police had fled the count might reach 58 but the navy discounted this. The police list listed 39 workmen missing in addition to the known 46 dead.

However, the navy authorities said 10 of those who perished had not yet been identified and that apparently were being erroneously listed as missing.

The navy said a search of the carrier's fire-blackened passageways was continuing.

THE FIRE pars 2 di-88.

The fire, which raged out of control for most of Monday and into the night, cripples the world's first nuclear aircraft carrier afloat and struck a blow at U.S. defence plans.

Naval authorities said they had counted on the 60,000-ton Constellation ready for use as an attack carrier by mid-1961. Only a ship of this size, they said, has the adequate numbers of heavy jet planes and the power to fly landing arm.

Rear-Admiral Schuyler Pyne, commander of the Brooklyn Navy Yard in which the Constellation was berthed, estimated the fire set back completion of the ship by about a year. He estimated the damage at $75,000,000.

The Constellation was launched Oct. 8, was scheduled for commissioning in March. Its total cost was put at $94,000,000.

FIND NOTHING SUSPICIOUS

The navy said there was "nothing suspicious" about the blaze, started when a small boiling truck thrashed off a plug on a 320-gallon tank of jet fuel. The fluid forced down a boom onto water and into a well in which a welder was at work.

In addition to the dead, at least 150 were burned or otherwise injured, 70 of them severe in hospital.

Pyne said the fire started in a 4,000-man civilian work force.

The fire, which seemed controllable for a short time, spread to different decks as the flaming liquid coursed down the compartment to another and set ablaze other fuels, including plywood, interior work, cans of paint and other inflammable materials.

Flames leaped from passageways, slid down ropes and rope ladders to the gangways of the East River to escape the heavy smoke and billowing, poisonous smoke. Some were overcome by the icy water, many died of suffocation.

"I can't describe it any other way than as a blowtorch," one fireman after a rescue trip deep into the ship.

Another described the plates on the floor as "so damned hot you can't stand still even for a

More Consumer Goods Are Pledged Russians With Lower War Costs

MOSCOW (Reuters)—Russia's chief economic planner and its finance minister today promised the Soviet people a lighter burden of military spending and more consumer goods a 1961.

Planning chief Vladimir Novikov and Finance Minister Vasily Garbuzov outlined their plans for 1961 in the first major budget speech reports to members of Russia's supreme body, the Supreme Soviet including Premier Khrushchev, reconvening from the attack of influenza.

Garbuzov told the party and government officials that military spending would be cut next year by 11.9 per cent of the total budget expenditure, from 12.9 per cent this year.

But Garbuzov announced a 15.7-per-cent increase in Soviet investment in heavy industry, apparently aimed at keeping Russia ahead in the space race.

Novikov said that capital investment in light (consumer) industry would be increased by 62 per cent in 1961. The increased investment would permit full production in 29 new industrial centres and the beginning of construction of 32 others, he said.

Novikov claimed that Russia again gained ground this year in its drive to catch up with the United States in per capita production. He said industrial output per person rose 30 per cent in Russia between 1958 and 1960 while American production went up only eight per cent.

Russia still is a long way behind the United States in total output, however. Novikov said the Soviet production amounted to only about 60 per cent of the American total.

Novikov said Russia planned to increase its foreign trade by 65 per cent by 1965. He said: There was "vast scope" for an increase in trade between Russia and the United States.

He said the over-all output in Russia's state industrial sector had risen by 10 per cent in 1960, that labor productivity rose in this Soviet crops. The grain harvest was up over 1959 but the have been a bad year as well.

The poor harvest had caused great difficulties in Soviet meat production during 1960, he added.

But Novikov painted a glowing picture of agricultural prospects for 1961 and forecast an increase of 32 per cent in national income during 1961.

Urges Problems Of Publishers Get Publicity

OTTAWA (CP)—Formation of a publishers council to floodlight the problems of the Canadian periodicals industry in terms of the national interest was suggested today to the royal commission on publications.

The Canadian public has a most no realization of the extent to which Canadian public opinion is subject to external influence and control, said Graham Spry, Ottawa newspaper agent-general in London.

Mr. Spry appeared at the second round of the commission's Ottawa public hearings as a private citizen who believes that a strong competitive periodical industry owned, edited and operated by and for Canadians is vital to the freedom of Canadian public opinion."

While offering a number of suggestions as to possible government action to improve the economic position of Canadian magazines, Mr. Spry urged that publishers themselves might take the lead by forming a publishers council.

What is needed, he said, is a council broadly representative of both periodical publishers and the Canadian public that would rep the publishers' problems in terms of Canadian public opinion and national interest.

The Canadian public "too little appreciates the position of Canadian periodicals," and in spite of awareness of the extent of United States influences.

"It is only necessary that the people and regions of Canada be united by constitutional and economic relations but that they understand the aims and instruments of public opinion also from region to region."

Hrooding Mr. Spry's other suggestions was the proposal that the magazine split term "Canadian edition" be defined by statute that a magazine or other publication bearing this label require Canadian ownership in the control of the policy, Canadian editorship, printing and distribution and majority Canadian editorial content."

Armed-Holdup Man Retires Without Loot

MOUNTAIN (CP)—A would-be armed-holdup man retired without loot Monday night when his attempted robbery of the Mountain Co-operative Store met the barrage of missiles from the postmaster, his wife and a customer.

Postmaster Mrs. Ethel Lambert here the last 20 years, said he grabbed a can of tomatoes and a grapefruit and greeted him first with an empty mail bag and then with a bottle of ink, a bulging brandishing a child's sled.

The man fled when he was awed-off shotgun discharged and blasted a gaping hole in the post office ceiling.

The thief, accompanied by two other men, escaped in a car stolen from Reeve William Cameron earlier in the evening.

Jobless Father And 2 Children Shot to Death

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP)—Raymond Perrault, 29, and his two children were found shot to death Monday in a barn on their farm near this asbestos mining centre, provincial police said.

The children were Joan, two years old, and Jean, three.

Police quoted Mrs. Perrault as saying that her husband, unemployed since May, came to the house about 11:30 a.m. and told her he was taking the children to the barn.

ROBERT ANDERSON WINS COUNCIL SEAT AT STIRLING

STIRLING (Special) — Robert Anderson was elected to village council following a 58 per cent turnout of the eligible voters at a second municipal election held here Monday. Mr. Anderson polled 220 votes, defeating William Parker, who polled 156 votes.

A second election for council was called when one aspirant failed to qualify at the first nomination meeting in late November.

CHILDREN ENJOY CHRISTMAS PARTY AT POINT ANNE

Santa Claus visited Point Anne last Sunday afternoon to attend the annual Christmas tree party for Canada Cement employees' children. Presents were distributed to all by St. Nick during the program, which was arranged by the Point Anne sports committee with Frank Insley acting as master of ceremonies. Films of sports events and a few words were said by A. O. Drysdale, plant manager and Don Bunshaw for the plant employees. The party was held under the direction of Earle Anderson.

Paul Fleming Named Trustee In Low Vote

With one of the lowest vote percentages polled in the history of local elections, Paul Fleming was elected yesterday as Separate School Trustee for Ward 3. He defeated Patrick Callery in the election which saw only a very small turnout of voters.

Mr. Fleming received 25 votes to his opponent's 16. There are said to be close to 500 eligible Separate School voters in the ward.

No votes were registered at the advance poll held for three days at city hall.

The special election for Ward 3 Separate School trustee was necessary when no candidate was nominated at the regular nomination meeting. A second nomination meeting saw Mr. Fleming and Mr. Callery both qualifying to run for the position.

Rotary Enjoys Last Meeting Before Christmas

With a jolly 'ho, ho, ho.' Santa Claus burst in on the weekly meeting of local Rotarians at the Hotel Quinte yesterday afternoon, amazing all who had been laughing as the Christmas spirit touched them with a generous present for a wild melee of gift wrapping. The result of all this was much merriment followed by the auctioning of a handsome contribution for the Salvation Army's Christmas Cheer fund.

Rotarian J. B. Creggal read the Christmas story and a few other excerpts illustrative of the spirit of the season following a carol sing led by Jack Deacon. Richardson Creggan's remarks were followed with a recitation by Arty Lee Miller who, together with Larry Seamen, were guests of the club at the invitation of the crippled children's committee.

President Bill Hurst was chairman for the meeting, which was one of the busiest and most active sessions the club has had in recent months. There will be no meetings of Rotary for the next two weeks.

Mrs. O. Roblin Marks 80th Birthday

Last Friday afternoon, Mrs. O. Roblin celebrated her 80th birthday at her own home in Corbyville, which was prettily decorated for the occasion with pink, red and white streamers, the theme of Christmas. Her daughters, Mrs. W. Benson, who is responsible for the gathering together of 25 friends and relatives to extend their congratulations to this grand occasion, and to present her with tokens of their esteem.

Among the many lovely gifts received were several floral ones, one of which was a beautiful vase of red roses, sent by the Women's Missionary Society, and the Women's Association of Canniton United Church.

The tea table was a picture with its Scotch lace cloth centred by a prettily decorated birthday cake bearing the legend "Happy Birthday, Grandma" in pink on a white ground. Tall tapers, and silver ice service completed the pretty setting.

Those who poured were Mrs. Benson, and Mrs. W. Beacham, both old neighbors of the honored guest.

While the cake was being served, Mrs. F. Partridge serenaded Mrs. Roblin by playing "Happy Birthday" with guitar accompaniment, greatly to the guests' vocalizing.

Mrs. Roblin was also presented during the get - together with a lovely pink Sweetheart rosebud corsage by Mrs. Pearl Clarke.

Mrs. Roblin is enjoying good health, and keeps up to the minutes with the daily news, and especially enjoys a chin-chat with her neighbors.

The community also extends its best wishes to this grand old lady for continued good health and happiness in the years ahead, with a safe arrival at her 90th milestone.

New Administrative Assistant Will Head Purchasing Dept., Look After Personnel Matters

A position recommended as having priority rating following an administrative survey made of city hall some months ago was that of administrative assistant to the manager, it was disclosed by members of city council yesterday.

The job goes to L. A. Jobey, former purchasing agent with the Williams and Williams Company in Trenton, who will assume his new duties in Belleville on January 9th next year. Salary for the position will be $5,600 annually.

Although officially designated as administrative assistant, in effect, Mr. Jobey will head up a centralized purchasing department for the city and also will look after personnel matters.

In presenting the recommendation for the hiring of Mr. Jobey, Alderman Leslie Reid as chairman of the council personnel committee, noted that filling the position of administrative assistant was one of the priority recommendations made by consultants during the administrative survey of city hall. He noted there had been over 70 applications for the job, adding that more likely of the applicants were called in for personal interviews by his committee. He said Mr. Jobey had been highly recommended.

The motion to hire the new purchasing agent carried after council by a substantial majority, but not before two councillors questioned whether the city actually required such a man at this time.

ACTION QUESTIONED

Alderman Ben Cooke questioned whether there would be sufficient work for a purchasing agent to do to satisfy the major city departments such as the fire department, police department, P.U.C. Hydro-Electric and the hospital would co-operate in the central purchasing idea.

He pointed out also that a secretary would be required for the purchasing agent and this would increase the cost to city by $10,000 per year.

Alderman Reid replied council did not have assurance from other boards that they would co-operate by utilizing the services of centralized purchasing. Such assurance would have to be won over.

"We hope and think that it will", he said.

Alderman Cooke however, said he still disagreed. He argued that 1960 had been one of the most hectic years ever experienced by city council members and said that in future the work load of administrative officials at city hall could be expected to be reduced.

"So here we are making a decision to spend $9,000 on such a position on which there is some indication as to whether it is urgently needed," he said.

But Alderman William Jarvis said the position was being pushed into the decision.

JUST WISHFUL THINKING

He pointed out that there was now an employees' union at city hall and said if anyone thought the city manager would have time to deal with the many union problems it was merely a matter of wishful thinking.

He said dealing with such problems would require months of time from some administrative official. Otherwise there would be one schmozzle at city hall, he said.

Alderman George Wishart felt a purchasing agent would save the city money, but Alderman Jack Ellis as chairman of public works was not so sure. He noted that salaries and wages were the big item in his department, while all supplies purchasing was done by tender.

At the same time, however, he agreed in general with the idea of centralized purchasing.

Alderman Reid said surveys had shown that a big percentage of municipalities up to 20,000 had purchasing agents with purchasing saving of up to 15 per cent being realized. Even if a saving of only five per cent was realized in Belleville it would more than pay the cost of the position, he said.

"Belleville is a growing city," he remarked. "To defeat this motion tonight would be putting the clock back."

Alderman Jack Deacon urged that the city be brought up to date in the purchasing which he claimed was now being done by way of a "cloak and dagger system."

"I don't know what a purchasing agent would save, but it would be worth while to find out," he said.

NOT HIRING ASSISTANT

Alderman Don Whalen wondered if whether or not they got getting a little ahead of itself.

"We are hiring an assistant to the city manager when we city don't even have the city manager form of government," he said.

"I think we are getting a bit overloaded with experts."

But the position was an assistant to the manager," returned Alderman Reid. "It is a dual position of purchasing agent and personnel."

Little Interest Shown in New Zoning Plans

The apparent lack of interest in city property owners in the proposed new zoning regulations expected to be put into effect next year, gave rise to comment at city council yesterday.

In view of the importance of the proposed changes, Alderman Don Whalen wondered whether there had been much comment from other boards that they would co-operate by utilize the services of centralized purchasing. Such assurance would have to be won over."

"We hope and think that it will", he said.

Alderman Corke however, said he still disagreed. He argued that 1960 had been one of the most hectic years ever experienced by city council members and said that in future the work load of administrative officials at city hall could be expected to be reduced.

"So here we are making a decision to spend $9,000 on such a position on which there is some indication as to whether it is urgently needed," he said.

But Alderman William Jarvis said the position was being pushed into the decision.

B.P.W. Club Enjoys Turkey Dinner

The Belmont club rooms took on a festive air last Monday on the occasion of the Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club annual Christmas party.

Members and guests enjoyed a sumptuous turkey dinner with all the traditional trimmings. The tables were decorated in the club gold shade, and other Christmas decorations that did much to add to everyone's enjoyment of a delightful supper.

Following introduction of guests a brief business session was held with president Mildred Hall presiding.

The remainder of the evening was turned over to Mrs. Shirley Woodcox, program chairman, who began the festivities with a ringsong, led by Miss Muriel Jobson, with Mrs. Marie Buckley at the piano.

A number of amusing games were enjoyed, with the lucky winners being the recipients of colorful spoons, which were much admired.

Later in the evening, the grand old gentleman, Santa Claus, appeared with a "brand new face" made his traditional appearance, and, with the assistance of Miss Florence Fitzgerald, proceeded to delight everyone present by distributed favors and gifts from Icewalk the beautifully decorated Christmas tree. Some of those present were a little concerned when they noted that "Santa" was a mere shadow of his former self, as compared to last year.

The evening will certainly be remembered as one of the more successful Christmas parties held by the club.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held on January 16.

CJBQ Staffer Bill McKay Has LP Record Marketed

Bill McKay, well-known staff announcer at CJBQ radio has made his first LP. recording which is now on sale in district stores. Released by Arc Sound of Toronto, this album is entitled "Popular Folk Songs" and includes such favorites as "My Nova Scotia Home," "Strawberry Roan" and "Clementine".

Bill has been on a typical Western Canadian homestead at Amulet, Saskatchewan and spent the first 18 years of his life on the farm. Music was part of the activities of the McKay household and Bill's mother and father sang folk songs as they went about their work. Other songs of early times were learned at the home parties and hoe-downs staged for neighbors and kin in the home. Bill started singing these songs and playing the guitar at the age of seven. He learned his present style of playing the guitar with thumb and three fingers from a farm neighbor who came to Canada from Missouri.

In 1952 he was stricken with polio and spent six months in hospital. Then the urge came to return to the music he had grown up with. Bill became a radio announcer and soon organized his band in Timmins, Ontario. Since then Bill has studied and practised the old songs of Canada and other lands and has first Arc album performs them in his own folk style. His daily radio show of CJBQ "Country Junction" is heard daily at 2.05 to 3.00 p.m. and has a wide following throughout the Quinte district.

Fleming to Chair Financial Course of Ship of State

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming, who likes rowing a skiff, speaks in the Commons tonight to chart the financial courses of Canada's ship of state.

By now, the 55-year-old minister is experienced in both kinds of navigation. This will be his fifth budget speech in 3½ years in office.

This one, generally termed a belt-tightening budget, will be a document to his budget last March 31 when he charted the government's fiscal course for the current fiscal year.

Apart from tonight's performance, this is almost a routine day in the house, observers say. Mr. Fleming had scheduled the normal round of office work this morning. But officials said he hoped to get home for supper earlier than usual to give him time for a last-minute run-through of his speech.

TO WEAR SAME SUIT

He will change into a dark blue double-breasted suit, his usual budget speech uniform, and arrive at supper with his family to return to the Commons about 15 minutes before the scheduled start of his speech at 8 p.m.

As his budget speech last March 31, he forecast a six-per-cent rise in Canada's gross national product and on that basis estimated a $12,000,000 budget surplus for the fiscal year beginning next March 31.

Since then, however, conditions have changed. The economy has slowed down, though there are conflicting views on the extent of the slowdown. Mr. Fleming has disagreed with economists who see a serious recession shaping up.

Whether or not he will be making any tax changes, it's certain the new budget will revise the March 31 forecasts of the government's financial picture for the fiscal year. Revenues haven't risen as fast as he predicted then and expenditures have risen faster than forecast.

If no changes were made tonight, a budget deficit would be virtually inevitable. The last three years all have produced deficits, totalling some $1,061,- 000,000.

Member Gives Party Supporters Outline of Work

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — In 10 years time, Canadians will decide whether or not Canada "will remain under the shadows of other nations, or become independent, making its own decisions," Walter Pitman, New Party member of Parliament for Peterborough, said Monday night.

Mr. Pitman spoke to 200 New Party supporters at the organization meeting of the Peterborough riding New Party Association.

He said he regarded only one issue as urgent—the decision for bidding the non-operating railways employees the right to strike.

He said the "other legislation is important but not of so long-range nature with no sense of urgency.

"For people out of work in the small country to know that things are being done only to make sure that there is less unemployment in 1970," he told Mr. Pitman.

Mr. Pitman won the party's first seat in the Commons in a recent by-election. Monday night he was named honorary president of the party's newly-formed riding association.

Reeve William Grant of Lakefield, a lawyer and former CCF candidate in the riding, was elected president.

Process Server Admits Deal With Lawyer

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says a process server admitted to the attorney-general's department Monday that he had a deal with a lawyer not to bother investigating photographs of contested divorce co-respondents.

The newspaper says the admission was made before a group of senior officials at an interview in the legislative office of the attorney-general's staff.

Several striking process servers were ordered to appear Monday for questioning by Hugh Donald, inspector of legal offices, and Elliott Pepper, director of public prosecutions.

Other process servers were to be interviewed by the department today.

Process servers who deliver papers in divorce cases are required by law to identify the co-respondents from a photo attached to the documents. They later must swear that the person named in the papers was the same one appearing in the photo.

Angels' Message Can Apply To Present Age

TRENTON — Rev. D. C. McLelland of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, addressing the Rotary Club last night, said that a Christian's first "thrust" toward Christmas should be toward God.

"The holy angels announcing Christ's birth brought a message to mankind," he said. "The words 'Glory to God in the highest and on Earth, peace and good will toward all men,' have an application in the modern world."

Peace is possible only if friendship is developed among nations and individuals.

"Anything that creates an atmosphere of friendship, be it the recent visit of the Archbishop of Canterbury to the head of the Roman Catholic Church, or a meeting of the local Rotary Club, is carrying out the concept of the angels' chorus," said Mr. McLelland.

He said he deplored any type of racial or religious discrimination.

"We all belong to God," he said. "We each have a destiny in the world, and we should allow the joyous spirit of Christmas to prevail in our daily living."

Mr. McLelland was introduced by Mike Andelcan and thanked by Robert Smithrim and President Ed A. Sprowle.

During the meeting, games committee chairman Bill Mallory presented the club with a cheque for $1,200 from bingo earnings, to be divided in the club's benevolent fund. President Sprowle commended on the work the bingo committee, led by Mr. Whitley, had done over the years.

Meat Inspection By-Law Proposed By Health Board

City council at their first regular meeting of the new year will consider a by-law to provide for the inspection of meat offered for sale and also by-law to provide for the appointment of a meat inspector.

Covering recommendation from the Board of Health asking that the by-laws be brought in were up for consideration at yesterday's meeting of council but were tabled to allow the medical officer of health Dr. McColl Metcalfe to address council on the matter.

"Has there been any inspection of meat in Belleville all these years?" asked Alderman Robert Temple.

The reply was that there was provincial or federal inspection of meat coming from packing plants but there had been no provision for inspection of meats slaughtered locally and offered for sale.

"Do we have lived all this time?" Alderman Jack Ellis asked.

Big Price Hikes On Imported Cars Not Seen Yet

OTTAWA (CP) — Dire prophecies of big price increases on cars imported from Europe have been inaccurate and misleading so far, Finance Minister Nowlan said Monday.

He spoke in the Commons on the import to date of the Dec. 1 increase in the basis on which British and other European automobiles are assessed duty and tax.

The Dec. 1 change reduced a discount rate to 22½ per cent from 30 after complaints by the Auto Workers Union and others in Windsor that the old rate was letting cars into the country too cheaply.

Imports under duty free but once the sales tax is applied to all cars sold in the country, the British cars from Europe pay that tax plus 17½-per-cent duty.

Mr. Nowlan said that, as of November, the new firm, Renault, said there would be no retail price increase and Chrysler and the firms about its French-made Simca, as did Ford of its British car line. Volkswagen prices were up $50 to $80 depending on model.

British Motor Corporation was increasing its prices $90 and up depending on model, Mr. Nowlan said.

Planes Should Avoid Cities

Last week's tragedies in New York and Munich, when planes fell into cities, were not the first occasions on which unexpected death fell from the skies on those below in peacetime. Coming so close together, though, they dramatized what may well prove one of the most deadly problems facing airport planners in the future. At Munich, for the first time, the death toll amongst those on the ground was larger than amongst those in the plane.

In spite of the apparent frequency of plane accidents, this means of travel is growing steadily safer in relation to the number of passenger miles travelled, and the most realistic yardstick. But the safety factor cannot be said to be improving for those persons who reside near the great airports of the world. The bigger the planes, the greater havoc they can wreak amongst those on the ground. Added to this is the fact that bigger planes are less manoeuvrable and that the ever-increasing volume of traffic presents more and more hazard. There are not only more planes aloft, but airports are being overloaded, with frequent occasions when planes are "stacked up" and have to circle awaiting their turn to land.

Already there is a steady stream of complaints about the time which it takes passengers to reach their destinations in the great cities after landing at their airports which serve them. There are other complaints about the delays in take-off. But, for the sake of safety, it is surely obvious that it is desirable that the airports of the future be located farther away from the cities they serve, rather than nearer to them.

Even on this side of the Atlantic, where many of the built-up suburban areas are of comparatively recent origin, planners did not foresee the jet age, with the tremendously long runways necessary for huge planes so set down, or lift up, safely. Even where these needs were foreseen, the premonitions of these facts are suggested have been ignored. Planes leaving Chicago, one of the busiest airports on the continent, pass over houses immediately after take-off. Even an airport like Malton, serving Toronto, is not so far distant from the down-town area as to make it highly improbable that some plane, circling after take-off or preparatory for a landing, may not be forced to pass over the heavily built-up areas. Yet, surely, it is obvious that it is desirable that planes which pass over great urban centres should do so at only great altitudes, sufficient to allow the pilots to glide towards open country should anything go wrong. The smaller communities are not in such danger; even when flying at lower altitudes the fast-moving planes, unless crippled by a mid-air collision, can be guided away from the built-up areas much more easily.

There is something particularly shocking about a person on the ground being killed by a falling airplane. The airline passenger takes chances with full knowledge of the risks, which are not high and may well be less than those many of us take every day when travelling in an automobile over certain highways. But the man who stays on the ground would appear to be entitled to the greatest consideration in protection from death or injury resulting from the actions of others. There seems to be an increasing tendency to disregard this fact. The report a cow was killed in Cuba as the result of the malfunction of a U.S. rocket was regarded as almost a joke in some circles but this animal may have been just the fore-runner of human sacrifices to come if the rocket is ever converted to utilitarian use, carrying mail and even passengers.

Meanwhile should not some thought be given to relocating fresh airports in areas where can land or take off without circling over thickly-populated areas? Vast expenditures of money might be required, but such expenditures will be unavoidable in any case, if air travel continues to grow in popularity. Until airports are so located, every effort should be made to prevent planes from flying over cities except when unavoidable, or unless this is done at such altitudes as would make it simple for the pilot to avoid crashing in a built-up area in the event of any engine failure or similar emergency.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

GOD'S STANDARDS AND OURS

At the time of our Lord's coming upon the scene, no one was expecting him excepting a little group of pious people whose eyes, minds and hearts appeared to be turned heavenward.

It seems inconceivable that God chose such an audience, and for the redemption of the world to the group of shepherds keeping their sheep on the Judaean hills. The high priest reigned in splendor in Jerusalem. The Scribes and Pharisees were the religious leaders of the nation. Yet to none of them was the announcement made of Christ's coming. Zechariah, the father of John the Baptist, saw clearly the glory of the Lord approaching. The aged Simeon and Anna the prophetess recognized the significance of the advent.

Babe Jesus when he was brought into the temple. But no one else seemed to know of these things. The Spirit of God had informed by the angelic messenger of the significance of the approaching birth, but what was accomplished by what she heard.

It is an amazing thing to observe the way the Lord often uses the weak things of the world to confound the mighty, and reveals himself through the humble and lowly of mind. God seems to put no stock in many of the things which we hold to be of great value. And many of these individuals who to us are humble and unimpressive, are in His great and the channels of His grace.

We need to keep close to God lest we be deceived by appearances.

The Day the A-Bomb Fell on Hiroshima

By HON. ROBERT W. MACAULAY
Ontario Minister of Energy Resources

ARTICLE 54

Might Japan have surrendered to the Allies without the discharge of either of the atomic bombs that did such destruction on August 6th and 9th, 1945, at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, (The hitherto secret Potsdam Declaration).

In a sense Hiroshima and Nagasaki were valuable events—or if they are not, they could have been.

Japan before becoming lost in a neverending upon the direction in which we are moving nationally and internationally, is still contributing to nuclear energy and the atom. Let us look at one of what happened within minutes at Hiroshima on August 6th, 1945.

On August 6th, 1945, 100,000 Japanese died in Hiroshima. God must have wept, but many of the Allies rejoiced.

The bomb was the war's greatest sensation. Indeed, it had been a war of sensations.

In the preceding articles, we discussed the content of an atomic and hydrogen bomb. The bomb that tore Hiroshima apart was made of 1233 The bomb that fell on Nagasaki (it was intended for Kokura, an industrial and rail centre, but it was clouded over), was made of plutonium. Both bombs destroyed and are not at all similar to the hydrogen bombs.

IN TWO PARTS

The Hiroshima bomb was in two parts, the gun and gun barrel at opposite ends. When the two parts of U235 were fired at each other they formed what was called a critical mass and exploded, creating a sensation for man.

The bomb exploded 30,000 feet away from and below the B-29 plane that dropped it, and which fled at great speed from the scene. The bomb exploded with a 1700 feet radius.

The Hiroshima bombs were made in the Pacific Island in the Marianas long before the atomic bomb test explosion in New Mexico in July 1945. Even before the Hiroshima bomb was tested, it was proved it was obsolete and that the bombs of the future in the kind of atomic bomb that was exploded in New Mexico. Even as the Hiroshima bomb was 2,000 times more powerful than any bomb any nation had ever exploded.

It was equal in power to 20,000 tons of TNT. Present hydrogen bombs are equal in power to 5,000,000 tons of TNT. But the Hiroshima bomb was the first and last of its kind, man has learned since since then, he can make much more powerful bombs now for he can kill more people and he has developed many methods of making a dying man suffer more. So, indeed, man has accomplished many skills since 1945.

MOMENTOUS DECISION

It was decided that the atomic bomb should be used against Japan as soon as possible" and that "it should be used on a military objective or a war plant, surrounded by or adjacent to other buildings particularly susceptible to damage" and that "it should be used without prior warning."

As the bomb exploded a Japanese man was killed or lived — there was no time to even think. He was lost. At the centre of the bomb everything vaporized (turned to ash but to gas), by the million of degrees of temperature. This heat pushed the air with the force of a tremendously big air a vast white ball of fire. Within a moment on the ground and large concentrations were formed in the area behind the pressure waves and were lit up by the ball of fire formed within. A column of vapor rose in the rush of heated air to a height of feet.

At the point of explosion temperatures and pressures are tremendous, accompanying tremendous shock waves.

The pressure is one lb. per square inch but at Hiroshima it was 200 lbs. It was measured in the thousands of pounds per square inch. This pressure easily broke houses like swatting flies with a hammer.

The Hiroshima bomb was believed to have exploded under 1,800 feet above the ground. Large buildings were simply pushed over. Steel and concrete buildings were just knocked off base up to 3-4 of a mile away from the blast.

In addition, the downward blast caused roofs and tops of buildings. Up to two miles away in the light frames homes were destroyed. Windows were broken eight miles away There were four square miles of virtual total destruction and many miles of serious damage.

The bomb went off at 8 a.m. on a bright August day. Even so the blast was brilliant according to survivors. Many burns were fatal over a mile away from the blast. Mild burns were experienced ten miles away from the scene.

Many buildings were set on fire by the heat — over a mile away.

Gamma radiation wrought havoc. It placed through feet of solid concrete. People exposed upon the street to vomit until they died. Thousands died of internal hemorrhages days later.

Thousands of Japanese became radio-active. Many developed gangrene of the mouth. Months after the bomb continued to die, even years later. Pregnant women had miscarriages, or children were born who soon died. Only at a distance of a mile were ordinary buildings enough to give protection against gamma radiation.

In Hiroshima, 90,000 to 100,000 people were killed and in Nagasaki, 37,000 — 40% of the population which was, say, 100,000. Who was killed, the number this was an atomic bomb equal to 20,000 tons of TNT. Present bombs are equal to 10,000,000 or more tons of TNT.

IMPERATIVE CHALLENGE

Present men talk about defence to the new hydrogen bombs. Can it bombs Admittedly, some defence is possible, and even the country can carry on some business. But, as with the atomic attack, but the purpose of man ought to be to stop the explosion before it starts. When war becomes even more imperative to stop because of the fact that every crackpot dictator in the world can in time have a few of his own. Civilization will have hate to rely on Castro's good judgment. Hitler would have used an atomic bomb if he had possessed one last resort, had he had one to use.

The challenge is not the liberal who will die; it is the man who will go on living after the war.

The challenge is the evolution of man — it is no less, and neither on a national nor an international basis are we doing enough. The world awakening of nationalism is proof itself that we need to do more to help ourselves and those goals for what we stand.

Hydrogen bombs are far more powerful than the atomic bomb that fell on Hiroshima.

Much death, perhaps the end of can, be near at hand.

What a shame it when with the same resources and funds man might exercise diligence and improve crops and advance the highest principles of Christian men and women.

This is a matter of the hearts and souls of men, long believed to be the cause of governments.

Einstein once said that in the one equation when he showed how force man could produce, but he left it to the Honored and wise alike to apply it!

To be continued.

Some Quotes That Were Never Quoted

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Some months ago, to rivet a point, I quoted what I thought was said, "No power on earth is stronger than that of an idea whose time has come."

I attributed it to Goethe — because I had found it in a book which credited the saying to him, but subsequently I discovered that it, or wrote it. A Princeton professor who has made a life-long study of Goethe's works has been unable to locate that saying anywhere in the poet's writings, he will continue to be circulated and it is highly unlikely that any German writer.

Several accuracy has no chance against tradition. Everyone is convinced that Voltaire wrote: "I disapprove of what you say, yet I will defend to the death your right to say it."

It is one of the most popular quotations of all time. Yet Voltaire never said it. Nobody knows who did. It is a myth, but it became attached to his name. Once it was, it could never be shaken.

In England, pretty citizens are fond of repeating the famous remark by the Duke of Wellington that: "The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing-fields of Eton."

But, as E.M. Foster pointed out in his study, "Notes on the British Character," some years ago, this statement was not historically true. Besides, it was never made by the Duke of Wellington and furthermore, the Duke was not an Englishman, but an Irishman!

Similarly, in France, the passionate patriots still believe that the Baron de Cambronne said the famous saying: "The Old Guard dies, but does not surrender."

Yet Cambronne himself, 30 years later, disclaimed any such saying, and added with great honesty, "In the first place, we did not die, and in the second place, we did surrender."

The Hume scene is in no position to provide adequate practice facilities for minor league hockey.

Dedicated in Ottawa by His Excellency the Governor - General of Canada, the first Y.M.C.A. War Services "tea car" passed in the city Wednesday before leaving for its destination at Camp Borden, the first of five planned to be used in Canada for the Canadian soldiers. Three hundred cups of tea are always available in thermos jugs, while a gasoline stove and water tank will supply another 300 cups. With water available the wagon can carry supplies for 6,000 cups without returning to its base.

Aged Driver Gives up Car

Cape Breton Post

A clergyman in Elmira, N.Y., sent his licence to the state motor vehicle bureau in Albany, with a letter, saying: "Having reached age of 82 and realizing that my eyesight is failing, I no longer, I have disposed of my car and hereby surrender my driving licence."

What really puts an accolade on his letter was the statement that he had been driving of 48 years without being in an accident or breaking the law. A shining record indeed. Many a motorist has broken a law without the least intention and, sometimes, without awareness in his violation.

To Your Good Health

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"BLOOD SUGAR" CONSUMED AT DIFFERENT RATES

"Dear Dr. Molner: My oldest son, aged eight, used to throw up his breakfast. I spoke to our pediatrician, and he said the boy had low blood sugar, and to give him a piece of fruit or candy as soon as he got up, and breakfast would be forthcoming.

"He dislikes the easy so I make him hot lemonade, consisting of a wedge of lemon, sugar and hot water. He has been much improved.

"I have two younger boys, four and two, who insist on the same lemonade when they get up because they have seen their older brother drink it. I have been giving it to them. Is this all right? —H.O."

I don't see anything to worry about.

But let me explain — when we eat our food, some of the nourishment is for building (or re-building) the body. We keep on building as long as we live.

The rest of the nourishment goes into energy and heat — the energy for working and moving, and the heat to keep the rest of our body up to 98.6 degrees.

Now day by day we energy change into those forms from the toast, cereal and lunch and supper we have eaten. Certain foods we eat provide varying amounts of a group of substances called sugars — of which table sugar is one. These sugars are fuel providing either heat or energy as needed. They are distributed through the body in the form of "blood sugar."

Now some of us burn up this sugar faster than others, and need some furnaces run hotter than others, and consequently need more fuel and use up more fuel according.

Your oldest boy uses up his blood sugar, and when he wakes up in the morning he has little store of sugar in a hurry. That's the reason for suggesting the candy.

Your other boys burn up their things too sweet. So the hot lemonade gives them the sugar they needs to tide him over, and it still has a sour taste.

The tea destroys the Vitamin C from the lemon. About all that's left is the sugar. That's important, to see that the boys have their Vitamin C in some form or other every day, usually citrus juice or tomato juice. Or citrus fruits.

Under-weight children usually display some signs of needing sugar at getting-up time. I'd be inclined to reduce the sugar in their drinks to an absolute minimum.

But I don't want to be known as side is going to hurt any of them. Just keep in mind that all you are giving them, really, is some flavored sugar water.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I lift weights for exercise. I don't get exercise. Recently a large tumor appeared on my breast. It has a fleshy, lumpy consistency. It is almost as though a marble had been pushed under my skin. It does not really hinder me but after strenuous exercise it hurts a little and appears larger. —A.G."

Sounds like a ganglion — a cyst in a tendon sheath. Sometimes the cyst ruptures and subsides, only to fill again and the lump is back again. Often they are removed surgically, if they become a nuisance. They are not cancerous, that, but they aren't cancerous.

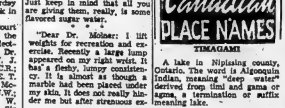
"Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible to have your menstrual cycle stop for a pregnancy? One woman claims she was menstruating the whole nine months and didn't even know she was pregnant. She thought she was only getting fat. —Mrs. H. R."

Yes, the case you cite is possible, but rare.

Occasionally it happens that a woman runs menstruation for two or three months, then stop. Likewise, it is also possible to miss one or two periods and not be pregnant. But don't depend on it.

Lack of Jobs Foils Cupid

Vancouver Sun



Ten couples out of 100 who want to get married in the Vancouver area do not get as far as it. No jobs.

That is the sad implication of figures showing there were 360 fewer marriages in January-October than last year. A drop off in marriages from 3,922 last year faster than others.

A mother recently described to a Sun reporter her daughter's plight in this newspaper. Her son had a job and hoped to get married for many months, but can't get a job. And he's too responsible to marry without one.

She also described the economic chain reaction on the whole family because of the things for his girl. There is no honeymoon trip. There is no new household set up, no trip to the store for furniture.

Then there is the most galling touch of all: "What makes it worse is that everything — that he was told in a few cases that he was considered for would stand a better chance for a job, but how can a man marry under such conditions?"

TIMAGAMI

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE MELLOWING YEARS

It is difficult to talk to Youth. It is too restless, grasping more than it has, too anxious to triumph in one city to go to another, hundreds of people paradise. But this is the significant things.

In talking of Youth, I might be said this: "I am not nearly as much in love with it as I used to be."

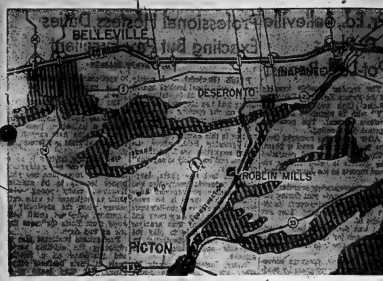
Thus it was that my friend, whose hair was white like the driven snow, was mystified at the greatness vaster and finer than that which he had known.

It is this which the years give to those who live them wisely.

I have been loving the fall of the leaves this passing autumn, and the bare twigs and branches I can see more than the abundance of foliage. I can see more clearly the edges of the hills, the precise line of newer life, and perhaps things are better when the Winter shall have passed and spring shall have come again.

Can human life be less important or less sure than that of the trees?

Do we not live to die — to live again?



THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

A bowled drunk, standing sobbing in front of a bar-room, had dow afforded a sad sight to the lected children, at home! Had he, perhaps, loved and lost a mother? Was he, in fact, under the memory of his own childhood?

A police cruiser drew up to the curb; and it was evident that the appearance of this sad figure at the top door, that they knew him well. Two of the burly boys in blue unceremoniously led the sad figure into the cruiser, it was obvious they knew him.

"He's a bachelor, and a pretty good young constable is right to my enquiry. "He gets plenty of 'jag' to sober up from, but my chops all over town in the hope of getting the odd handout. The love of him, he appears to do all right.

Bridge Across Bay of Quinte Near Deseronto Announced; New Highways Will Be Built

Pre-engineering work prior to the reconstruction of Highway 41 from Picton to Roblin Mills, construction of a new highway from Roblin Mills to Stoneville and construction of a causeway and overhead bridge across Telegraph Narrows in the Deseronto area will begin immediately, it was announced today.

The announcement was made jointly by Clarke T. Rollins, M.L.A., Hastings East; Elmer Sanderson, M.L.A., Hastings West; Norris Whitney, M.L.A., Prince Edward-Lennox; Hon. William Nickel, Minister of Planning and Development; and J. A. Simonett, M.L.A., Frontenac-Addington, whose combined efforts brought about authorization for the work from the Ontario government.

Also in line for major improvement is Highway 28 from the Ontario-Quebec boundary. Every effort will be made to maintain the same and historical aspects of Highway 33. Some contracts may be called in 1961.

It is hoped that contracts will be called in 1962 for the Picton to Marysville phase of the three-part project.

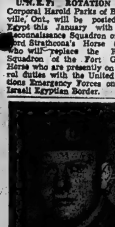
Three cloverleaf connections are planned on Highway 401. The first will be built immediately north of Marysville; the second, immediately south of Deseronto; the third, about three miles west of Odessa. These connections will add to the modern highways now being made available to the Belleville, Deseronto, Picton, Napanee, Kingston areas.

PROPOSALS MADE

Following is the government's proposal, as announced today by the minister and district members of the legislature:

1. Highway 33 will be maintained as a provincial highway. It will be repaved, where needed, from Perry Point to Collins Bay; otherwise, the road will not be reconstructed. However, that part of the highway from Collins Bay into Kingston will be reconstructed and made modern to meet present traffic conditions.

2. To remove from Highway 33 some of the heavy traffic that currently emanates east and west from Kingston, a new highway will be built from Millhaven to a cloverleaf, which will be constructed about three miles west of Odessa on Highway 401. There is a "strong possibility" that further work will be built at Millhaven to take care of possible resulting shipments. The new Millhaven-to-Highway 401 road will take care of this, and other heavy traffic situations, thus relieving Highway 33.



3. Another problem considered in the studies which have been under way for some time is the connection of Prince Edward County and its county seat of Picton to Kingston and the Highway 401 system. This traffic now goes by way of Glenora and a ferry across Adolphus Reach and by way of Highway 41 and Green Point, thence by private ferry to near Deseronto. To meet this situation, it is proposed to redesign Highway 41 from Picton to Roblin Mills, from which point a new highway will be built to the vicinity of Solomonville, with a causeway and overhead bridge, about 50 feet high, being built across Telegraph Narrows. Then a connection will be made to Highway 2 at a point where it proceeds directly north to Marysville, where a cloverleaf interchange will be built on Highway 401, just north of the community. At this same point on Highway 2 the road proceeds directly into Deseronto.

VALUES MAINTAINED

The advantages of the project are that Highway 33 will remain as a provincial highway and will not be the responsibility of the counties. Its general construction and location will be preserved so that the scenic and historical values are maintained. At the same time, because of the new road from Millhaven north, the advantages of this point are not discounted, and heavy traffic is relieved which emanates from places farther east. One of the biggest advantages is that traffic originating in Prince Edward County, "which is very considerable and important," will have a new and direct access to Highway 401 and will not be routed over Highway 33. This will make the Highway 401 system more readily available to Picton and Prince Edward County.

High School Activities

QUINTE SECONDARY

By WAYNE GARIEPY and CARL LUTTRELL

Another Quinte first was rung up on December 3 as Quinte Secondary sent the school marching band and the cheerleaders to participate for the first time in the Santa Claus parade. We would like to congratulate them for their participation.

Wing Commander Maitland spoke to us during the assembly on Wednesday, December 7. His speech was very informative as he spoke on such current events as the Chilean airlift and the Congo crisis. He was able to give us a firsthand account of the conditions with the RCAF. Our thanks go to him again for giving his time to come and talk to us.

Last Friday night the Boys' Athletic Association held "Teen Special," one of Quinte's most successful dances to date, with a combined talents of the "Fabulons" of Belleville and the "Jays" of Oshawa. The success of this dance was evidenced in the large crowd that turned out.

Quinte's basketball teams, bantam, junior and senior, have been successful in exhibition games and are hard at work for the league opener early in January.

In our assembly last Wednesday, the teachers' Mr. Turcotte and the choir under Mr. Allen, gave us a hint of things to come with Christmas songs and carols. So to those having difficulty holding up under the strain of the long term, bear up and look ahead to the holidays so close at hand.

Thursday afternoon the Bible Club will present their annual Christmas pageant, reminding us of the meaning of Christmas. Then we are off for the holiday season.

ALSO STOLE TICKETS

TORONTO (CP)—A thief who stole a station wagon belonging to a Toronto ticket agency Monday got away with more than he expected—$19 tickets to the next attraction at the O'Keefe Centre for the Performing Arts, Julian Rubin, president of Moody Clgar Stores, Limited, said the station wagon contained 8000 worth of cigarets. Theatre officials said the tickets for a two-week engagement of Treasure Island were worth $1,250.

Christmas Shopping Rush Reason Given for Congestion On One-Way Traffic System

The reason for the evening rush hour traffic congestion along Front Street, particularly since the introduction of the one-way traffic system introduced one week ago, was questioned at city council yesterday.

Aldermen Don Whalen said it now takes roughly 30 minutes to drive along Front Street during the evening rush hour period due to the introduction of one-way traffic it seemed to take less time.

Chairman of Traffic, Alderman Robert Temple, replied one of the reasons for the congestion was the Christmas shopping rush.

Installation of pedestrian's "walk" lights at Front and Bridge Streets and also at Bridge and Pinnacle Streets was planned for early next year and labor was expected to help relieve the congestion.

He explained that when these lights were in operation all traffic would be stopped for a period to allow pedestrians to cross the intersections.

Council approved of a recommendation to install a blinker light at the corner of Victoria and Church Streets, the scene of several serious accidents in recent months. The light would show amber on Victoria and red on Church Street.

MOTIONS TURNED BACK

But recommendations for the raising of the present arterial highway arterial routes leading into the city were turned back when it was discovered there be been an error in the transcription and that the North Front Street arterial had been omitted.

The recommendations called for a speed limit of 40 miles per hour just inside the extreme westerly and easterly limits of the city along the No. 2 highway route, this being lowered to 30 mph outside the city limits existing prior to annexation.

The present 30 miles per hour limit would remain along the No. 2 highway route inside the "old" city.

At the Trent Road vs. Dundas Street West street naming feud still continues in council.

Last night the city planning committee came up with a recommendation calling for the name to be Trent Road westerly from Sidney Street.

The recommendation was defeated but when a revised motion was introduced giving the name of the street as Dundas Street West, the problem arose of whether the motion required a three-quarter vote or only a straight majority.

Another faction in council argued the recommendation was the result of a previous motion and therefore required a three-quarter majority. The other faction claimed the motion was a new one and called for only a straight majority. The matter was referred back for legal interpretation.

Also turned back was a recommendation from the fire committee calling for the purchase of a new fire truck at a cost of $15,215.

Another recommendation turned back, this time from the public works department, was a motion calling for the award of a contract for the building of a retaining wall at the Graham Apartments along Pinnacle St.

Both recommendations will be considered in the new year, the reason for their being tabled last night being lack of funds in this year's budget.

Final payment of the McFarland's senior hockey team outstanding debts was authorized on receipt of affidavits as to their existence at the meeting. The amount involved is $6,329.79 and included bills for hockey equipment and services provided the team by local firms.

The resignation of Arma Duke as civil defence co-ordinator was accepted by council. Alderman Corke said he hoped that the civil defence set-up could be re-enacted next year.

Jack Boarthur and A. C. Campbell were re-appointed as city representatives on the Bay of Quinte District High School Board.

Last night's meeting was the final regular session of the 1961 council. Best wishes for the season were expressed by Mayor A. M. Haig to council members and citizens as the meeting adjourned.

Argyll Chapter Sees Making of Yuletide 'Decor'

The December meeting of the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held in the Armouries, with the regent, Mrs. A. Duffy, presiding.

Correspondence included letters from the Retarded Children's Association thanking the chapter for a donation which had been used to purchase educational toys for the pupils, from the Bayside Home and School Club, acknowledging a gift of pictures of the Queen and Prince Philip.

Mrs. E. F. Smith, education secretary, had received a letter from Miss Joana Davenport, expressing her pleasure for being the recipient of the chapter scholarship. Mrs. Smith also reported that the adopted school at Cocsecon would be supplied with gifts at Christmas.

Mrs. F. Burtt, in charge of Christmas hampers for needy families, asked for volunteers to assist her. Several members expressed their willingness to act in this capacity.

A request from the officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment to cater for their annual Boxing Day tea-dance was discussed and it was decided to take this project on.

RESIGNATION RECEIVED

A letter of resignation from the regent was received. Mrs. Duffy has filled this office faithfully and capably and is wished with sincere regret that her resignation was accepted.

A nominating committee composed of Mrs. A. Cunningham, Mrs. J. Black, Mrs. E. F. Smith and Mrs. J. Miller, was appointed to bring in a slate of officers for the coming year.

Mrs. Duffy introduced Mrs. L. Jones, who demonstrated the art of making Christmas decorations, table centre and icing cakes and cookies. The pleasant and instructive hour was spent with the members trying their skill.

The thanks of the chapter were expressed by Mrs. F. Burtt to Mrs. Jones for her informative and witty talk and a small gift was presented.

A social hour followed with refreshments served by the Trenton members, Mrs. H. Campbell, Mrs. E. Smith and Mrs. P. Davis.

The Argyll Chapter is a participating organization in the Belleville United Appeal.

Holloway St. United Hears Yuletide Story

The regular meeting of the Holloway Street United Church Women's Association was held on the evening of December 8th, president, Mrs. Harold Outingdyke, welcomed all the ladies and read a Christmas poem, then all joined in sing of the Christmas hymn "Gently Mary Laid Her Child."

A short business period followed. Mrs. A. Campbell gave the treasurer's report; reports were also heard from the leaders of various committees.

The devotion was conducted by Mrs. O. Bertrand, opening with the "Prayer of Tiny Tim" and the hymn "O Little Town of Bethlehem". The Scripture, the Christmas story as found in Luke 2: 7-15, was read by Mrs. R. Parks. Mrs. Bertrand's meditation suggested that in Christmas one should go even more Bethlehem-ward. Christmas and Easter belong together and should never be kept apart. Christ died for us and we should take heart and not be kept apart. fears. In Christ we see a welcome beyond our wildest dreams, love beyond our love.

The regular collection and a White Gift offering were taken by Mrs. C. Smith and Mrs. A. Hilchon and received by Mrs. C. W. Coleman.

MEMBERSHIP

A WMS pin and certificate was presented to Mrs. C. Green by Mrs. R. Coulter and a W.A. life membership pin and certificate to Mrs. M. Hick by Mrs. B. Moorman.

Two piano solos were given, Christmas Medley "Star of the East," by Mrs. L. Bowes.

GUEST SPEAKERS

Mrs. G. Dobbs introduced the guest speakers Mrs. Hill of Cold United Church, Trenton. Mrs. Hill spoke on "The Christmas Story from a different angle", saying in part, and starting with "In the beginning . . ." then word-pictured how God, for thousands of years, had prepared for the first Christmas. At first God gave us a gift of choice but since Adam and Eve the devil we now have to tell to each gift we receive, that we should be thankful for work, even tiredness, because Jesus always chose to be people to His disciples."

Followed through with the stories of Cain and Abel, Noah, Abraham, the chosen Israelites, Moses, Joshua and so on, she pointed out how God's plan, perfected by His omniscience, never failed and eventually the way was opened, as He knew it would be, which scientists claim was 4,000 years ago, for the world should be thankful for work, even tiredness, because Jesus always chose to be people to His disciples."

FULL GOSPEL TABERNACLE S.S.

FRANKFORD — Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle Sunday School held its annual Christmas program last Friday evening. Superintendent Mrs. Albert Fisher of Wellington, opened the gathering by singing Christmas carols. Assistant Superintendent Mrs. Mary Pacileo led in prayer. Chairman for the evening was the pastor, the Rev. G. Pierce, who welcomed everyone.

The program consisted of: Mrs. G., Pierce's class, "Welcome" and recitation by Sheri Lee Elliott with dolly in her rocking chair. A number by Mrs. G. Curry's cradle roll class; Mrs. Mary Patrick's class, "Like Candles"; Mrs. Marjorie Purbey's Girls' class, "A Little Child Shall Lead Them"; Mr. Keith Helm's Boys' class, "Christmas"; Mrs. Fred Miller's class, "The True Foundation."

The superintendent led in choruses, Mrs. Ina Parks' class, "Gospel Play," entitled, "One Night in Bethlehem"; the Young People's class, assisted by members of Mrs.' Bibla class, performed "Behold, Let Us Go to Bethlehem".

The solo, "Silent Night" was sung and a recitation, "One Solitary Life" by Mr. Clayton Payne; closing song, "O Come Emmanuel" and "Joy to the World" sung by Miss Linda Fisher, Miss Kerr, Miss Gloria Reilly and Miss Ruth Robertson.

Gifts were exchanged from the tree and distributed by the pastor, superintendent and S.S. secretary.

The Rev. G. Pierce presented the caretaker of the church, Mr. Allan Reid, with a gift, on behalf of the congregation. Mr. R. Wright and Mr. A. Wright presented the pastor and his wife with a pair of lamps, gold cuff link set, musical tie-pin and bedspread. They both responded.

Bags of candy were distributed by Mrs. Gordon Grant, Mrs. K. Wright, Mr. G. Curry and Mr. Allan Reid, to the pupils. Announcements were given and the prayer by pastor Bob Donald of Stirling closed the concert.

On Wednesday the Point Anne Public School held its annual Christmas concert at the hall.

Mr. Thorold Horwood acted as chairman and welcomed the audience.

The first number was entitled, "Christmas," and was sung by the primary room.

This was followed by carols in which the audience took part lustily.

The Primary Room Rhythm Band played and sang a number called, "Little Black Sambo". They also performed a number in song and rhyme called "A Christmas Story," and the audience participated in more carol singing.

The intermediate and senior rooms performed a play entitled "A Penny for Christmas." Followed by a song "Merry Christmas From Our House to Your House."

The chairman, Mr. Horwood, expressed on behalf of the audience, thanks to Mrs. Dorothy Bailey, the music teacher, Mrs. E. Hutt the principal and teachers, Mrs. MacDonald and Mrs. Henderson and the students for the work they had in making up the songs and the costumes.

Mrs. Riley, the music teacher, was presented with a gift from the student body. She thanked everyone and wished them all the best Christmas ever.

As the children filed out, each was presented with a candy cane from the Home and School Association. Mr. Morris Brandwein went through the audience and the pre-school age children and little guests were also given canes.

SCHOOL BY PHONE

TRAFALGAR, Ont. (CP) — A Trafalgar township girl, encased in a cast from head to foot, keeps up with her studies via telephone. Carol Shaw, 13, has been in bed ever since doctors operated on her in September to correct curvature of the spine. Connection between the telephone company and school officials has resulted in a communication system connecting her bedroom with her classroom.

STEWART — WICKENS

On Saturday, December 3rd, at 3.30 p.m. a lovely wintertime wedding was solemnized in College Hill United Church, Belleville, when the Reverend Alexander Sowell, of Eastminster United Church, assisted by Mr. Sowell of Bellevue, united in marriage in a double-ring ceremony Margaret Ann Wickens, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wickens, to Jack Randolph George Stewart, of Milltown, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stewart.

The nuptial vows were exchanged before an archway of chrysanthemums adorned the chancel, and white satin bows the guest pews.

The guest organist, Mrs. H. Sills, provided the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Thomas Hinchey, of Milltown, in his rendition of "O Perfect Love" before the ceremony, and "The Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register.

The radiantly lovely bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Mr. J. R. Wickens, wore a bridal gown of white satin, fashioned with molded bodice, having long, lace sleeves ending in lily-points over the wrists, and neckline in Queen Anne design. Her full waltz-length skirt attached lace alternated with panels of satin over layers of satin and silk tulle. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was held by a seed pearl encrusted coronet, and she carried a bouquet of light pink carnations.

She was attended by Miss Helen Kelly, of Fenaroo, as maid of honor, wearing a gown of mauve satin taffeta, featuring a fitted bodice with tiny sleeves and square neckline. The full skirt fell in a tiered effect accented by a cummerbund with back bow. She wore a white feathered headdress and white gloves. The other attendants, Miss Davenyron Vickers and Miss Beverley Howe, both of Belleville, as bridesmaids, were gowned similarly to Miss Kelly, but in yellow. All carried bouquets of yellow and mauve mums encircled with pleated tulle.

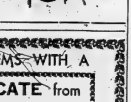
The little flower girl, Rhonda Stewart, of Carrying Place, niece of the bridegroom, was frocked in yellow nylon net over taffeta matching headtier hat, and carried a bosegay of light pink carnations.

Mr. Ronald Stewart, Carrying Place, attended his brother, while the ushers were Mr. Donald Little, of Milltown, and Mr. Douglas Townsend, of Halloway.

Master Billie Stewart, of Belleville, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring-bearer.

The reception was held in the church parlor, where the bride's table was appointed with the traditional white damask, and centred by a three tier all-white wedding cake nesting in white tulle, and topped by two white doves bearing gold wedding rings. Tall white, yellow and mauve candles in silver candelabra, and the bridal bouquets completed the nuptial setting.

Receiving the guests were the bride's mother, wearing a sheath gown of Concord blue brocaded satin with matching jacket, winter - white hat and gloves with corsage of pink roses, and the bridegroom's mother in a pale blue brocaded satin sheath, with blue hat and gloves, and corsage of pink carnations.



For the wedding trip to the United States, the bride chose a light-blue wool suit with brown hat, gloves and shoes, and dark fur jacket with corsage of pink carnations.

Guests were present from Toronto; Tweed; Madoc; Picton; Oshawa; Cobourg; Milltown; Eldorado, and Belleville.

The bride was entertained at two showers previous to her marriage, by Mrs. G. Elliott, assisted by Mrs. Fred Howe, co-hostess, and by Miss Beverley Howe, with her mother as co-hostess. The Big A Company and employees presented the bride-to-be with a vacuum cleaner.

Pr. Ed., Belleville L.C. Plans Pot-Luck Repast

The regular monthly meeting of the Prince Edward - Belleville Ladies' Club was held at the home of members and guests visitors present. The president opened the meeting.

After welcoming remarks from the president, she read a poem, "The Old Year," and thanked the officers to bring in their annual report of the January meeting.

The corresponding secretary reported five cards sent during November. Mrs. Farnsworth thanked the club for card sent her while ill.

It was decided to have a pot-luck lunch for the January meeting; each one is to bring a small amount.

Mrs. Gorsline, program convener, opened the program by reading "A Prayer"; a humorous reading was given by Mrs. Mason.

Mrs. Gorsline introduced Master Carter of the Salvation Army who, playing the accordion, led in the singing of a number of well-known carols. He gave a lovely Christmas message, followed by a poem, "Ready for Christmas."

Carols were again enjoyed by everyone and Major Carter closed with prayer.

Mrs. Sharpe presented Major Carter with a Bible, for which he expressed his sincere thanks.

Mrs. Gorsline thanked Major Carter for his kindness in coming to the meeting, everyone knowing he is a busy man at this time of year for the Salvation Army.

After the meeting, Mrs. Gorsline and her group served a lovely Christmas lunch and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Professional Hostess Duties Exacting But Pay Excellent

By PEGGY MASON

PARIS (Reuters) — A pretty young professional hostess named Ingrid received 21 invitations to dinner and two proposals of marriage in the first day of the Paris motor show this fall.

Ingrid, who has a public hostess in this comparatively new and growing field, where the only requisites are friendliness, charm, and an ability to say "no" in a social report.

In the last few years, large French industrial companies and big business corporations have realized that there is an ever-increasing need to embellish their inaugurations, receptions and public exhibitions with gracious young women able to play the combined role of receptionist, interpreter and public relations attache.

Today, Ingrid and nearly 100 other single girls and young married women are employed on a full-time basis in Paris business offices. Firms find they make a far better first impression than the irascible old men now being pensioned off.

30 applicants has the accomplishments necessary to make the grade.

The majority of French hostesses come from wealthy families. They have a background of advanced education, good manners, and the necessary ability to speak at least two foreign languages.

The average hostess is so sought after that she never sits with the agency more than two years before leaving to be married. However, many young wives work as hostesses to earn extra money when the particular assignment does not entail being away from Paris for more than one or two days.

Professional hostesses also are replacing the old-time porters and guardians on a full-time basis in Paris business offices. Firms find they make a far better first impression than the irascible old men now being pensioned off.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Wagner Shaw

MAN'S OBLIGATIONS AT A DANCE

With so many dances coming up during the next few weeks, this time is chock up on a young man's dancing manners.

Many times we are asked whether or not it is correct for "cut in" at a dance. The answer is, of course, "Yes," but with reservations. For example, a man should not "cut in" to dance with a girl to whom he has not been introduced, unless it is a private dance and he has been asked to be in the "stag line." In a case where he does break in, he should go up and touch the arm of the man, saying the he wished to dance with the lovely lady. He should never step him on the back, or grab the girl's arm.

If a couple has just started dancing, it is unfair to cut in immediately. Wait until they make the start over the floor. Every girl enjoys being cutin upon, because it causes a belp but make her feel that she is popular. However, it is a great mistake for one man to continuously chase her around the floor, depriving her over and again of dances.

It makes him conspicuous by his presence.

Many men are extremely selfish when attending a dance alone. They seem to forget that they have been asked to be in the "stag line" in order to help make the party a success. This doesn't mean dancing only with the prettiest and most popular girls present. He has an obligation to his hostess and should make every effort to see that there are no wallflowers left sitting sadly on the sidelines.

When he is escorting a young lady, it is up to him to see that she is introduced to other young people. His first consideration for the evening should be her welfare. This does not mean that he monopolizes her time or her dancing. But he must make sure that she has a partner at all times.

Special Note: Never, but never, give to the bar for a half hour, saying you'll be right back. This is an unpardonable breach of good manners, one too often seen at parties these days. The same rule applies if you are attending "stag." Your hostess didn't invite you just to hob-nob with the boys around the refreshment table!

Guard against overdoing things when actually dancing. Getting a struggle hold on the young lady, and turning her into a whirling dervish, will not help your popularity rating. Massive up "hairdos" and stepped-on feet, aside from the added embarrassment of being made conspicuous, will definitely not enhance you as a party guest. Take it slowly. Remember that you can show a certain amount of dignity without being stiffed.

When the evening is over, don't neglect the all-important good night "thank you's" to the hostess. Make sure you let the lady of your attention to the little courtesies that mean so much.

Euchre Party Enjoyed by Neighbors' Aid

SECOND THURLOW — Mrs. David Craig and Mrs. Gerald Stratton were hostesses for the Aid euchre on Friday night at the hall. Nine tables were in play with prizes won as follows: ladies, Mrs. Gens Stratton; Mrs. H. Doolittle; consolation, Mrs. J. Chumbley; men, Messrs. John Allison; J. Chumbley; consolation, Clarence Allison; lone hands, Mrs. Doolittle.

Lunch was served and a social time spent. Next euchre will be in January with Mrs. Chumbley and Mrs. H. Thomson in charge.

Neighbors' Aid Marks 30th Anniversary

2ND THURLOW —The Neighbors' Aid celebrated its 30th anniversary meeting at the Aid hall.

The Aid members, husbands, and families sat down to well-laden tables with various kinds of potatoes, salads, meat dishes, scalloped corn, pot pie, pie, jellies and many other goodies.

Mrs. Mac Doucett Leeming acted as chairman for the program given by the Aid's chartered members, Mesdames Arnold Mitchell, Eric Leeming, Donald Leeming, Archie Gwartz, Harry Grills and Douglas Atkins.

The gathering was called to order with Mrs. M. Mitchell at the piano. Two minutes' silence was observed for deceased members who had passed on during the years, followed by "Blest Be the Tie that Binds." The chairman made suitable remarks for the occasion; a guitar solo was given by Margaret Chumbley, accompanied by Peggy Thompson; solo, "Bless This House" by Tommy Hinchey accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Harry Sine; community singing with Mrs. M. Mitchell at the piano, and Mr. F. Mitchell leading the singing; Mrs. Chalwell Chumbley, dialogue, "How the Money Grew," with Mesdames D. Leeming, H. Grills, D. Atkins, M. Mitchell, M. Jeffery, F. Reid, A. Leeming, Mr. Mrs. F. Mitchell, Billing in for Mrs. Eric Leeming, who was ill, which caused lots of laughter; duet, Marlene and Carolyne Mitchell, entitled "Pineapple Princess."

Mrs. Arnold Mitchell gave a detailed summary of the Aid's activities from 1929 to date, which brought back many happy as well as sad memories. She told of sewing for the Red Cross in the war, quilts given for charity and the lawn socials held in the summer for the community over the period of years.

A reading by the chairman, Mrs. Mac Doucett, caused lots of laughter; a duet, "Sweet Violets," sung given by Mr. M. Mitchell and Marlene.

Mrs. Mac Fletcher Reid showed slides of the trip they had taken in company of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Leeming to the Grand Canyon, Hollywood and other points of interest. Mrs. Reid sang the last summer, which was interesting and enjoyed by the reading, "Love Talk in Dialgue," was given by Mrs. George Tucker.

The chairman gave a humorous reading which we'll received and Mrs. Hinchey's solo, "May the Good Lord Bless and Keep You."

A story's vote of thanks was given to all who made the evening's entertainment such a success. Mr. Hinchey's solos were enjoyed most and most appropriate for the occasion.

Everyone reported an evening well spent.

TURKEY NOTES

These notes will help you when it comes time to prepare the bird. Allow 20 minutes per pound in advance of the day it is to be served.

GIBLET STUFFING

For a 16-18 pound bird (more weight) you will need about 18 cups stuffing. Pull dry cubed into crumbs and lightly measure 16 cups. In frying pan gently melt 3-4 cup butter or margarine and add 1-4 cup each minced parsley, celery and onions, 1 teaspoon each poultry seasoning and savory, 2 (or 3) teaspoons salt and gently cook until onions and celery are transparent. Pour mixture in large bowl and gently mix in. Add 2 (or 3) well cooked giblets from turkey, finely chopped. Turkey broth and close with skewers.

TURKEY GRAVY

One cup gravy makes 4 or 5 servings. Mean 3 cups gravy to serve 12. Measure 6 tablespoons pan drippings (fat and brown sediment) into saucepan. Add 6 tablespoons flour and stir over medium heat until smooth and blended. Add 3 cups liquid, stirring. This should be liquid in which giblets were cooked plus enough drippings or water to make it up to 3 cups. Stir until thick. Add salt and pepper to taste. If gravy is not a rich brown and does not have a good flavor add 1 or 2 cubes of bouillon cubes and a little "gravy browner."

Remember I will give you recipes for homemade sweets.

Glossy Pamphlet Titled 'A Woman's Place' Will Cause Plenty of Debate

By CAROL KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Woman's place is there in it? Is the home or in the wider sphere of public life? At the sink or at the desk? And how much can the answer be made of her hard-won emancipation?

A glossy pamphlet issued by the Conservative Political office has set Fleet Street debating the old problem once again.

Candidates for A Woman's Place, the pamphlet is written by special Conservative Party researcher, unmarried political worker, and considers many women to have their opportunities and carry out their responsibilities in public life.

Without actually quoting her party's well-worn slogan, Miss Barnes drives home the point that women have never had it so good.

Nowadays they spend an average of 50 years in childbearing compared with 15 years half a century ago.

They are better educated than ever before; more than ever they are released from household drudgery; their tastes dominate consumer spending, and the world enormous influence in business life. The press respects their opinion. Even the severely masculine Times now runs whole features for women.

DON'T FULL WEIGHT

But only at those advantages they are not pulling their weight in society. What exactly are they doing with the increased opportunities?

Miss Barnes admits right away that most women feel their first place is in the home—but she maintains it is not their only place. She admits, too, that few women reach top jobs.

This is inevitable, for at the time when a woman is having children, most women are bringing up children.

Politics with approx. Roasting time in hours for unstuffed bird —

6-10 — 3½ to 4½
10-14 — 4½ to 5½
14-18 — 5½ to 6½
18-24 — 6½ to 9

To know when turkey is cooked a meat thermometer is the surest way. It may be inserted in the middle of the stuffing and will register 185 deg. Fahr. when the turkey is cooked or it may be placed in the middle or the thick fleshy muscle next to the side of the turkey but not touching the bone and when cooked the temperature reading will be 190 deg. Fahr. If no meat thermometer is available the bird may be tested by moving the drumstick up and down. It should move easily in the hip socket and when the meat on the drumstick is pressed it should feel soft.

Avondale Cubs, Scouts Hold Yuletide Meet

The Avondale Cub and Scout Mothers' Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. K. Thompson for its Christmas meeting, on Dec. 14.

The president, Mrs. Townsend, welcomed the 11 members.

Reports were given by the treasurer, welfare convenor and social convenor. Cub mothers looked regarding the Christmas party for the Cubs and Scouts and plans were made to serve refreshments.

Mrs. J. Cooke gave a report on the Gang committee, followed by the sewing' convenors report.

Almost enjoyable social hour followed, highlighted by a lively conducted auction sale among the members with Mrs. S. Elliott as auctioneer.

Christas gifts were distributed and lunch was served by Mrs. D. Morrison and Mrs. E. Nix.

MADOC — The December meeting of the Madoc Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. R. Nicol, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The president, Mrs. George McGinnis, opened the meeting.

Mrs. G. C. Moon, first vice - president, acted as secretary in the absence of Mrs. Ross Percival and also gave the treasurer's report. Correspondence was dealt with Mrs. Vanderwater at the piano.

During the business period, it was decided to give another $25 to the Red Cross Christmas Parcels Fund". This is to help the family from the native Labrador village would be within our means are still near enough to my husband's work that he is doing research and works long, irregular hours

I thought that since I'd new interests, make lots of new friends and feel more "in" with the home. He doesn't realize it takes more than love, and a few rivers, to keep a puppy happy. In my inexperience, he used to have many of his friends in the town there'd be even more and they too busy to add that to my duties.

The Council: Here is an only child, relatively friendless in a new environment, and long'ing for that touch of nature that "makes the whole world kin."

Surely there are apartment size pets like the guinea pig under for filling Hugh's need to love something. Or the real favorite the "chumminess" of confining creatures. Even the size of the main objection of Mrs. M. to "wooden floors" is not a real one for a shy, lonely child, this is as important as his vitamins and cod liver oil. A hard of cork tile will be heinine him care for the quiet corresponse that he can love and feel loved by.

The first step, however, we'd suggest that Mrs. M. ——s to Hugh's teacher about the problem and offer to put a truth of so'dfish to the class. Hugh might be in charge with a small committee of assistants. Being under his wing as pets and a responsibility for them, this would serve as a ——ial ——ing and shoul help Hugh to feel increased stature for Hugh among his peers.

Parents have gone to unbelievable extremes to foster this type of inderstness, and interest in their children. We read the other day of a father who bought his daughter a six-foot snake as a horse pet, because she was allergic to the fur of other creatures.

We're rooting for Hugh — even if he winds up with nothing more than a trained flea.

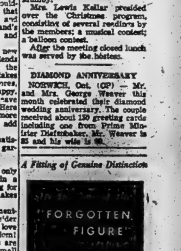
W.G. Elects 1961 Officers

The regular record meeting of the Guild of Thomasburg was held at the home of Mrs. Lorne Mumby. The president, Frances Keller, opened the meeting with 13 members answering roll call.

During the regular—Minutes of record meeting were read, also correspondence. Plans were made to fill bags of candy for children of Sunday school at the home of Mrs. Clare Keller.

Election of officers for 1961 took place as follows: President, Mrs. Murray Mumby; vice-president, Mrs. Clare Grills; secretary, Mrs. Lewis Mowers; treasurer, Mrs. Harry Sherry; flower convenor, Mrs. Carl Bowmen Davidson; pianist, Mrs. L. Mumby.

Mrs. Lewis Kellar presided over the Christmas program, consisting of several readings by the members; a musical contest; and lunch contest.



A dge the meeting closed lunch was served by the hostess.

Intrepid Tugs Man Arctic Lifeline

Canada's Seaway to the North

Canada's vast north has had, for a long time, its answer to the modern, well-channeled St. Lawrence Seaway. This natural canal, dredged and buoyed to insure more security for an otherwise perilous journey, forms the country's largest inland waterway, allowing goods to be taken by barge from McMurray, 200 miles north of Edmonton to the shores of the Arctic at Inuvik and Tuktoyaktuk, by way of the Athabasca, the Slave and the Mackenzie rivers.

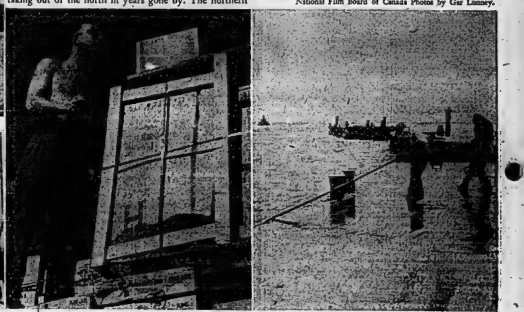
The 1,800 mile system, 400 miles longer than the St. Lawrence Seaway, has two major natural obstacles to cross: the 16-mile-long Pelican rapids between Fort Smith (capital of the Northwest Territories) and Fort Fitzgerald, and the 10-mile-long rapids at Bear River.

The original Hudson Bay trapkers, who were the first white men to use the river to transport goods, built two portages which have now been replaced by two modern, well-kept highways, permitting trucks to unload all incoming and outgoing freight from one set of barges to another.

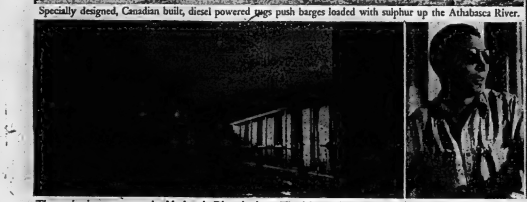
Another serious problem to be faced by the courageous men who man the 25 diesel-powered tugs and 103 steel barges now operating in the river under the flag of the Northern Transportation Company is the change in water levels. Flood conditions frequently prevail early in the season due to the run-off from the mountains and unless the rainfall is heavy in mid-summer, and this is rare, low water in the rivers, especially the Athabasca, makes navigation difficult, at times impossible. The low water which inevitably prevails in August and September can reduce the carrying activity of the barges by as much as 65%.

Specially built flat-bottomed barges leave northern Alberta loaded with goods which will be delivered to the eight ports of call along the way and several DEW line posts. Towed by powerful tugs they embark upon the long journey which will take them across the treacherous waters of Great Slave Lake and Lake Athabasca. Both lakes have claimed their share of human lives when gusts of high winds churn the waters of these inland seas into foam-flecked fury.

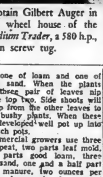
Until the discovery of uranium at Great Bear Lake, and the discovery of gold in the Yellowknife area, transportation on the Mackenzie River Watershed was limited to first the York boats and later the wood-burning paddle wheelers, which served trading posts, missions and Government stations. In its annual reports for 1958 and 1959 the Government-owned Northern Transportation Company, which now operates the fleet plying the Mackenzie River, shows revenues averaging $4 million a year—another sign that things are moving, down north.



Following the route taken by early explorers of the great north, such as Mackenzie and the Hudson Bay Company fur traders, the Radium Prospector tows a barge large enough to carry what a hundred men had a hard time taking out of the north in years gone by. The northern fleet of tugs and barges played an important part in the construction of the DEW line and have been of tremendous help to the uranium and gold mining industries in what used to be regarded as desert land.



National Film Board of Canada Photos by Gar Lunney.



Specially designed, Canadian built, diesel powered tugs push barges loaded with sulphur up the Athabasca River.

The barges are not used only to bring riches out of the north. They also service with goods of all kinds the numerous cities and villages located along the Mackenzie and its tributaries, along with some posts inside the Arctic circle.

The navigation season on the Mackenzie River is short. The lakes and rivers of the north are not free of ice until the middle of May and by October they are blocked again. One factor which helps lengthen the navigation season is the "midnight sun", which makes it possible to work in daylight for nearly 24 hours at times.

Bad weather in the greater lakes and shallow waters in the rivers are two major obstacles that have to be accounted for continuously. Here a barge train has to be assembled again after being broken up by high winds.

Point Anne

POINT ANNE — Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Cummings of Belleville, have moved into the house vacated by Mrs. Reggie Cox and family.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Cummings spent the weekend in Petawawa with their daughter and family. Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Crawford, Squadron leader and Mrs. Harold Carswell, Sheryl, Cindy and Holly, of Winnipeg, called on Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Henderson, on there way to Montreal, where they were taking the plane for England where he will be stationed in the R.C.A.F.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Snider, of Consecon, spent a day recently with Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Henderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Bradshaw spent the weekend with constable and Mrs. Kenneth Barr and Robert at Cornwall and called on Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Everette in Brockville.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Mr. James Moorman of Springfield, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moorman, Mrs. Fred Whitehead, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Whitehead and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Whitehead and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Whitehead and Mrs. Evelyn Williams in the sudden death of a wife, daughter and sister. The late Mrs. James (nee Doris Whitehead) Moorman. Mrs. Moorman lived in Point Anne for some time with her parents before moving to her late residence

The weekly euchre club and Christmas party was held at the home of Mrs. Floyd Henderson. Winners were Emma Stern, Mrs. Mandy Jones; low — Mrs. Helen Whalen.

After euchre the hostess served refreshments and they presented Mrs. Agnes Whalen with a gift from the club. She is their secretary. A pleasant evening was enjoyed by the exchanging of greetings for Christmas and the New eYar.

How to Increase Your Hydrangeas

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

If you buy or receive as a gift a hydrangea in pink, blue or white you may wish to increase your one plant to several plants. They are often hardy enough to winter over outdoors in Southern Ontario if given a protected position near the foundation of the house on the South or East side. Exposure may be too sunny and so provide some light shade during the afternoon.

A cool green house or frost free but unheated sun porch is an ideal place to keep these potted plants as they dislike extreme heat but do like moist humid air. Cuttings can be taken in the winter if you can apply bottom heat. Otherwise take the cuttings in early summer.

IN A GREEN HOUSE

In a cool green house a bench is covered with a soil mixture of three parts granulated peat and one part coarse sand. This is for commercial growers. The benches will be heated with steam pipes running under them and the temperatures will be kept at 70 degrees. The cuttings are placed two inches apart the whole bench watered well then covered with a sheet of polythene film. This will conserve the humidity and provide good growing condition. The plants will take about two weeks to root.

The cutting should be taken after the flowers have gone, from new soft wood. Make the cuttings with four leaves and half an inch of stem for an anchor. Dip the half inch stem in water then in rooting powder shake off the excess and place in peat and sand mixture in two and a half inch pots or flats.

When the roots have developed the plants are potted up in three inch pots in a stronger soil mix, some part leaf mold, one of peat moss one of loam and one of coarse sand. When the plants have been put in pots pinch off the top two. Side shoots will develop from the other leaves to make bushy plants. When these have developed well pot up into five inch pots.

Commercial growers use three parts peat, two parts leaf mold, seven parts coarse loam, three parts sand, one and a half part sheep manure, two ounces per bushel of superphosphate, a and four ounces of bone meal. For a few cuttings you could use a cup as a measure and a minute quantity of the chemicals.

If the cuttings are grown indoors they can be sunk in soil or ashes in a shady place and kept watered through the summer until frost threatens. They should bloom through the winter.

If the cutting are taken in summer it will be much later before they are ready to bloom. They can be planted against a house wall in a protected position.

If you are bringing them in a five inch pot with a good bushy plant will produce one good big flower head. A plant that has been pinched repeatedly may give you five smaller flower heads. Pink plants can be made to produce blue flowers if a little alum is dissolved in water and applied to the soil at the time of the last potting.

Christmas Season Business Abnormally Slow and Many Factors Blamed for Fact

By CECIL REID
Canadian Press Staff Writer

This is the month when merchants usually beam their broadest smiles in anticipation of booming sales for the Christmas season. But to date there has been little to smile about.

Across Canada the report is that business is abnormally slow. Only in a few cities is there a note of optimism.

Many factors are blamed for the Christmas shopping slump, a cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows, but the two main factors are weather and unemployment.

Bureau of statistics figures released this month showed 492,000 Canadians unemployed at mid-November. The late arrival of cold weather in many parts of the country has delayed the start of the Christmas buying rush.

WEATHER IS FACTOR

The weather is a particular factor in Southern Ontario which had the warmest November since 1953 and above-normal temperatures in the first 10 days of December.

"People don't go by the calendar in starting their Christmas shopping," the sales manager of a big Toronto department store said. "They go by the first snowball."

The treasurer of another major retailer said: "With the late start, sales so far haven't caught up with last year and I don't know whether there are enough days left this year for them to catch up."

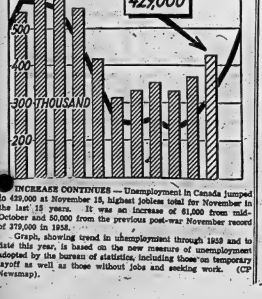
In Vancouver a store manager said unemployment had made buyers "tighten up their purse strings." Others said the recent strike of west coast grain handlers and fears of a railway strike had slowed business.

BAD IN MARITIMES

In Nova Scotia and Newfoundland the story was similar. Fishing and unemployment had cut sharply into business. The Atlantic provinces have the highest jobless rate in Canada. However, Halifax merchants were looking forward to an increase in business after the navy's Dec. 12 pay day.

But amid the gloom there were bright spots. Said M. (Bud) Wocks, secretary-manager of the Manitoba Retail Merchants Association:

"We originally predicted shoppers would spend $800,000,000 on Christmas gifts during December, but now we think the total will reach $850,000,000, a four-to-five-per-cent increase above last year."



Some Prairie communities, including Regina, were optimistic because their business volume is largely tied to the grain crop which was good this year.

IS PICKING UP

In Montreal, C. B. Grant, assistant advertising manager of Eaton's, said business started slowly but picked up after the first snowfall Dec. 8. "We now are keeping abreast of last year, slightly ahead of last year."

Simpson's and Dupuis Freres also reported lively sales. G. D. Thompson, sales promotion manager at Simpson's, said there was one of the busiest days—the day after the first snow.

Some merchants are trying every angle to bring sales up to 1959 level. One Vancouver jeweler launched a "staying in business sale. "We heard so much gloom and saw so many 'going out of business' sales that we wanted our customers to know we are staying in business."

INCREASE CONTINUES — Unemployment in Canada jumped to 429,000 at November 15, highest jobless total for November in the last 12 years. It was an increase of 61,000 from mid-October and 50,000 from the previous post-war November record of 379,000 in 1958.

Graph, showing trend in unemployment through 1959 and to date this year, is based on the new measure of unemployment adopted by the bureau of statistics, including those on temporary layoff as well as those without jobs and seeking work. (CP Newsmap).

Stirling

STIRLING — The Rev. Harry Davis, of Bridge Street United Church, Belleville was in charge of the service at St. Paul's United Church and Carmel United Church in the Stirling charge on a recent Sunday. He was a dinner guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Carlisle.

Miss Marion Camm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Camm won the award for public speaking in the Centre Hastings Inspectorate. She will be eligible to try for higher honors in the new year.

The local Rotary Club held a successful turkey bingo and 45 turkeys and three door prizes were won. The latter winners were: Wesley Finch, Mrs. R. Hunter and Mrs. Harry Francis.

Mrs. M. R. Neal, Belleville, spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. George Carlisle. On Monday they entertained Mrs. Ezella Chisholm to dinner.

Mr. James Menzies, Mill St., is ill at his home.

Mrs. Major Fraser is a patient in Peterborough hospital. Mr Fraser is spending some time at the home of his son in that city.

Tweed

TWEED — Hark Countryman, who has been CFR agent at Port Hope for the past three years, has been transferred to Orillia as agent there. Mr. Countryman, a former Tweed resident, was at Orillia before going to Port Hope.

R. B. Bell, who has been a member of the Bloor, Landsdowne branch of the Bank of Montreal in Toronto, has been transferred to Tweed to take over his duties as an accountant at the bank here. Mr. Bell is unmarried and living at Hotel Tweedmuir. He succeeds "Sloy" Wicks, who was transferred to North Bay.

Lieut. Marilyn Ward, who was stationed with the Campbellford Salvation Army Corps, has arrived in Tweed to assist Capt. Anne Morrow, who has had sole charge of the Tweed Corps for the past several months. She took part in her welcoming services here last Sunday.

Operations resumed at Hunter's Tweeds Ltd., Tweed, last week, following a three weeks' lay-off with most of the staff being recalled to work. It is reported that steady employment will continue throughout the winter months.

Miss D. Margaret, Langevin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Langevin, Lotsgreen Road, and Miss Donna Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hunt, Plainfield, were among the 37 graduates from Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston, who were successful in passing their Registered Nurses' examinations. Miss Loggerwell is a member on the staff of Mount Sinai Hospital, Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Harper Newman of Gilmbridge, and Mr. and Mrs. Tim Newman, of Lowertown, were recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. McCrea, R.R. 1, Tweed.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kennedy have moved to their home on McGowan and South Victoria Road, Tweed. Their farm home east of Thomasburg, where they have resided since their marriage over 25 years ago, is temporarily vacant. Mr. Kennedy has been retired from active farm work for a number of years.

'Not the Slightest Doubt' Castro's Regime Communist Or Dark Shade of Pink

By JACK BEST
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HAVANA (CP)—Cuba has taken on a crimson glow under the revolutionary government of Premier Fidel Castro.

Among Western diplomats in this sun - bathed metropolis perched on the northwestern shore on the verdant tropical island, there is not the slightest doubt that the regime is either Communist or so close to it that the difference becomes academic.

The only question in their minds is whether Fidel himself is a red or whether he is borne aloft by forces he cannot control. But again there are those who say that from the practical standpoint, it really does not matter. They argue that the important things is the 35-year-old former lawyer presides over an administration whose every move seems rooted in Marxism.

Castro has denied time and again that he is a Communist or that his government is Communist-controlled. However, there is almost universal concern in Western circles here over the way things have been going. Canadians in Cuba say the revolution is not just another agrarian reform movement; it is a Communist takeover.

Canada is one of the few countries in the world whose relations with Cuba are not strained.

Recently, in fact, there has been an outpouring of pro-Canadian sentiment, apparently resulting from Prime Minister Diefenbaker's statement that Canada had no intention of doing what the United States has done—imposing a trade embargo against Cuba. The name Diefenbaker has suddenly become a household word, both in the press and on the street.

The feeling for Canada, however, did not prevent Cuba from keeping a Canadian citizen, Charles Golombek of Toronto, locked up in Havana prisons for 10 days without bringing a charge against him.

Golombek, an insurance company executive, was picked up by armed militiamen on suspicion of espionage while looking at a road map at Matanzas, 60 miles east of here. Canadian authorities are convinced he was a bona fide tourist. The Canadian Embassy wrangled with Cuban officials trying to obtain his release or at least some explanation for his continued incarceration.

Finally, after two stiff grillings —the only ones he underwent during his detention—Golombek was released. He had a 10-day growth of beard but said he had been maltreated.

CZECH BACKGROUND

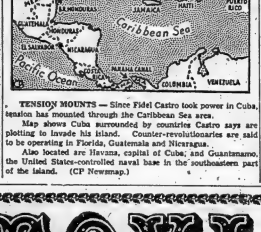
Golombek's long confinement may have resulted from the fact that he is Czech-born. Some quarters here say Cuban authorities waited until his "credentials" were checked in Communist Czechoslovakia before releasing him.

Those who maintain the Cuban government is Communist use a simple yardstick — performance. They point to government expropriation of just about every enterprise in any size—with the notable exception of Canadian banks and insurance companies.

"Almost everybody with $2 in his pocket has been nationalized," quipped one observer. There is a story that Yugoslavia, with its long record of communism, was at one stage closely interested in the Cuban experiment but drew away because it found that Cuba's brand was more like Moscow's and Peking's.

Also cited are Cuba's growing economic dependence on the Soviet bloc, its support of Soviet foreign policy, and the huge imports of arms and munitions from Czechoslovakia. Then there are the incessant attacks against "imperialism" and the constant stream of Communistic propaganda over the controlled press and radio.

The supporters of the revolution, which brought Castro to power at the beginning of 1959 with the overthrow of Fulgencio Batista, say the regime's methods are necessary if it is to achieve its ultimate purpose.



This they define as "justice" for the people, elimination of corruption—which everyone agrees infested the very fibre of government services—and liquidation of foreign economic domination.

They pass off the thousands who have broken with the revolution, bitterly disenchanted because of the direction it has taken, as pantywaists who really did not want a revolution but only a change of government.

Concern over Cuba is felt most acutely, perhaps, by other Latin Americans. They are uneasy because they suspect the Communists will use Cuba as a springboard for revolutions in other countries of the hemisphere.

COMPLETE DEAL — Anastas Mikoyan (left), deputy premier of the Soviet Union, extends a handshake to seal a trade deal with Cuban Premier Fidel Castro. The agreement, strengthening Western belief that Cuba is falling into the Communist orbit, providers for a $100,000,000 loan to Castro and a Soviet promise to buy 5,000,000 tons of Cuban sugar. (CP from AP)

TENSION MOUNTS — Since Fidel Castro took power in Cuba, tension has mounted through the Caribbean Sea area.

Map shows Cuba surrounded by countries Castro says are plotting to invade his island. Counter-revolutionaries are said to be operating in Florida, Guatemala and Nicaragua.

Also located are Havana, capital of Cuba; and Guantanamo, the United States-controlled naval base in the southeastern part of the island. (CP Newsmap.)

"He says we should allow him in at half-price."

Many Cubans Still Like Castro Says Editor

Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO — A Canadian editor who recently concluded a two-week survey on conditions in Cuba describes the Castro revolution as "a revolution that turned sour."

Rev. Dr. A. C. Forrest, editor of The United Church Observer, who was asked by Presbyterian Life (U.S.A.) to go to Cuba, writes in the current issue of The Observer: "Election which the rebel leader promised have not been held and are not likely to be held.; freedom for which the revolutionaries said they fought, is dead. The old motto 'Liberty or death' has been changed to 'Country or death'."

Dr. Forrest reports that "Press, radio and television in Cuba are almost completely controlled. The Cuban government brooks no open opposition. Only the Communist party is legal. Many of Castro's original associates have defected; some have been jailed; others have fled for their lives; many took to the hills to join the counter - revolutionaries; others are underground in Cuba."

So far, the Canadian editor writes, the Cuban churches have enjoyed relative freedom. Many Presbyterians are worrying about what may happen to their schools and some fear that next year they will be taken over. There are just as certain Castro will not touch them.

Dr. Forrest reports that great numbers of Cuban people, including some of the most liberal and self-sacrificing church people, still believe in Castro. He writes; "And even those who have misgivings say, 'I'd rather have this than go back to the days of Batista'."

He said he saw many old army barracks converted into day schools. "The government claims to have opened 10,000 school rooms in the past two years."

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

TORONTO (CP) — Police Constable John Routh was punched in the mouth by a man Saturday as he read charges to him of indecent assault on a female. The smack split the constable's lip and knocked out a lower denture, Karl Rafuse, 26, was charged with assaulting a police officer.

Four Women in the World's Spotlight Bore Sons in '60

By TOM MITCHELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Women and their new babies provided some of the top news stories of 1960.

In a field where they just naturally hold the spotlight, Queen Elizabeth, the queen of Iran, the wife of the United States president-elect and the wife of Britain's crown prince all gave birth to sons.

The newest addition to Britain's Royal Family, Prince Andrew, was born Feb. 19. Announcement of the birth startled cannon booming royal salutes around the world. Andrew is second in line for the throne, after elder brother Prince Charles.

Wild celebrations were staged in Iran when a first male heir was born to the shah Oct. 31. Queen Farah Diba gave birth to the husky crown prince. The shah married her after divorcing his former queen Soraya because she had not produced an heir.

Jacqueline Kennedy gave birth to John F. Kennedy Jr. just 10 days after her husband won a close victory in the U.S. presidential election Nov. 8. It was the first boy for the couple who moved into the White House in January. They have a daughter, Caroline.

BIRTH IN JAPAN

Princess Michiko of Japan and her husband, Crown Prince Akihito, delighted Japan when their first child and an heir to the throne was born Feb. 23.

Britain's Royal Family topped the list in another category—marriages.

Princess Margaret and commoner Antony Armstrong-Jones, a photographer, were wed in a royal ceremony that splashed color and celebrations across Britain's springtime scene. For their wedding May 6, Armstrong-Jones and his royal bride went on a honeymoon aboard the royal yacht and to Bermuda.

Top stars in the movie field also hit the public eye.

Debbie Reynolds did it by divorcing singer Eddie Fisher, ending a marriage that Hollywood fan magazines had described as the most idyllic in the movie community.

Actress Elizabeth Taylor, a widow since the death of her producer husband Mike Todd, did it when she adopted the Jewish faith and married Fisher. Debbie did it again in October when she was remarried — to millionaire shoe manufacturer Harry Karl.

Marilyn Monroe hit the headlines by playwright Arthur Miller to her list of ex-husbands. Miller broke up shortly after Marilyn acted in a film for which he wrote the script.

Brigitte Bardot, the "sex kitten" of French films, topped it off with marital troubles with a suicide attempt. She took barbiturates and slashed her wrists but was found in time to be saved.

Near year's end, another royal wedding drew world attention. Spanish noblewoman Dona Fabiola de Mora y Aragon, little known before her engagement was announced, chose Dec. 15 for a Brussels wedding to Belgium's King Baudouin.

Representatives from royal houses in many lands—including Princess Margaret and her new husband — attended the colorful ceremony.

Family Forced To Leave New Orleans

NORTH PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—James O. Gabrielle, who said he and his family were forced to leave New Orleans, La., over the school integration question, set out Monday to begin a new life in Rhode Island.

Gabrielle said he will follow up a number of job offers and will seek a home for his family, which includes his wife and six children.

Gabrielle said the taunts and threats his family received because they defied the white boycott of the newly-integrated William Frantz school forced them to leave New Orleans.

Gabrielle and his wife had sent their six-year-old daughter, Yolanda, to the school where one Negro girl has been admitted under federal court order.

The Gabrielle family had refused to go along with other white families who kept their children out of school because of the presence of the Negro girl.

Gabrielle gave up his $250-a-month job as city water meter reader and left New Orleans Thursday night by car.

Jacques Soustelle Paved Way For de Gaulle to Head France But Now His Worst Enemy

Royal Bank Head Finds Banking 'Fascinating'

MONTREAL (CP)—A 65-year-old executive who says he finds the banking business "fascinating" has become head of Canada's largest counting house, the $2,000-employee Royal Bank of Canada.

The election of W. Earle McLaughlin as president and chief executive officer announced by the bank in a statement Monday night, made him the third man to hold the job this year. His predecessor, M. E. Walker, died March 9. Eight months earlier Mr. Walker replaced long-time president James Muir who died.

Mr. McLaughlin, born in Oshawa, was formerly general manager. He joined the bank 36 years ago, serving in Toronto, London, Ont., Guelph and Montreal.

The operation he takes over has an authorized capital stock of $100,000,000. There are some 1,000 branches in Canada, The West Indies, and South and Central America. Other outlets are in London, Paris and New York.

NEAPOLE APPOINTED

The bank also announced the appointment of E. D. Neapole, 54, of Pembroke as successor to Mr. McLaughlin. Mr. Neapole served as assistant general manager for nine years.

Mr. McLaughlin is stocky and broad-faced with thinning grey hair. He sports a mustache and wears horn-rimmed glasses. His speech is easy and readily inclined to laugh.

At one time he was an orthopaedic nurse, but golf is his main recreation.

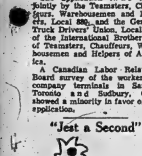
For his service to the St. John Ambulance Association he was made a Knight of Grace, the group's highest order.

HAS TWO CHILDREN

In 1940 he married the former Ethel Wetlie. Their son Bill, 19, is a business administration student at Bishop's University in Lennoxville, Que. A daughter, Mary, 19, is a Grade 8 student here.

When Mr. McLaughlin graduated in 1926 from Queen's University in Kingston, he was undecided as to the type economics major in his class. Earlier this year he was appointed to the university's board of trustees.

He joined the bank in Toronto the same year he left university and had served as general manager since Feb. 9 this year.



Mr. Nepole joined the bank in Pembroke and served for a time as assistant manager of the Toronto main branch. After serving in Vancouver as an inspector, he came to Montreal in 1940 and was named district manager branch manager in 1946, a post Mr. McLaughlin filled from 1951 to 1953.

Certification Is Rejected

OTTAWA (CP)—The labor department Monday announced rejection of an application for union certification affecting 65 employees of Tank Truck Transport Limited, Kitwood, Que.

The application was made Monday by the Teamsters, Chemical, Warehousemen and Helpers, Local 106, and the General Truck Drivers' Union, Local 931, of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America.

A Canadian Labor Relations Board examiner at the workers' company terminals in Sarnia, Toronto and Sudbury, Ont., showed a minority in favor of the application.

"Jest a Second"

"Who poured the brandy on the turkey?"

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A thick-set, purposeful man with football shoulders and perpetual scowl slights at Orly Airport near Paris after a flight from New York. And the flight for France is joined in earnest.

For Jacques Soustelle, once a street fighter on behalf of the near-Communist left, now the darling of the disaffected right, is about to take up the cudgels against lonely general de Gaulle.

It is an odd reversal.

Years ago, Soustelle went to Algeria with a reputation as a brilliant anthropologist. His first book, that of a judge back a year later, appeared in a thousand editions of "Forgotten Algeria," a solution opposed by most liberals.

More than anyone, Soustelle paved the way, for de Gaulle's return to power. He was the closest colleague. Now he is de Gaulle's enemy No. 1, the spearhead of opposition to the general's efforts to reconcile the embittered Moslem and European communities in Algeria.

GIVE ALGERIA FREEDOM

Though de Gaulle's mission to Algeria ended in tragedy and is essentially unfinished, he has fulfilled in its conciliatory objectives, as he promised he would something.

Before the imposition of censorship during the riots, enough filtered through by way of radio, television and newspapers to convince metropolitan France that de Gaulle intended to grant self-government, rather than something contrary to the wishes of the Algerian rebel movement.

In a spontaneous reaction to the first referendum on the Algerian question, the Moslems voted overwhelmingly to back the standard of Ferhat Abbas' rebels. But the numbers were shot for their pains.

Many of those killed were shot from the windows and upper rooms of apartment buildings, and some reports said by the time all of the bullets were fired by French soldiers and gendarmes.

SPOTLIGHT ON PARIS

Now the battleground shifts to metropolitan France, and de Gaulle is determined to push ahead with his plans, including the Jan. 8 referendum. But there are signs that right-wing political opposition is beginning to harden against his plans.

Soustelle is a resolute, shrewd and dangerous opponent. His is one of the few politicians who has come to the forefront since the end of "l'Agence Algerie" sound agency since Feb. 9 this year.

Mr. Nepole joined the bank in Pembroke and served for a time as assistant manager of the Toronto main branch. After serving in Vancouver as an inspector, he came to Montreal in 1940 and was named district manager branch manager in 1946, a post Mr. McLaughlin filled from 1951 to 1953.

Charges Against Telegram, Globe Are Adjourned

TORONTO (CP)—Proceedings against The Telegram and The Globe and Mail under the Liquor Control Act were adjourned Monday to Jan. 27.

The two newspapers were charged in February with publishing advertising not approved by the Liquor Control Board of Ontario. The charges were laid by Supt. Wilcher and Vernon Singer, Liberal members of the Ontario legislature.

Magistrate C. A. Thoburn said he needed time to study a transcript of the hearing and the cases cited before he could rule on the submission of L. Dubin, counsel for The Telegram.

Mr. Dubin said the Crown had failed to lay informations against The Telegram disclosing any offence known to the law.

He based his contention on his interpretation of a judgment given by Mr. Justice S. N. Schatz in 1957 refusing to quash the proceedings before Magistrate Thoburn.

The Telegram counsel said Mr. Justice Schatz's judgment stated that unapproved advertising is an offence only if it advertised liquor for sale.

The advertisements cited in the charges against The Telegram did not state prices nor were the advertised products were for sale, Mr. Dubin said.

The charges involve advertisements in the two newspapers published last spring before the Ontario government put a licence advertising in newspapers legal. Both supported parties were printed in New York state.

B.C. Rejects Financial Aid On Development

OTTAWA (CP) — A letter rejecting the federal offer of special help for Columbia River development has been received from Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia, Finance Minister Fleming told Monday.

Justice Minister • Fulton also told the Commons good progress was made in treaty-drafting talks in Washington last week and that the talks would finish by "the early in the new year."

The treaty must be ratified by Parliament and Congress to become law. It would provide flood-control developments on the international river over a period of years.

Mr. Fleming had sent a letter to Mr. Bennett setting out the details of the federal loan offer—$100,000,000 to pay half the cost of three storage dams in the $458,000,000 Canadian program. Interest would be charged.

The Bennett letter said the federal proposals "are unacceptable. B.C. was prepared to negotiate on Canada the execution of its provincial responsibilities for the purposes of signing a treaty with the U.S. but cannot demand that Canada, for its part, guarantee payment of its federal obligations under the treaty.

Box Containing $18,000 Worth Of Coins Missing

TORONTO (CP)—An international coin collector's box containing $18,000 worth of gold coins that vanished between Toronto and Montreal has been found.

Trans-Canada Air Lines spokesman Jack Pickersgill announced in the head office of the Bank of Montreal here were found aboard a Canada - bound jet in London.

The passengers and cargo were switched to another DC-8 jet in Montreal for the rest of the westward journey. When this second plane was searched here and again at Winnipeg and Vancouver, other planes on the westward flight.

Police also questioned left London Dec. 9, but word of the loss was held up until Monday as police tried to track the coins.

The coins were British sovereigns and United States $20 gold pieces and were to have been turned over to dealers.

On Sept. 24, 1952, a $215,000 registered mail haul disappeared without a trace.

AN EARL DIES

LONDON (Reuters)—The Earl of Buchan, 82, 15th holder of a title created in 1469, died Sunday. The earl, Rofald Douglas Erskine, was a descendant of one of the oldest families in Britain. His ancestors were kings in Scotland.

Charges Laid

By a Toronto policeman—a Detective Cornish and a Const. Herkness—were jailed on Monday in the courtroom by James as the men responsible. The two appeared at the earlier stage of the accusation.

Lepine claimed brutality was used in obtaining a statement from him by Toronto Magistrate G. Gould said he would not accept the statement.

Lepine at the trial of the police punched him, put a plastic bag over his head, hit him on the door by his ankles and burned his navel with a cigaret while trying to get him to sign a statement.

James substantiated Lepine's story and claimed the police had threatened to "frame" Lepine. After being hit in the stomach and face, he said, he was taken to the police station and charged.

Maternity Hospital, Clinic For Palestinian Refugees Will Be Built by Canadians

OTTAWA (CP) — The first shovelful of sand has been turned for a maternity hospital and baby clinic being given by Canada to soldiers in Egypt to Palestinian refugees.

The hospital and clinic, one of the largest Canada-wide welfare plans ever undertaken by Canadian servicemen overseas, will cost an estimated $6,000 and will be entirely financed by the 56 soldiers of the Canadian contingent in the United Nations Emergency force.

Part of the money is being raised by contributions from all ranks of the force and the rest comes out of a pint of beer. With the approval of signers of about 11 cents a pack and beer about 13 cents a bottle.

Canadian headquarters here made no bones about its anger over an anonymous letter sent to some Canadian newspapers complaining that Col. H. T. Fosbery of Ottawa, the Canadian commander, had dragooned his soldiers into the plan over their objections.

As one spokesman said Col. Fosbery called a meeting of all ranks to hear the suggestion to build a hospital and clinic. He said more than 50 attended and that no one was objected to the plan. All the rest were in favor.

The army spokesman said Col. Fosbery's action in raising the matter and beer prices to help pay for the project were perfectly legal. A commander had authority to do this to support a charitable cause.

The spokesman said copies of the anonymous letter sent to Canadian newspapers were mimeographed. They were mailed from Egypt.

The Canadian soldiers also will contribute a good deal of labor in their off-duty hours to construction of the hospital and clinic. The job will be handled by local labor.

The hospital will provide 10 maternity beds and a clinic capable of handling 300 mothers and their children a day. There are some 250,000 refugees living in camps in the Gaza Strip.

Col. Fosbery told the meeting of all ranks: "We want to do something to help the Arab people and we want it to be a permanent memorial of our service over here."

The Canadians decided to provide funds for the hospital for the refugees when they heard the old hospital, in bad condition, had to be closed because of an outbreak of infant tetanus.

Col. Fosbery announced Dec. 6 that his men would supply the money for a new one, and Wing Cmdr. Ken Trumbley, of Toronto, commanding the RCAF's 115 Air Transport Unit at nearby El Arish, said the 100 men, RAF unit would match the soldiers' donations on a proportionate basis.

Dr. L. Fisher, head of the UN relief organization in Gaza, greeted the offer with enthusiasm. He said there is a pressing need for medical facilities of all types and the hospital would bring long-term benefit.

A Canadian gynaiigast has been serving in Egypt since the Suez crisis in 1956. It not only has been developing for the 5,500-man UN force there but also until help patrol the Egypt-Israeli border in scout cars.

Trading Stamps Held Legal By Action of Supreme Court

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada has upheld the legality of stamps issued by two of Canada's largest chain food stores but organizations opposed to them will continue pressing for a ban on the issuing all types of trading stamps.

The court in an unanimous decision Monday said that trading stamps being issued by Loblaw Groceteria Company (Manitoba) Limited and an independent Groceteria operating in the Winnipeg area are not trading stamps within the meaning of the Criminal Code.

Mrs. A. E. W. Plumptre, national vice-president of the Canadian Association of Consumers said in Ottawa: "The law is supposed to ban trading stamps. We will continue to ask the federal government to amend the Criminal Code to ensure that all types of stamps are banned."

She said the government as a result of the court's decision will have a reminder its previous stand that the present law is adequate to deal with trading stamps.

The Supreme Court made its decision in quashing a ban by magistrate Thoburn.

On Sept. 24, 1952, a $215,000 registered mail haul disappeared without a trace.

Three Process Servers Give Court Evidence

TORONTO (CP) — Authorities trying to untangle illegal practices in Ontario's divorce procedure say they are "getting somewhere."

A deputy-sheriff and three process servers gave evidence Monday in the provincial inquiry into the process serving of the Toronto sheriff's office.

H. H. Donald; inspector of legal offices, said at least three process sheriff's office witnesses will be called today, and as many as 14 might eventually appear.

Attorney - General Roberts ordered the investigation after it was alleged that a picture of a newspaper photographer was taken of a woman who had consented to pose for the camera. There have been similar allegations since then.

When a co-respondent is served the crown must swear the person who received the writ is the person who is named.

Meanwhile, Hamilton private detective James Lawrence, 41, and Gwendolyn J. Chiampi, 21, will appear in court in Hamilton Dec. 29 charged with falsification of evidence in a divorce case.

Lawrence, a former detective with Hamilton police, was fined $50 and $20 costs in 1957 when he could not raise the money.

Police signed the detective's divorce files but would not comment. Lawrence said the charges stem from an investigation he conducting for Mrs. Rose Mogley of Hamilton.

In the process-serving investigation, Robert J. Gray, a process server for 10 years, was committed last week for trial for private and perverting the course of justice.

Brutality Charges Against Toronto Police Concurred In by Burwash Farm Witness

NORTH BAY (CP)—Charges of brutality at the hands of Toronto police made by Albert Lepine, 32, a magistrate's court trial last week were supported Monday by John Joseph James, who was brought as a witness from Burwash Industrial Farm where he is serving a sentence for breaking, entering and theft.

James and Lepine were both charged with theft of television sets from the Simpson - Sears warehouse. James pleaded guilty and was sentenced. Lepine pleaded not guilty and the trial was adjourned until Friday.

Two Toronto policemen—a Deand had their hair pulled.

"I said 'For God's sake, we may as well sign the statement or get things over,' " he told the court. He said Lepine was "in very bad shape," that he could not stand and was lying on the floor holding his stomach.

Questioning James, Crown Attorney E. A. Tilley referred to a statement made by Mrs. Marie Slack of Toronto which indicated she had burned Lepine with a cigaret and his swollen ankles were caused by chafing, tight shoes.

Replying to Marie Slack's statement, he said: "There is a most amazing coincidence that she should be in a position to give an explanation for both the cigaret burns on Lepine's chest and the marks on his ankles. I am hardly convinced it is possible for two people to be so caused in such a way as she has said."

He added that it would seem unlikely that Lepine "would offer to burn himself voluntarily without any pressure."

An investigator with the Toronto police department is observing.

Anglicisms in Vocabulary Of Legislators Being Erased

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec legislators are getting rid of Anglicisms in their vocabulary, not because of the determination of newspaper editors to do something about a situation everyone talked about for years but did nothing to remedy.

Pierre Laporte, 39, legislature correspondent for the Montreal daily newspaper Le Devoir, started linguistic classes for members of the Press Gallery three weeks ago. As gallery president he drew attention to the report.

Premier Jean Lesage and Opposition Leader Antonio Talbot gave the classes their blessing and so many members of the legislature were interested in the project that the gallery's language-reform meetings now will be held in the 90-seat legislature room, instead of a small room.

Politicians are modifying their vocabulary in the legislative assembly as governments have brought down a bill correcting the French version of the government departments to "ministeres" instead of "departement" which was incorrect because in English it means a section or division of a department.

'HONORABLE' DROPPED

One other concrete result is the Quebec government will now use a Press Gallery recommendation that the title "honorable" be dropped and replaced simply by "monsieur" or "ministre" to designate a member of a department. The new rule applies to all legislators, including the premier.

Mr. Laporte, also a lawyer, told reports of the gallery's linguistic campaign that he hopes to get all 85 members of the assembly and the 24 members of the legislative council speaking "pure" French by the end of the present session.

Mr. Laporte, son of a Montreal physician, took an interest in problems of the French language while graduated from college at L'Assomption, Que. He took part in the campaign to provide French books for French-speaking students in Canadian schools. He also edited a journal, L'Action Nationale, for several years.

But chiefly Mr. Laporte has been a newspaperman. He has worked nearly 15 years for Le Devoir.

No Pay Raise

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Monday MPs who might like a pay raise.

He told the Commons that no consideration has been given to boosting the annual indemnity of $8,000 for members of Parliament.

And, in reply to Douglas Fisher (CCF—Port Arthur), he said that since indemnities have not been considered, they can't be linked to reports that it and when there is a pay increase for members of Parliament it likely will be involving a daily attendance roll call in the Commons.

House Briefs

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Fulton told the Commons Monday night that arrangements are made to commence construction at Clarence Creek, Ont., of a $3,533,000 jail at Collin's Bay Penitentiary, Ont., and a $1,500,000 corps building at Joyceville, Ont.

Two ships being supplied by Canada for the West Indies Federation, the Warkaff and the Outarde Canadian Government is holding talks with Federation ministers, he said. The ships will be financed out of $10,000,000 set aside by the federal government in 1958 as a help for the new Federation of the West Indies. One is being built at Port Weller.

Trade Minister Hees promised Monday to consider advising the Commons on the types and quantity of goods cleared for export to Cuba under government licences. He was replying to Paul Martin (L—Essex East), who next week sought answers as to have copies of the permits tabled.

A survey of the possibilities of deepening the river route between Montreal and Montreal will take into consideration the port of the Ottawa River northwest of Montreal, Charles McTaggart-Cowan informed J. R. Garland (Bonavista-Twillingate).

Defence Production Minister O'Hurly informed Hubert Badanai (L—Fort William) that the defence department has not ordered any submarines.

NOTED ARTIST DIES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bess Charles Wyllie, a noted landscape artist, died in hospital here Monday at the age of 72. He lived in Winnipeg for many years where he did illustrations for Maclean's magazine. He moved here 20 years ago.

Former Canadian Ambassador To Paris Dead

PARIS (CP)—Jean Desy, who served as Canada's first post-war Canadian diplomatic corps, died Monday in a Paris hospital. He was 70.

Born in Montreal and educated at Quebec City's Laval University, he died of ruptured aneurism in a Paris hospital. His last post in the diplomatic service was as Canadian ambassador to Paris from 1953 to 1958, when he retired.

He started his career when Canada's diplomacy was in its infancy and had been in the service in the early 1920s. Paris was the first post he held in 1925.

In 1925, Desy was named to the chair of Canadian history at Laval University. He held the post three years.

Among his talents in the field of international law, the Canadian served as a delegate on a consultation in Paris, a post he held 13 years.

WENT TO BELGIUM

He was minister to Belgium and the Netherlands when the Germans invaded the low countries in 1940 and he had to flee to France and from there make his way to England.

In 1941 he was sent to Brazil to open Canada's first mission in South America. He became ambassador to Brazil in 1944 when the mission was raised to embassy status.

He returned to Italy in 1947 and became ambassador in Rome in 1948, post he held until his transfer to Paris.

His diplomatic career was interrupted from 1949 to 1948 when Desy served as director-in-chief of the CBC's international service.

A friend in the service described him as "a true gentleman" and "the essence of a diplomat."

He is survived by his wife, the former Jeanne Marie de Boucherville of Montreal whom he married in 1925, and a son, Jean, and daughter, Jacqueline. The family has lived in Paris since Desy's retirement.

Your Car

Be Positive Spark Timing Is Correct

By EUGENE S. MILMOE

A veteran ignition specialist, when asked why he believed so many cars suffer inaccurate spark timing, answered with a question of his own: "Why are so many people wearing watches which lose or gain up to ten minutes daily?"

Apathy or neglect is not always the satisfactory explanation. Ill corners were informed that engine, loss of power, poor gas mileage, rough idle, fever overheating can be caused by incorrect timing, comparatively few cars would be found in need of such service attention.

In many cases, timing is officially because of distributor points which are either dirty or incorrectly gapped. A gap that is too narrow results in retarded spark timing, which means higher gas consumption and poor performance. If the point gap is too wide, spark timing is too advanced. The result is spark knock or ping and, in excessive cases, damaged pistons.

E. J. asks: "What's the best way to prevent car door, trunk and garage locks from becoming inoperative due to freezing?"

(A) A graphite lubricant will not only prevent this, but can free frozen locks.

T. L. writes: "Advice on oil change schedules vary so greatly that I am sure readers would be interested in learning your personal recommendations for today's cars."

(A) We suggest maximum change intervals of 2,000-2,500 miles in summer and 1,000-1,500 miles during winter, if the car is used under generally favorable conditions. In dusty areas or for cars subject to constant stop-and-go operation (especially in cold weather), a 500-1,000 miles drain is often best.

From R. M.: "My engine overheats when I drive on hilly grades or highways, but not when the car is driven around town or for short runs."

(A) These symptoms indicate a defective cylinder head gasket which, under high pressures, permits hot exhaust gases to get into the cooling system.

R. K. asks: "If I check the automatic transmission fluid after the car has been running an hour or more, should the level be below or above the full mark?"

(A) Usually it will be somewhere between the full mark and approximately one-half inch above it.

STATION DESTROYED

TORONTO (CP) — Fire early Sunday swept a tiny Canadian National Railways station in the east end—The one-storey frame structure at Dentonia Road and St. Clair Avenue, at the junction of the CNR's main line to Montreal and its line to North Bay, was destroyed. No one was hurt.

N.Z. Now Likely To Step up Immigration

By J. G. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—One of the first actions of New Zealand's new Labor party government is likely to be a stepped-up campaign to recruit immigrants.

Evidence is accumulating that this dominion faces labor shortage threatening many plans for economic expansion and that a far more vigorous search for workers abroad is essential.

Unemployment, which has been negligible for years, had sunk still further to a total of 276 for the whole country at the end of November. New Zealand's population is 2,230,000.

In contrast, at least 15,000 vacancies which could not be filled were on the official books.

Many business organizations believe the true number of unfilled jobs is much larger. They say that many jobs are not bothered to report vacant jobs to the government because they have found by experience that little relief is forthcoming.

In an effort to disclose the real labor shortage, chambers of commerce, manufacturers and employers are making a detailed survey of the job situation.

Increasing numbers of young people are being pointed to jobs for the labor force from school. Plans for new industries already announced for outputting new entrants to industry are likely to give.

MOR CAUTIOUS

The incumbent in three years in office which ended at the Nov. 29 election, the Labor government adopted a cautious attitude to immigration. It is strongly influenced by the trade unions which traditionally regard immigration with suspicion. The trade union view is that arrivals of new workers threaten the jobs of existing unionists or help to drive down wage rates.

The new government is expected to push the campaign to recruit immigrants from Britain, and also to extend it to other countries. There has been no recent recruiting of labor in Europe and it is possible that missions may again be sent there as there were some years ago.

Press agreements have also been made that attention should be given to seeking labor in Canada, especially in view of prevailing trans-employment there.

So far there has been no official reaction to this but several private firms lately have been giving attention to seeking workers in Canada.

The new prime minister, K. J. Holyoake, has already given attention to the question of easing the labor shortage. He has held conferences since the election with employers' representatives.

The National party platform included a plank to "step up the quality of the immigration, particularly of skilled workers for industries."

Mr. Holyoake has given an assurance that this undertaking will receive early attention.

Hiroshima Pilot Held by Police

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Police arrested a former Air Force pilot who took part in the wartime atomic bomb raids on Japan and held him for return to a veterans administration hospital early today.

The former pilot is Claude R. Doherty, 41, of Van Alstyne, Tex. He disappeared Nov. 23 from the VA Hospital at Waco, Tex., where he was a mental patient. A patrolman stopped a car for failing to halt at a traffic light and recognized Doherty as the driver. He was accompanied by a woman.

Grayson sheriff J. B. Peck said officials of the hospital in Waco requested that Doherty be held for return there.

Doherty was the pilot of one of the B-29 bombers which flew reconnaissance for the planes dropping A-bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in Japan. He received the Distinguished Flying Cross and other decorations.

Since his separation from the air force as a major in 1947, the tall and pleasant - former flier has been a mental patient several times.

Four Candidates Nominated For Presidency

TORONTO (CP)—Four candidates were nominated Sunday for the presidency of the troubled, 9,000-member Local 938 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters Ind.

Behind the four-way race is high feeling created by three years of turmoil within the local's ranks and 13 months of said-imposed trusteeship by the International body.

There are also six candidates for the vice - presidency and 30 for the local trusteeship.

Bidding for the top office are Kenneth McDougall, business agents William Davidson and William Pratt and rank-and-file member Gerald Gibson.

Mr. McDougall finds himself at the centre of dissension. He was twice ruled ineligible to seek re-election on the grounds his dues were not paid on time on several occasions. He took court action and won an order that his name be placed on the ballot.

IS UNDER TRUSTEE

Local 938, with jurisdiction extending from Cornwall to Sault Ste. Marie, is under the trusteeship of L. J. (Duke) Thomson as the result of interventions by the International President James Hoffa.

At the time Hoffa put the local under trusteeship, it was the very first new election. Mr. McDougall was the target of various factions among the local's members. But this time he has the tacit support of the Teamsters' Canadian director, I. M. (Casey) Doddo.

Daily Bath in Oily Water Helps Reduce Skin Dryness Medical Experiment Shows

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some ski facts, defenses against virus diseases, and a question on anomia are among the week's medical notes:

SKI STOP

A skier weighing 150 pounds and travelling at 30 miles an hour develops a momentum of 4,000 foot-pounds a second. If he stops within two feet, the stopping force is 2,250 pounds.

So it's not surprising that about 50 per cent of all skiing injuries involve the ankles, knees and legs, comments Dr. William B. McConnell in Missouri Medicine.

DRY SKIN TREATMENT

A daily bath in water containing a little oil reduced annoying dryness of skin in 80 per cent of patients, a physician reports.

Their skin became softer and smoother, and patients reported benefits in such problems as aged skin, burn scars and skin inflammations, Dr. Dyrness reappears if bathing is stopped.

VIRUS DEFENCES

Researchers have found three types of chemicals which prevent viruses from multiplying without hurting normal cells.

Future studies will show whether these related substances can be useful in preventing or treating human virus diseases, which include the common cold, flu, and the smallpox, says Dr. Igor Tamm of the Rockefeller Institute.

"The three virus inhibitors are a synthetic chemical nicknamed MIBE, a mould product known as belenine, and substances produced by virus action and known as "interferon." Each protects cells in test-tubes against viral damage and shows some protective activity in experimental virus infections in animals, he adds.

SLEEP FELL

Anxiety is a common cause of insomnia. Tranquillizers can relieve anxiety.

Reasoning that a combination of a tranquillizer and a barbiturate sleeping pill might make it easier to get to sleep, Dr. Wesley W. Bare of Philadelphia tested such a combination on a group of elderly patients.

The combination permitted them less time in the customary amounts of the barbiturate, he said, and worked better than the sleeping pill alone. And patients reported fewer "hangovers" the next morning from the sleeping drug.

Toronto Girl Makes Comeback

LONDON (Reuters) — The Countess of Lindsey, formerly singer Stevie Wise of Toronto, Sunday night made a comeback in show business after 4½ years.

Dressed in fishnet tights, shirt and red satin shoes, she appeared at the Royal Court Theatre in a one-night stand under the auspices of the English Stage Society.

Among other things, she sang Adelaide's Lament from Guys and Dolls.

Her husband, the Earl of Lindsey, former governor-general of Ghana, was not at the theatre. The countess said he had a cold. But he had sent her a telegram in French and a bottle of champagne.

The singer said she is negotiating for a stage appearance and for a television role opposite Sam Wanamaker. She also is considering a Canadian television role.

"My husband had never intended that I should give up singing," she said. She added that she would like to visit Canada but that her home now is in England.

She and the earl were married in 1957. They have a 10-month-old daughter, Fiona.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In case hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinkage) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And almost without exception were very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, from cases of over 10-20 years standing.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H. Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Anglers, Boaters Still Battling

Who was it? Kipling, I think. Anyway he penned the words, "East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet." Could be he had in mind the present-day cold war between fishermen and pleasure boaters. Of course, there was no boating problem in Kipling's day. Ote Evinrude had not yet invented the outboard motor and the question applies none the less.

Admittedly, boating regulations are gaining in stature. But, like nearly all legislation, the accomplishment falls far short of the need. Highway departments postpone installation of traffic lights. Usually it takes several real bad smashups to hasten such installations. Boating regulations seem to be following in the same general pattern.

Gradually some sensible regulations are being established here and there about the country. In some places, waters are set aside for fishing only. The Forest Lakes Resort Association of Michigan has a reasonable approach. The problem is their share-the-water plan's established and confined to their 1,765 acres of lakes.

SOME GOOD RULES

Salient features of this plan stay at least 100 feet off-shore and away from other boats; operation of power boats by children is restricted; high-speed activities are confined to the hours between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. When it becomes necessary for power-craft to move within the 100-foot mark, this should be done at rowing speed.

That rule about children is a sound one. As matters stand now, anybody can operate a power-craft. The Outboard Boating Club of America made a study of last year's boating accidents. In that study, there were group classifications according to age. One of them was the 10-19 year group. This means, of course that 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 youngsters are accepted as speed-boat operators. Imagine, if you can, the same condition in automobile regulations. Now our water-ways are becoming the immediate heirs to our highways.

Youngsters, just about all of them, tend to be somewhat reckless and unconsciously inconsiderate. Almost without exception they love speed. There is a thrill and a fascination about speed which appeals to them more than it does to more mature people. Thus, it naturally follows that youngsters in speed boats and car-water skiers are apt to get themselves into trouble. A group anchored fishing boats offer a hazard-course for youthful water skier which seems to have a strong appeal. In the setting up of boating regulations common sense dictates that age limits, examinations, and operators licenses definitely are indicated.

There is today a widely published fallacy regarding fish and motor noise which unduly has had its effect on setting up boating regulations. This fallacy has to do with the much-disputed question of whether or not motor and propeller noises disturb or frighten fish.

CONDUCTED EXPERIMENT

Some years ago the University of Michigan conducted a great experiment. At the conclusion of this research they came up with the amazing conclusion that motor and propeller noise does not scare fish. This fantastic bit of conjury has, without doubt, done immeasurable harm in postponing the effecting of common-sense solutions of the boater-angler controversy.

To be sure, there are conditions under which motor and propeller noises do not scare fish. Canoe fish frequently take lures that are trolled in the propeller wash directly behind the boat. A scared fish assuredly won't hit such a lure. Thus they conclude that such noise does not scare fish.

Let's take a closer look at this very circumstance. A canoe lure in deep water feels relatively safe. He is aware of approaching propeller and motor noise, even apprehensive. Then the disturbance passes harmlessly overhead. Its direction and speed are established. The fish, in connection with all of his relatives, is curious, so he follows along—to see what the fuss is all about. Also comes the lure and he hits it.

But consider another set of circumstances. A game fish is hungry and searching the shallows for food. Being in shallow water, exposed to his natural enemies, he is unusually aware of any abnormal disturbance. A power boat, moving at considerable distance from him, does cause abnormal disturbance. A power boat, moving at considerable distance from him, does cause abnormal disturbance, Result — he forgets about food for a while and moves out to the security of deep water.

Well, the guides in the Florida Keys and off Long Island and New Jersey coasts may not have (or considered any) scientific-fact-finding experiments they do know quite a bit about motor noise and fish. Try running an outboard across a bonefish flat or through a tarpon bank in Florida Bay and you will learn too quickly what guides think about motor noise and fish. Run your boat through a chum slick off Amboy Light when the bluefish are in and see what happens. The guides know that motor noise in such instances definitely does raise hell with the fishing.

AN UNFAIR SITUATION

So the sport fisherman claims, and rightly, that power boating does affect his sport. Immediately he is confronted with the Michigan dictum to the effect that motor and propeller noise does not scare fish. This creates an unfair situation in which the fisherman finds himself holding the short end of the stick. If the outboard companies insist upon this basic premise, they should, in all fairness, qualify it so that it holds some semblance of truth.

Of course, the fishermen are not faultless. All too many have the distressing habit of anchoring in busy channels and thoroughfares. Powerboaters take exception to this practice, as they should. But here the boat-part fishermen mind their own business and do nothing to spoil the sport of the pleasure boaters.

Some day, I suppose, the cold war between anglers and boaters will be forgotten but not before common-sense boating regulations be made uniform and, vitally important, be enforced. Until then, sales of fishing licenses will continue to fall off, and the fishermen must, of necessity, confine their activities to waters where high-speed travel either is dangerous or impossible.

Why not face the fact that motor disturbance does affect the fishing and build suitable regulations around that premise? Then (a situation around that premise? Then (a situation around that premise? Then (a situation

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

A Cobourg sportswriter, after seeing his club clobbered both goal and flat-wise by the Whitby Hillcrests, blasts off with a bitter denunciation of, Bus Gagnon's battlers.

He writes:—Whitby Hillcrests are steadily gaining a reputation as the Crime Inc. team of the junior 'B' circuit. They have received numerous warnings from the OHA to reform, with little success. They have had run-ins with the Police (over 180 minutes in penalties) and with Kingston (over 40 penalties). The Whitby rowdies, whose motto must be that penalties are service stripes and evidence of hell-for-leather effort, were at work again here last night to turn the second period into a Pier Six brawl. The Cobourg club can play clean hockey if given half a chance. Peter and Kingston are the same. However, Whitby, Belleville and Picton, in that order, are horses of a different color."

The lakeshore scribbler apparently hasn't much use either for the McFarlands and Picton. We agree that the latter has, in fact any of the clubs in the circuit, including the heller-than-thee Cobourg Rockets do not play pansy-waist hockey albeit some of it does get too far into the heavy brackets.

That was a foolish thing to say. Surely Gagnon knows that in this junior "B" circuit, and any other for that matter, any attempt at foolhardy roughness is met with retributive action which can mushroom into an all-out brawl.

Not that the McFarlands sprout any wings when it comes to the rough going. They have a few players, who will drop gloves and stick at the slightest provocation. As a matter of fact they are not averse to starting a shoving match themselves.

We are not condoning stick-swinging, deliberate attempts to injure, spearing or rowdyism on the part of any player or club. It is hoped the guilty players should be given the full extent of official punishment, and if serious enough the punitive wrath of the OHA.

The coaches can help too. There isn't much a mentor can do from his spot near the bench if sudden provocative action on the part of either team becomes the order of the day. Gagnon's club and should instruct their clubs that players' brawls result in loss of manpower to the club, let alone the serious injury hazard.

And coaches, especially Mr. Gagnon, should remember that they, too, are not above the reckoning hand of the OHA if they deliberately, by voice or action, encourage their players in the "manly" art of brawling.

Any red-blooded hockey fan enjoys seeing a scuffle on the ice now and then a couple of players drop sticks and gloves and start a Waltzing Matilda.

But there is a vast difference between this and two or more wild-eyed players swinging sticks and caring little of the consequences. And this business of reaching for or going into the stands to wreak reprisal on one or more loud-mouthed fans should draw stiff penalties.

All teams in the junior "B" circuit can play good, hard rugged hockey, if they want to. That has been proven. But by the same token the clubs have one or more hotheads who can start a donnybrook if they are so inclined.

The Peterborough Juniors are here tomorrow night in a scheduled game with the McFarlands. So let's have it hard, fast, hard fair, with no deliberate intent to brawl, because sure as 'shootin' some youngster is going to end up with the loss of an eye or some other permanent injury.

Big Fight Set for Miami On March 13

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The rated Floyd Patterson – Ingemar Johansson world heavyweight title fight will be held March 13 in Miami's Orange Bowl, the Newark Star-Ledger said Monday night.

Boxing writer Anthony Marenghi said he learned of the date exclusively from sources close to Patterson. He said Patterson's continued insistence on a winter fight with Ingo was one factor which put the date ahead of the usually favored June for a heavyweight title defence.

Officials of Feature Sports, Inc., holder of the contract for the fight, could not be reached for comment.

Sweeney Tops A.L. Scorers

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Sweeney of the first-place Springfield Indians has opened up a five-point lead in the American Hockey League's scoring race.

Five points last week gave Sweeney a total of 37 goals and 31 assists for 68 points. Phil Maloney and Larry Wilson of Buffalo Bisons are tied for second spot with 43 points apiece.

Springfield's Marcel Paille leads goaltenders with a 2.55 average and five shutouts.

Mahovlich Sets Pace

MONTREAL (CP) — While Montreal Canadiens' sharpshooters continue to monopolize the top three positions in the National Hockey League's point-scoring race, Frank Mahovlich at long last has been able to do something about closing the gap.

The same NHL statistics, released today, show Montreal's Bernie Geoffrion is still the leader. The Boomer scored four goals last week and now has 40 points on 24 goals and 25 assists. Geoffrion also has scored in eight consecutive games, one short of the record set by Montreal's Maurice Richard, now retired, 13 seasons ago.

Dickie Moore of Montreal picked up four points on one goal and three assists and regained second place ahead of teammate Jean Beliveau whose prodigious for the week was only one assist.

Moore has 39 goals and 21 assists for 46 points, three behind Geoffrion, and Beliveau has a 14-20 count for 44 points.

BIG FRANK FOURTH

Mahovlich, in fourth place with 43 points, is still settling a dizzy goal - scoring pace for Toronto Maple Leafs. He has scored 29 in 22 games, getting three last week along with two assists. Closest to goal-scoring are Moore with 25 and Geoffrion with 24.

Beliveau leads in assists with 20.

DEFERRED DECISION

MELBOURNE (AP) — The Lawn Tennis Association of Australia Monday night deferred decision on what action it should take on the behavior of U.S. Davis Cup players in Australia. The association met in camera to consider reports on incidents which occurred during the interzone final between the United States and Italy in Perth Dec. 9-12. The reports will be discussed again at a later date.

Hockey Hints

By Lloyd Percival

"He Carries The Mail"

One of the things that has bobby experts talking this season has been the play of Frank Mahovlich of Toronto Maple Leafs. Previously classified as a playmaker with an unrealized potential, this season big Frank has really come into his own. Though he has been having his best-ever goal scoring season he has probably created an even greater impression, especially among his opponents, with his super puck carrying.

Discussion of Frank's puck-carrying ability with opposing defencemen discloses that they feel he is one of the top two or three rushers in the game. Only to check — he is big, strong, a fast and deceptive skater and he has a long reach. As Bill Gadsby of the New York Rangers said, "He not only has a long reach but he really knows how to use it." Here is an important lesson for the young player.

Mahovlich uses a trick we call the "Outside Carry" better than anyone in the N.H.L. It is this trick to which Gadsby referred. In performing the trick the Leaf left wing shifts to the left and then comes back to the right, moving the puck over as far as he can reach, holding the stick in his right hand. As he does this he protects the puck with his body. Though Frank's long arms make this trick most effective for him, this trick can be used to advantage by any player. So practise it at every opportunity. For more hints about the puck carrying technique of this great player send a stamped, self addressed envelope and 10c to Hockey Hints, 80 King Street West, Toronto, for bulletin, "Mahovlich Carries The Mail."

Action Follows Injunction

Tiger-Cat Sale Goes Into Courts

HAMILTON (CP)—Controller-elect Victor Copps, who filed an injunction in an attempt to prevent sale of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, said Monday there will be a court hearing over his action. No date has yet been set.

City Solicitor Foster Rodger earlier Monday was instructed by board of control to determine the city's legal position. The instructions came after Mr. Copps offered with the board, whose members said they could not see how the city was involved.

Mr. Copps said he felt the club out of courtesy to the citizens of Hamilton who supported it, should have invited a member of council to attend the sale meeting last Thursday.

Prior to the transaction, the club had been operated by a board of directors under a franchise granted by the Eastern Football Conference, formerly the Big Four. The injunction was taken to prevent 10 citizens from purchasing the community-owned club for $170,000.

Pennington Fronts EPL Points Race

OTTAWA (CP)—Cliff Pennington of first-place Hull-Ottawa Canadiens has a comfortable lead in the Eastern Professional Hockey League scoring race, but his 11-point lead of a week ago has dwindled to eight.

League statistics released Monday show Pennington's 30-point total is made up of 16 goals and 14 assists.

Tom McCarthy of fourth-place Sudbury Wolves scored twice and picked up three assists for five points on 23 goals—tops in the league—and 19 assists.

Pembroke Lumber's score and picked up three assists for his 20 point total. He leads the league in assists with 34.

BOONE STILL THIRD

Eddie Boone of Kingston Frontenacs scored twice. Boone is still third with 29 goals and 18 assists. Terry Gray of Hull-Ottawa, sixth a week ago, now is in fifth spot with 27 points.

Three players, Fred Hills of Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds, Stan Maxwell of Kingston and Ben Smith of Sudbury Cubs, are in line with 26 points apiece.

Eddie Johnston of Canadiens scored twice in his seventh shutout of the season to tie the league record held by Montreal's Charlie Hodge. Johnston allowed only one goal in his other game to see his average drop to 2.10 goals a game.

Hodge is still the most penalized team with 436 minutes. Bob Wilson, Sudbury Cubs, still leads in penalties with 84 minutes.

Curvis topped Ralph Caldwell, British flyweight champion, and Chic Calderwood, British lightweight heavyweight ch a mpion, who were tied for second.

On Strike But

Burnley Will Play

LONDON (AP) — Burnley's soccer stars said Monday they want to go through with their European Cup matches against SV. Hamburg—even if they are on strike.

They told their club that the big English soccer stoppage—timed to start Jan. 21—should not be allowed to interfere with the two-leg match against the West German champions.

Jimmy McIlroy, Northern Ireland's international inside forward, said the Burnley players will seek permission from the Professional Footballers' Association, organizers of the strike, to play the games against Hamburg and give their match fees to the strike fund.

England's 2,700 soccer pros have given notice of a strike in support of their demand for higher wages and a new contract system.

Burnley and S.V. Hamburg clash in the quarter finals of the European Cup. The games must be completed by March 20. No dates have been set.

Packers Meet Eagles

Green Bay Grid-Happy

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — If you look at it from one point of view, Green Bay shouldn't be in the National Football League. Its population is only about 60,000 and what kind of city is that to compete with New York, Chicago and other large centres?

But if you consider the human factors of pride and stubbornness, it can be said that the Green Bay Packers have been members of the league since 1921 while other communities have come and gone.

The Packers meet the Eagles at Philadelphia next Monday for the league championship and there is great joy here after years of frustration.

FANS REMAINED LOYAL

During bleak days when the Packers flopped around near the league cellar, the fans remained loyal. The picture is different now and Green Bay is pound of its first champion in 16 years. The 1958 club had one victory, a tie and 10 losses for the Packers' worst showing in history. Coach Vic Lombardi changed the record to seven victories and five losses in 1959. This year the team went the way to championship with an 8-4 record.

The city has built a $1,000,000 stadium seating about 32,000 and the club is in good financial shape.

Western Hockey

VICTORIA (CP)—Lou Jankowski and Ron Leopold of Calgary Stampeders remain locked in a two-way battle for the Western Hockey League scoring leadership.

Last week Leopold got four assists at his local goal to even with Jankowski with a 6-goal lead.

Jankowski got his 24th and 25th goals, plus an assist and boosted his point total. Doug Adam's league record of 53 goals is not in season.

The two have an eight-point edge over Seattle's Rudy Filion and Bert Hamelin, Calgary playmakers' Guyle Fielder and Marc Boileau have 34 and 32 points respectively.

Winnipeg Warriors will celebrate Christmas in the basement suite of the Western Hockey League and they stand an excellent chance of getting's season-long lease as a present from the other seven clubs.

Warriors dropped a 4-1 decision to the second Victoria Cougars Monday night and missed a chance to go into a mathematical tie with the coast club which is in the basement for the first time.

The Warriors lost a 1-0 lead in the final period and tied-hit the goal-post with a shot in the final period when they trailed 3-1.

Defenceman Norm Defelice, Bert Flasell and Bill Saunders scored for Winnipeg. Good Lakeshore go'l Winnipeg's goal.

Quit Hockey Player Told

GALT (CP)—Galt Terriers of the Ontario Hockey Association senior series lost another player Monday.

Forward Lloyd Mercer, 22, has been advised to give up senior hockey by specialists who discovered a heart disorder in recent tests. He joins forwards Joe Hogan and Larry Musselman and Hoad Hurley on the sidelines.

Mercer, who missed more than a year of play earlier with heart trouble, has been advised to sit out until February when he will enter a Toronto hospital for further examination. The 155-pound forward had one goal and six assists in five league games.

Hurley will undergo a physical checkup later this week. Hogan and Musselman should be sufficiently recovered from a broken ankle and shoulder separation respectively to play by New Year's.

The Red Wings and Maple Leafs remained in their tie for first place in the Squirt division of the BMHA as both chalked up wins last night.

Red Wings downed Rangers 4-2 with T. White and J. Gotts each netting a pair of goals. A. Jones and J. Blatchford scored for the Rangers.

Maple Leafs defeated the Macs by a 5-1 score with Davis Cass scoring twice for the winners, Muldoon, J. Bursey and D. Moore had the lone Mac goal.

Canadiens skated near the leaders with a 5-3 win over the Bruins. Mark Acquadro bagged two goals with one each for Bob Mulvihill, Jeff Humes and Darryl Demers. Gary Sero, the loop's top scorer, fired both Bruin markers.

Black Hawks took a 6-2 win over the Barons. D. Saumont and R. Mitchell had two goals apiece while B. Morrison and Garry Weyark added singletons. G. Burkitt and D. Snetsinger scored for the Barons.

In the Midget league, Red Wings blanked the Bruins 3-0 with David Davidson getting the shutout in the winners net. Bob Ridley and Bill Goodfellow scored the goals with Bob Reddick helping on one.

Canadiens defeated the Maple Leafs 4-3 with Carl Boomhower scoring twice for the winners. Dave Hannah and Pete Emerson had a goal each and Rick Denard one assist. Bill Moffatt and John Miller had Leaf goals.

Black Hawks goalie Bob Kizer blanked Rangers 7-0 as Geoffrey Rathwell fired three goals. J. Johnson, Jerry St. Denis, Jim Rutherford and Art Lucas scored a goal each. Lucas had two assists, Rathwell and St. Denis one each.

The next Midget and Squirt games are scheduled for January 3.

Following are the Squirt team standings and top scorers:

Pegs Leave for Europe

This Could Be A Farce!

MONTREAL (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons, a senior-calibre team without a league and short on workouts this season, left by air Monday night for a Czechoslovakian hockey tour minus four players and dour about the prospects of winning.

Gordon Jukes of Estevan, Sask., the secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, was among those who saw the team off. He said he'd be happy if the Maroons broke even on the tour.

Team manager Terry Hynes said:

"We've got a pretty good club but you can't go over and expect to win games four men short and with little playing time behind you." He said the Maroons have made only seven appearances this season and have had only 75 hours practice.

The nine-game tour starts Dec. 27 and ends Jan. 4. In that stretch, the Maroons will meet teams ranging from junior calibre to top European status.

Eighteen players made the trip. Among those left behind for personal and business reasons were first-string goalie Gord Dibley and top-line centre Fred Dunsmore.

WELFARE CASES INCREASE

TORONTO (CP) — More than 14,000 more welfare recipients were listed in Ontario in October, 1969, the Ontario welfare department announced Monday. The increase was nearly 40 per cent, to 48,559 from 34,787. Peterborough recorded the sharpest climb, by 1,180 from 436, or a rise of 173.6 per cent.

Player Seeks Goal No. 100

MONTREAL (CP) — Veteran centre Skip Burchell will be after his 100th goal as a member of Montreal Royals when the Club meets Kingston Frontenacs here today in an Eastern Professional Hockey League game.

Burchell, 30 next month, is rated one of the best pivot men in the league. During his 342 games with the Royals he has collected 286 assists along with 99 goals for a total of 385 points.

Burchell is in his sixth season with the Royals, but has also played with Winnipeg of the Western Hockey League and Rochester of the American League.

DOROW NAMED SCOUT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New York Titan president Harry Wismer said Monday quarterback Al Dorow will be employed by the team 12 months of the year, working during the off-season as chief scout and public relations man. Dorow, who played for British Columbia Lions of the Western Interprovincial Football League and the Big Four Toronto Argonauts, said he will move his family to New York after scouting the Rose Bowl and east-west games for his team. He lives in Altadena, Calif.

Grid Rookies Set Record In American

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—A spectacular crop of rookies, led by Abner Haynes of Dallas Texans, won four individual statistics titles in the new American Football League.

Haynes took the rushing title with 875 yards on 156 carries to edge Paul Lowe of Los Angeles Chargers by 20 yards. Haynes, graduate of North Texas State, also captured the punt return title, having run the ball back a total of 215 yards in 14 carries.

Halfback Gene Mingo of Denver Cowboys, a rookie without college experience, edged old pro George Blanda of Houston, scoring 122 points on six touchdowns, 32 converts and 18 field goals. Blanda had 115 points.

Rookie Paul Maguire of Los Angeles won the punting title with an average of 40.5 yards.

Aussie Star To Undergo Knee Surgery

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) Neale Fraser, Australia's top singles player, may have to undergo a minor knee operation before the Davis Cup challenge round against Italy in Sydney Dec. 26-28.

Fraser is suffering from bursitis—a small gathering of fluid —behind the left knee. He was unable to take part in the Australian team's practice for the challenge.

Meanwhile, continuous rain in Sydney has forced both teams to go elsewhere to practise for the challenge round. Hopman has taken the Australians to Brisbane and the Italians returned to Melbourne Monday.

"I'm definitely still be ready to play in the challenge round," Fraser, said in Sydney today.

Fraser was left behind when the Australian team flew to Brisbane and the Italians went to Melbourne Monday to escape Sydney's rain.

"There are six days before the challenge round and my leg is feeling much better today," Fraser said. "I plan to do some roadwork and practice a little serving. By Thursday or Friday I hope to get it out."

Harry Hopman, Australian captain, said in Brisbane that he will wait until Friday to decide whether Fraser can be counted on to play. Besides playing the singles, Fraser teams with Roy Emerson to form Australia's best doubles team.

News Curlers Get Trip To Scotland

EDMONTON (CP)—A special event with a trip to Scotland and the international curling championship as the prize has been added to the annual Newsmen's Bonspiel, scheduled here Jan. 13 and 14.

An entry of 128 curlers is expected for the four-event bonspiel, inaugurated years ago by Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher when he was a sports writer. Rinks are to be organized so they represent as many provinces as possible. Winners go overseas to watch Canadian, American and Scottish curlers compete for the Scotch Cup.

Teachers Now Paid Salaries Competitive With Business Or Too High in Some Cases

TORONTO (CP) — Teachers' salaries in Ontario have reached competitive levels with business and government, and in some cases they may be too high, the Ontario Municipal Association said today.

But the OMA, representing municipalities having 80 per cent of the population in organized municipalities, said in a report to Premier Frost and his cabinet that municipal councils which deplore the record upsurge in teachers' salaries likely won't be able to do anything about it.

The Ontario Teaching Profession Act makes it compulsory for all teachers to belong to the Ontario Teachers' Federation, in effect, this means the entire Ontario school establishment "has become a single mammoth union shop."

"The power of the federation has been demonstrated on more than one occasion when a school board has been pink-lined and forced to arrive at a settlement on salaries in order to staff its schools," the OMA said.

AFFILIATION URGED

The report, signed by Scarborough Reeve A. M. Campbell, chairman of the special committee on local school costs, recommended that municipal councils urge their school boards to join one of the seven trustee associations and to affiliate also with the Ontario School Trustees' Council.

The school board should be encouraged to call upon its association and the OSTC for assistance at an early stage in salary negotiations in order to avoid excessive 'friction or unwarranted pay increases, the report said.

Among other conclusions and recommendations were:

That the province increase its total school grant payments in recognition of the extent to which school enrolment has exceeded population growth.

That renovation of old school buildings should be made eligible for capital school grant support where such action is more economical than to build a new school. The per-classroom ceilings on school construction grants should be apportioned upwards to a more realistic figure based on present building costs.

Another committee, whose chairman was Toronto Controller William R. Allen, dealt with the administration of justice. It recommended that penalties received from offences under municipal by-laws, for example, should go to the province and 75 per cent to the municipality after magistrate's expenses have been deducted.

J. W. C. Langmuir, OMA president and mayor of Brockville, and members of the OMA executive presented 13 other general resolutions which were among 61 adopted at the 62nd annual convention. The remaining 46 resolutions will be placed before the appropriate ministers of the government.

Big Surprise Of Season Is All Way Home

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK AP)—A big surprise of the Broadway season is All the Way Home, which went from box-office bomb to boom in 24 hours.

"Which just proves that not all drama happens onstage," says producer Fred Coe.

Based on the novel 'A Death in the Family, which posthumously won James Agee the Pulitzer Prize in 1958, the play opened Nov. 30 to five respectful reviews and two rave reviews in the New York daily newspapers.

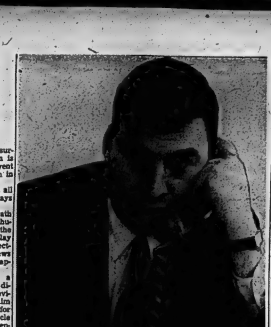
The mixed reception was a new experience for Coe and director Arthur Penn, who previously garnered smash acclaim for Joint enterprise in Two for the Seesaw and The Miracle Worker. Their depression deepened when the box office sold just $883 of tickets the next day —not enough to cover one day's operating costs.

READY TO CLOSE

The grim decision to close Saturday night was published. That did it.

The following day, Friday, box office revenue jumped to $2,600. On Saturday receipts at the matinee were $3,154, for the evening performance, $4,011.

Coe and Arthur Cantor, his coproducer, decided that night to give the show another chance, with $25,000 on hand from the initial capitalization of $100,000 that did it.



A lot of good breaks followed. Ed Sullivan lauded the drama on his television show and other enthusiasts bought newspaper ads extolling the drama of a boy and his family.

The last - minute box office boom held steady: $27,000 the first full week, $30,000 last week despite Monday's blizzard.

"We're in; we're in," said Cantor. Tickets are sold well through February — and after that, who knows?

LECTURES PLANNED

TORONTO (CP)—Civil defence lectures will be introduced into 16 Toronto secondary schools next year, James R. Morgan, superintendent of a secondary schools said Monday.

LIVED IN CANADA — Pierre Salinger, press secretary to president-elect John F. Kennedy, has four memories of Canada. He went to school in Toronto in the 1920s, learned to play the piano and gave a concert at the age of six. (CP Photo).

Pierre Salinger, Kennedy's Press Secretary, Gave Piano Recital at CNE as a Child

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — Pierre Salinger, short, husky press secretary to President-elect John Kennedy, is a cigar - chewing, plane-playing ball of fire with blitzkrieg tactics in his public relations.

He went to school in Toronto and, as a child, showed prodigious talent at the piano. He gave a recital at the Canadian National Exhibition at the age of six.

Mixed with these warm recollections is the sad memory of his father's death. Mining engineer Herbert Salinger was killed in an automobile accident while on a mining expedition in British Columbia in 1945.

"You dredge up old memories," said the 35-year-old who will replace James C. Hagerty as White House press secretary in January.

"A few years ago I was in Toronto and looked up my old piano teacher, Ernest Hambourg, and I also saw the house we lived in, on Lonsdale Road," he recalled.

"Hambourg was a wonderful person. He has a reputation of helping jazz artists all over the country. I used to play in a night club in Toronto now called The House of Hambourg.

HAS FOND MEMORIES

"I've got a lot of fond memories of Canada. I know two of my three brothers were born in Toronto, Richard Kidder and George is a salesman in San Francisco. Richard is a high school principal in Connecticut."

Salinger, a popular figure with the Washington press corps, was born in San Francisco June 14, 1925, of a French Catholic and American Jewish ancestry. Salinger edited a college newspaper at San Francisco State College before he went into the U.S. Navy.

He commanded a submarine chaser off Okinawa at the age of 18 and was awarded the Navy-Marine Corps Medal when he rescued the 16-man crew of a sunken boat stranded on an Okinawa sandspit during a 1945 typhoon.

He went into newspaper work after the war, became night editor of the San Francisco Chronicle at the age of 25, plunged into magazine writing and was regional editor for Collier's magazine when it folded in 1956.

Salinger had been working on a James Hoffa Teamsters Union story and became acquainted with Kennedy's brother, Robert, counsel for a congressional committee on labor racketeering.

In 1959, he was offered a press job with the Democratic advisory council but Senator John Kennedy told him to hold off and then hired him as his own press secretary.

Together they make an odd team—John Kennedy tall, slender and cool, and Salinger, rather short, stout and free clothes a bit unkempt. Kennedy once remarked to Salinger when he saw Vice-President Richard Nixon's press aide, Herbert Klein: "He dresses better than you."

But Kennedy and Salinger have much in common. They both are furious workers; both are war heroes with fondness for the sea. Their wives have something in common, too. Mrs. Kennedy likes books of art, Mrs. Salinger is a skilled artisan in clay, pottery and silver.

Salinger's mother, Jehanne Bietry, was the daughter of a member of the French Chamber of Deputies. When her father was sent to Indochina after the First World War to look after government plantations and started a newspaper in Saigon, young Jehanne became editor of that paper.

Later in San Francisco she became art and music editor for the San Francisco Examiner.

"I remember she wrote later in Canada for the Canadian press on art and also got to know A. Y. Jackson of the Group of Seven," Salinger recalled. "She lives in California now and still has some of Jackson's paintings, as well as of other Canadian artists."

As a youngster, Salinger attended De La Salle Oakland Academy in Toronto, took up the piano and was nurtured by Beethoven, Mozart and Bach. The Salingers allowed him to perform at the Toronto exhibition at the age of six but later decided he should live a more normal life and reduced his piano practice.

Salinger was the eldest of four sons and when the father died, he helped raise and provide for his younger brothers. Now he has his own brood—two boys and a girl. One of them, Stephen, has taken up the violin. In rare moments father and son tune up for a duet.

Maurice Chevalier, Crosby Join up to Prepare Special

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bing Crosby and Maurice Chevalier were having their summit meeting in Satellite A, which is not the outer space but a rehearsal hall at NBC's Burbank studios. They were preparing to tape Bing's ABC TV special for March 13.

Chevalier, 72, trim and erect in a pale blue suit with matching cap, was reflective and philosophical.

"I have known Bing for many years," he said. "I first saw him on the Ziegfeld Roof in New York in 1929, when I was starring in the show and he was singing with the Rhythm Boys . . .

"I must say, he did not impress me with his talent at that time. But just one year later, Bing-Bing — Bing was on everyone's lips in America."

SETS TORRID PACE

Chevalier follows a hectic schedule on two continents. He came here for the TV show and to film a movie, Fanny, with Joe Pepe, goes to New York for the Christmas TV special and to see Wildcat and The Unsinkable Molly Brown, and will be home for Christmas. Next year he'll make a movie in Europe and also do TV there (TV've done everything I can do on the stage; now I must concentrate on films and TV.")

Later in 1961, he plans, to film his life story for Warner Brothers.

Asked how he manages to do so much, the Frenchman replied: "Because it is my life. Because I have always loved what I'm doing. That is the important thing with performers.

"Bing is the same way. He can be taken away from a hard recital for a phone call and he will answer calmly and then go back to work. A man who is that calm must enjoy his work."

BING ARRIVES

Crosby ambled in, puffing on a pipe and wearing a ripe combination of slacks, red sport shirt, yellow sweater and red golf cap.

"Quite a guy," Bing said of Chevalier. "We first got to know each other back in Paramount when he came out to do a Lubitsch picture. The building was tenant or something like that. We've done some benefits together and we did a radio show once, but this is our first time on TV."

It was time to rehearsal and the two greats joined in a par-

HAS FEW CONVICTS

MADRID (Reuters) — Justice Minister Antonio Iturmendi has claimed that Spain has one of the lowest proportional prison populations in the world. Iturmendi said that Nov. 1 the total number of prisoners was under 16,000, representing 51.5 prisoners for each 100,000 of population.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER
Wednesday, December 21 .

General Tendencies: Now you have a day when you can find those Christmas articles for which you have been searching as well as contact unique or progressive friends and associates to get their desirable support for any interesting project that you have in mind. Plan for whatever has to do with the government or public or humanitarian interests, too.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) —The right day to have important meetings or to plan for them, either for business or personal reasons. Decide what you want, then carry through without deviation from original idea. Be short, precise and persevering.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) —Any important affairs away from home can be attended to in a most efficient way now. In any civic matters, impress others with true Americanism. Make your profession more colorful and interesting. Be aggressive.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) —Fresh opportunity is yours now to get into the hustle and bustle of the world outside where you can hobnob with the elite and the workers. Good day for making contacts with out-of-towners, through letters or telephone. Expand.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Be certain you give attention to that hang-up that keeps pecking away at you, since it can be very helpful if you follow. Then do holiday shopping or phoning, mailing, etc. Evening is fine for any romantic leanings.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21).—Important you get together with all associates and have a long talk so that you know what your exact position is with them. Come to a real meeting of minds. P.M. dine out in style, then off to places of entertainment. Have fun.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — This is your best day to do informal shopping for the holiday. Buy appliances you need for home, take treatments you need, beauty and health, clean, get clothing in order, etc. Don't procrastinate — time is short.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) —This can be a very happy day as wonderful accumulations appeal to you. Also, the right gift for someone on the list could now. P.M. study into better ways of operating in the future. Be ingenious.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) —Important you do what you really like regardless of your today and increase harmony in that vital realm of your life. Be sure that you make repairs, consult art, etc. Evening then is right for mingling with folk at home.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — You can make this a most productive day if you keep out early and busy; mail, visit, confer, etc., etc. Get on in good order. Go for study, also. There is every chance of expanding successfully. Work and expand.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) — The right day to take proper steps that will help you to have a greater income. Impress important people with your talents and finesse and with your know-how to commercialize on them. Be smart — use more modern methods.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — If you dress early in very good taste and then go out and confer with persons who can help you to succeed in your particular projects, you will meet with excellent results. P.M. be a social lion, entertaining and kind with everyone.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Now you have the opportunity to get into the so-called silences and get the inspirational messages that will help you with personal ambitions or problems. Then get in touch with authorities in your field. P.M. be kind to the needy.

If your child is born today . . . there will be a tremendous amount of imagination and ingenuity in the nature, plus the ability to combine same with the real tried. Be sure you give your progeny the finest education possible, and do not try to hold down to old-fashioned way of living or saddle to an uninteresting job early. Allow the pioneer and the scientist is in this chart.

'SCENE OF HANGAR DECK DURING CARRIER FIRE — Smoke poured from interior areas of carrier Constellation yesterday at New York as this picture was taken on carrier's hangar deck. AP Photographer Anderson said the inferno was made this view aboard the carrier.—(AP Wirephoto)

CANADA BEATEN

sulting from the presidential election campaign, and the wait for John Kennedy to take over from Dwight Eisenhower.

Canadian diplomats felt that the spirited debate provoked by Canada's initiative Monday was a healthy sign despite the defeat. This was interpreted as one reason the Canadian proposal received allsbough — in view of Moscow's unexpectedly sharp attack — victory seemed unlikely.

Rejecting Moscow's charges that the Canadian resolution was "unrealistic" and "inappropriate," delegation Vice - Chairman Wallace B. Nesbitt said that one paragraph in particular should be voted on to prevent a hiatus lasting until March 7.

FIREMEN PROBING

minute without it burning into the soles of your feet."

An army of firemen and civilian workers, some of whom had just escaped the blaze, fought the inferno with doggedness and daring. There were dozens of stories of individual heroism and responsibleness.

CALLS IT SPECTACULAR

Rescuers cut through steel to reach men hanging on the walls of compartments in which they were sealed.

"One of the most spectacular rescues the fire department ever made"—in the words of Fire Commissioner Edward Cavanagh —saved 25 men trapped in one compartment.

Firemen sent up an aerial ladder from a fire truck on the pier to the side of the ship. Then firemen climbed up to the top of the ladder and worked another ladder horizontally into the single portside of the compartment. The workmen crawled out and down the ladders, one by one, to safety.

Through the smoke, the grey paint of the Constellation could be seen peeling from the oven heat, revealing a rusty-red undercoat.

By early morning, 36 of the dead were identified. The navy said the others were so badly burned they could not be identified immediately.

The brief for the Constellation was laid Oct. 27, 1951. The ship —as tall as a 25-storey building and almost as long as the Empire State Building's 1,047 foot height—is equipped to carry 100 planes. Instead of anti-aircraft guns, she has surface-to-air missiles for defence against attack

Cross-Canada Survey

DOLLS GET TOGETHER — A popular Christmas toy in Canada this year is this 24-inch doll, just as big as Alexey Kelly of Toronto. It can be dressed and undressed in 10 different ways. Like toys is carried on with dolls that can walk, cry, talk, sleep and even break a leg so that it can be placed in a splint. (CP Photo).

Canadian Children No Longer Hypnotized by Assortment Of Space Vehicle Toys

By CECIL REED
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian children in their choice of Christmas toys seem to be no longer influenced by the massive propaganda about space weapons and satellites.

Although they live in an age in which television and other forms of communication bring to their eyes the wonders of spaces exploration, toys with this theme are in relatively little demand.

"Last year was space, space, space," said a Winnipeg department store manager. "This year plastic toys and books are going faster."

Rockets and space ships are not doing as well in Canada as in the United States, said a spokesman for the big Montreal store. "It certainly appears that children in Canada, judging by their tastes in toys, are not at all war-minded."

The manager of a Vancouver department store put it this way: "The television craze is over and the kids are back to the slings" where they want to do something.

. . . It's nothing to see a mother pick up $75 worth of books this year, unheard of two years ago."

TASTE CONSERVATIVE

There are few Canadian-made space toys. Spokesmen for the toy industry say this is because of high costs of tooling up for the limited market and because they regard Canadian youngsters as conservative in their tastes.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press showed a preference for tangible favorites such as dump trucks, electric trains, battery-operated cars and dolls. They are also leaning more toward such educational toys as blackboards, chemistry sets, books and do-it-yourself kits.

Toy sales were reported slow during the early part of December but picked up during the pre-Christmas rush and the industry is hopeful of surpassing last year's record retail volume of $110,000,000. However, because of stiff competition from imports, the Canadian toy-makers don't see any chance of maintaining the annual 10-per-cent increase of the last few years.

The imports, notably from Hong Kong, have kept prices of most toys down. Emmanuel Grossman, a director of Canadian Playthings Manufacturers Ltd., which represents 142 toy-makers, said dolls generally cost 40 per cent less than two years ago. One variety of plastic truck that sold two years ago for $6 now goes for less than $3.

Another offering is a 40-inch doll as big as many of the children who will get them. She can wear the same clothes as the younger. There is also a chief modelled on Canadian and Olympic champion Anne Heggtveit of Ottawa. Some dolls will do just about anything their owner can do, even to breaking a leg so that it can be placed in a splint.

Officials of two major toy outlets in Winnipeg say the trend is to large plastic toys such as large "ride 'em trucks" and big four-to-six-foot cars which operate to dump trucks.

Something new is a detailed DEW radar line model complete with Eskimos, a rocket site and three launchers for $4.98.

An oddity that appears in scattered parts of Canada is guns, while sales of pistols are down, rifles are in great demand.

Wooler

WOOLER — Miss Brooks, of Belleville, was a weekend guest of Mrs. A. Smith.

Mrs. Gladys Herrington and Mrs. Cordia Terrill were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Rutan and family of Waterford; Mr. and Mrs. Claud Rutan and family, of Brantford; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Rutan and son, of Puntize, returned to their homes on Thursday after spending the week with their father, Mr. Arthur Rutan, and attending the funeral of their mother.

Janie Putnam celebrated her birthday on Monday at the tea hour by entertaining a number of her little girl friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Putnam, Janis and Jerrilyn, spent Sunday afternoon in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. McCallan of New Brunswick, spent a few days with his aunt and family, the Rev. and Mrs. J. McCallan.

Mrs. Ed. Mark and family spent a few days last week with their daughter, Mrs. Ethel Gilmer and family, in St. Catharines.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan White, and Little boys, were Sunday guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elgin McMaster.

MERMAN SEEKS DIVORCE

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—Ethel Merman, actress whose starring roles have included Call Me Madam, checked into a hotel here Sunday. Her son Bob said he would go to Juarez Monday to seek a divorce from Robert F. Six, president of Continental Airlines.

Que. Political Situation Called 'Change of Life' By Premier Jean Lesage

By RICHARD DAIGNAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's dramatic political metamorphosis will continue apace in 1961.

Premier Jean Lesage, whose reorganized Liberals toppled the conservative Union Nationale last June, has described the situation in French Canada as "a change of life."

So far the Union Nationals party, without effective leadership, has been attacking the way the Liberals have been effecting this change—particularly with regard to education and the new hospital insurance program, involving new laws and construction.

The line of opposition it has taken is that Mr. Lesage is breaking with Quebec traditions and what he is doing smacks of Anglo-Saxon thinking.

Free education and hospital insurance particularly have been the targets of Union Nationale attacks although the party denies it is against either.

Interprovincial co-operation on a national scale has been insituted by the new Liberal government in line with its thinking that Ottawa and Canada stands to gain by working with other provinces.

KEPT PREMISES

Mr. Lesage's initiative in calling a conference of provincial premiers at Ottawa resulted in a decision to hold periodic talks.

The next one has been called to be held at Charlottetown in August.

The last year has seen a succession of upheavals in the wake of the death in September, 1959, of Maurice L. Duplessis, premier for 16 years. In, his last two years as head boss, he had taken no demands for increased grants to universities, labor petitions for a labor code, requests for more school boards and municipalities to amalgamate rather than the reactionary grants, criticism of natural resources development policy and of his party's election tactics, and pressures for free education and hospital insurance.

His successor, Paul Sauve, started action to modify the government's attitudes. He died Jan. 2. The Union Nationals picked Antonio Barrette to lead the party through. It provincial election in June. His grip on the party was uncertain and, though he settled the controversial problem of federal aid to universities, he was unable to get across to the public his government's intention of "original" about radical changes in policy.

LIBERALS GAUGHT ON

Meanwhile, Mr. Lesage and his Liberals, promising a new deal for Quebec on all fronts, gripped the imagination of the people and were elected.

The fabric of the Union Nationale soon began to deteriorate. Mr. Barrette resigned, provided the leadership was under the thumb of Some high party brass. Yvon Prevost was chosen to succeed him temporarily but became ill and may be through with politics. Acting leader now is Antonio Talbot, a Chicoutimi lawyer. Meanwhile, the party's chief organizer has resigned.

It has become obvious to the Union Nationale, watching Premier Lesage forge ahead with new social welfare measures, education reforms, administrative changes and a new approach to federal-provincial relations, that it had to sit down and think things over.

The party has no structure—in any conventional sense—and policy has usually been set by its leaders. But in June, for the first time, it will hold a convention to hammer out principles and pick a permanent leader.

Two leading personalities in the leadership race are Daniel Johnson, 46, and Jean-Noel Bertrand, 44. Both are lawyers from the Montreal area and have cabinet experience.

SCHOOL INQUIRY

The coming year is likely to see a whole series of new inquiries. The government is launching a royal commission inquiry into education. This controversial issue, with its overtones of unrest in Roman Catholic church circles, may lead to some important changes. And Premier Lesage has categorically stated Quebec's confessional system of education is here to stay.

In economic planning, a provincial agency is industrializing the Gaspe Peninsula gets underway. Another government-sponsored $15,000,000 power line from Quebec City. Construction of a new petrol mill at Chandler appears assured.

An economic council has been appointed to advise the government on industrial development. Mr. Lesage has said the days of economic laissez faire are over Ontario, said the government's enterprise his government does not intend to embark on socialist policies.

Pistol-Wielding Woman Releases Hubby From Jail

HOWELL, Mich. (AP) — The young lady levelled a snub-nosed revolver and said:

"Now listen to me. This is it. I'm after my husband. Let him out."

Deputy Lloyd Cook released Thomas Sargent, 30, from his Livingston county jail cell Sunday. Cook said Sargent grabbed the pistol from his wife, Brenda Ann Sargent, 20, of Highland Park, Mich., banged Cook over the head and then fired at him, but missed.

The Sargents then fled in an auto.

Sargent was being held in a maximum security cell because he escaped from a southern Michigan prison farm in 1956 and was being returned to Jackson, Mich., from New Orleans.

He was arrested Dec. 7 and pleaded guilty to breaking into an auto agency. He was to be sentenced Dec. 27.

Cook said Sargent's wife had visited him frequently.

West German Lawyer Will Defend Eichmann

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — West German lawyer Dr. Robert Servatius arrived here by air Sunday night and said he will definitely defend former Nazi official Adolf Eichmann if he is put on charges of masterminding the Second World War deaths of millions.

Previous reports from Germany quoted Servatius as saying he would drop the case if "members" attributed to Eichmann published in Life magazine were genuine. Servatius told Sunday night his "memory" was a "confession of facts but not of guilt."

Servatius was questioned about reports that Eichmann's defence was being financed by Nazi sympathizers. The lawyer replied he thought his defence would be financed by royalties from the Life articles and publications.

He said the West German government has declined to share in defence costs of the trial, scheduled to start March 6.

Present Canadian Economy May Keep 1961 Immigration Figures Well Under 100,000

By JOHN E. BIRD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration to Canada in 1961 may fall below 100,000 for the first time since 1950 unless a surge in the Canadian economy increases demand by early spring.

The movement of immigrants has decreased steadily since 1957 when the flow reached a post-war high of 282,164. The factors responsible for this decline are expected to continue to limit immigration next year.

Immigration soared in 1957 because of a booming Canadian economy at home and the early part of 1957. Immigrants were needed to fill vacant jobs and were available in Britain, Germany and Europe.

The picture now has changed. The Canadian economy has levelled out and the number of workers recorded available in July, in addition, prosperity has returned to Europe and immigrants are not interested in migrating. These conditions — along with publicity abroad about unemployment in Canada—reduced immigration in 1959 to 106,928. The flow this year is expected to be about the same or perhaps less.

SEE LITTLE CHANGE

Government officials do not anticipate any encouraging reversal in Europe which would encourage migration in 1961. And the prospect of any immediate surge in the Canadian economy creating a need for immigrants in large numbers appears remote.

During 1961 the government is expected to continue to restrict admission of unskilled workers to the class making up the bulk of Canada's unemployed. However it is likely the government will continue to seek immigrants with skills and professional training with funds who want to establish small businesses or own or rent farms.

Barriers preventing the arrival of unskilled immigrants in any case will not be lifted next spring unless the government is convinced this will not add to the unemployment problem.

"We will be lucky if we get as many immigrants in 1961 as we expect will arrive this year," one government economist said.

Federal immigration policy is to limit the annual flow of newcomers to the immediate absorptive capacity of the economy.

Both the present Liberal and Conservative governments and the former Liberal administration have restricted immigration during periods of high unemployment.

OPPONENTS AGREE

Neither has accepted the theory that immigrants help to create employment through the purchase of homes, farms, businesses, and consumer goods.

However, it's not possible to turn the immigration tap on and off on an annual basis. It takes months of administrative work—even if immigrants are needed there are available. It took a year to slow after a period of restriction.

The 1960 immigration year will be over both poor and happy notes.

The 2,000,000th post - war immigrant—a 16 - year - old Dutch girl—arrived in Canada on June 8 by ship. However, hundreds of immigrants began returning home because they couldn't get steady jobs.

Three Hulls left Quebec City early this month with 600 immigrants.

Italy has ceased to be an immigrant's country," said Italian-born Charles Robertson, a machine fitter returning to Dundee, Scotland.

MAY CHANGE POLICY

Current government policy of admitting immigrants in good times and limiting the flow in bad times may be altered by immigration act amendments to be proposed at the present session of Parliament. However, no one in Ottawa anticipates any drastic changes.

Immigration Minister Fairclough told the Commons in 1959 that the act is being reviewed "to bring about "a new deal in immigration matters."

She said then that the new deal would include "positive approaches, democratic programming, raising of standards of admission, simplified procedures for selective immigration to replace rigid restrictions in the present act and regulations."

Immigration to Canada has fluctuated with expansion and decline in the Canadian economy since a record 400,870 entered the country in 1913.

Graph shows rise and fall in annual immigration totals from 1913 to 1960. The 1961 total is expected to fall below 100,000 for the first time since 1950.

Immigration soared to the second highest point in 47 years when a booming economy and influx of Britons and Hungarians in 1957 pushed the total to 282,164.

It declined sharply after that, levelling off at slightly more than 100,000 in 1959 and 1960. (CP Newsmap.)

LITTLE TAX RELIEF IN 'BABY' BUDGET

Fleming Erects Barrier Against Foreign Money

Wipes Out Incentives For Outside Investors

Gross National Product Climbed In Third Quarter

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's economy made a small upturn during the third quarter of this year with the Gross National Product advancing less than half of one per cent from the second quarter to an annual rate of $32,277,000,000, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The slight increase—about half of it due to higher prices—followed a decline of 1.3 per cent during the second quarter in the Gross National Product, total value of goods and services produced.

When price increases are discounted, the bureau said, the volume of national production "was very close to being unchanged from the level of the second quarter."

Over-all employment remained unchanged and unemployment—discounting seasonal factors—increased.

Today's report, following Tuesday night's budget speech, illustrated why Finance Minister Fleming was able to cut down the forecast of government tax revenues from his predictions last March which were based on an expected six-per-cent gain in GNP.

The bureau said that in the first nine months of this year GNP has averaged 2.9 per cent above the same period of 1959.

The third-quarter advance would have been larger except for the fact that increased purchase demand was met by reducing inventory stocks instead of out of new production.

Soviet Troops Land in Cuba Says Miami News

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A unit of Communist Chinese troops has landed in Cuba, the Miami News said Tuesday.

The News quoted travellers arriving in Havana from the provinces as reporting that the troops were landed at Antilla, on the north shore of Oriente province, Nov. 3.

Whether the troops were Chinese Communist or Asiatic Negroes was unknown.

About 2,000 soldiers were taken off the Russian freighter Nolber after dark, hauled into covered trucks and ordered away in the direction of the Sierra Maestra Mountains.

The ship also brought 30 trucks, 24 artillery pieces and several covered crates, the informants said.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) Synopsis:—The storm which moved south of the lakes during the night brought from three to six inches of snow to most of Southern Ontario. The storm is intensifying and moving northeastward toward the Maritimes. Northwesterly winds following the storm will bring colder temperatures to most areas. A few snowflurries will persist at most locations with locally heavy snow squalls.

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming, with a worried eye to Canada's trade deficit, has boosted taxes on foreign business investors and erected a tax barrier against new bond borrowings abroad.

His budget speech Tuesday night wiped out most of the special tax incentives designed to help post to attract foreign capital to the fast-developing Canada.

The sweeping step will have its first impact on the inflow of capital from the United States, which owns 76 per cent of the $20,675,000,000 in foreign capital invested in Canada.

Mr. Fleming emphasized that he is not aiming at policies "antagonistic to foreign capital." But the inflow of foreign investment, which has speeded Canada's post development, was no longer needed at the same pace.

HITS AT DEFICIT

The new policy, he made clear, is intended to help Canada's shopping deficit in international trade in goods and services—a deficit he estimated at $1,000,000,000 for 1960.

The budget move affects two areas of foreign investment.

Withholding taxes will increase to 15 per cent from five the withholding tax on dividends paid by Canadian subsidiaries to their controlling parent firms in the U.S. and other countries. Where existing international agreements limit the tax to less than 15 per cent, these will be renegotiated.

It will also apply the flat 15-per-cent withholding tax rate on interest payments to foreign holders of new federal and provincial bonds and any Canadian bonds payable in foreign currency. This will affect only new bond issues—not existing ones or new issues for which sale terms have been agreed on before today.

This withholding tax has not applied to interest payments for federal bonds and Canadian bond issues payable in foreign currency—and has been at a reduced five-per-cent rate on interest payments for provincial bond holdings.

Court Convenes To Study Fire On Carrier

NEW YORK (AP) — A naval court of inquiry convened today to study the disastrous fire that struck the aircraft carrier Constellation. Expected to be on its way to the city fire department's stern criticism of safety procedures aboard the warship.

Three more charred bodies of sailors were recovered from the constellation Tuesday, bringing the total number lost in Monday's fire to 39. Another 124 aboard ship from stem to stern, bucked flames, helped extinguish the fire and beat the carrier's completion date by at least a year.

Queen's Message on Christmas Day To Be Broadcast in 32 Countries

LONDON (Reuters) — The Queen's Christmas Day message will get the widest "same day" radio-television coverage of any event in history.

The 3-minute tele-recording of her seven-minute message have been arranged by television organizations in 30 countries.

Recordings of the talk will be broadcast by radio stations in the Commonwealth countries and territories and throughout the rest of the globe by the BBC.

(In Toronto, the CBC said Canadian broadcast times would be announced later today.

The unprecedented coverage of the message has been made possible by pre-recording for both television and radio services.

The Queen's royal greetings will establish three other notable "firsts" in the history of the broadcasts, begun 30 years ago by the Queen's grandfather, King George V. These are:

1. The Queen will be seen and heard in Ghana, Sierra Leone and Malaya and New Zealand before she is seen and heard by her subjects in Britain.

2. She will be able to see herself—shortly after recording—by watching TV with her family at Sandringham.

3. Viewers will see her speaking from Buckingham Palace—her only two previous "live" TV performances in 1957 and 1958 were from Sandringham.

A BBC spokesman said two tele-recordings had been sent to the CBC and a 16-millimetre negative was dispatched for non-CBC Canadian stations.

Assembly Overrides Soviet's Rejection

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) The 15th United Nations General Assembly early today slid into history as the greatest diplomatic meeting in history — by Premier Khrushchev as the star in addition to a host of political potentates—ended their pre-holiday deliberations with an agreement about how the bill for The Congo will be paid.

Meetings had been scheduled to end Tuesday but continued under a dozen agenda items and bogged down briefly in the face of Soviet Premier Khrushchev's objections of The Congo.

Mr. Fleming emphasized that he is not aiming at policies "antagonistic to foreign capital." But the inflow of foreign investment, which has speeded Canada's post development, was no longer needed at the same pace.

Green Critical of Colleagues In NATO Who Slight UN

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Green complained Tuesday that a number of NATO some members of the Atlantic alliance seemed to be slighting the UN.

Certain NATO members, he told a press conference, do not seem to realize that by "ignoring world opinion makes it easier for the Soviet bloc to undermines the objectives of NATO and the UN.

Mr. Green's complaints appeared to be chiefly against France, which has consistently refused to participate in the meetings of the political committee of the NATO powers.

Mr. Green said NATO members should "get in and make the UN work instead of drawing off into a shell." He denounced the "defeatist fortress" concept of NATO as being "out of date" in the space age.

He said that at the United Nations, NATO is regarded with some suspicion. As far as Canada was concerned, he said, there was "equal priority," Canada disliked the tendency of some countries to look down their noses at the UN. The Atlantic alliance was a useful "mental approach" should be to help uphold opinion in the Western side and this called for constructive action in the UN.

The Western allies should take a cue from the Russians and put forward resolutions that would have the effect of embarrassing the Soviet Union—just as Russia has put forward resolutions embarrassing to the West.

Changes Aimed At Giving Canadians Bigger Hand In Fortunes Of Economy

Budget Offers No Pat Fiscal Cure for High Unemployment

BY DON HANRIGHT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The government Friday night launched a far-reaching program aimed at giving Canadians a bigger hand in the fortunes of the Canadian economy.

It is offering tax incentives for expansion and establishment of domestic industry with home-grown money. At the same time it is going all out to stop luring foreign investment capital—without actually placing any curbs on it.

This was the core of Finance Minister Fleming's special mid-term budget, presented to the Commons.

It was a businessman's budget, seeking long-term objectives. Its main targets were the worrisome Canadian balance on international payments, foreign control of Canadian industry and the dollar premium that has hampered Canadian exports.

NO CHRISTMAS CHEER

There was no pre - Christmas cheer in the form of tax relief for the average individual taxpayer. Personal income tax reductions were for university students and their parents, in the form of a deduction of tuition fees from taxable income starting in 1961.

Nor did the so-called "baby budget" offer any fiscal cure for high unemployment. While some of the corporation tax changes may lead to more employment — and thus more jobs — Mr. Fleming told the Commons he will rely mainly on legislation to tackle this issue.

Even the proposed changes in tariff procedure, affecting 75 imported items, were restricted to heavy capital goods, such as machinery. Mr. Fleming told reporters later they are unlikely to have any effect on consumer prices.

Meanwhile, the unforeseen slowdown in economic growth has confronted the government with fiscal troubles of its own. It expects $6 billion in revenues next year. March 31 with a deficit of about $286,000,000 — the Conservatives' fourth consecutive deficit — instead of the $12,000,000 surplus forecast by Mr. Fleming in his March 1960-61 budget, last March.

OPPOSITION CRITICISM

The budget drew immediate opposition criticism. Hazen Argue, Bendickson a non, Liberal financial critic, called it empty window dressing" and an "executive suite" budget. Only the corporations would benefit. There were no benefits for the ordinary taxpayer.

Mr. Bendickson suggested that only an economic upturn and a skilled accountant "would appreciate the significance of most of the tax changes that are involved in this budget."

Mr. Fleming had made poor prognostications, leaving himself a considerable position.

The budget met with general disappointment in most Canadians.

Mr. Bendickson, speaking only seven minutes amid some beck-

Old Man Winter Officially Here And He Brings Snow to Prove It

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The weather gods, with a fine sense of the finess of things, threw the first major storm of the season at central Canada today—the first day of winter.

The storm was centred over Pennsylvania, moving northeast, but was expected to stay generally to the moderate to intermittent flurries.

Early today, western Newfoundland was getting heavy snow and cold with temperatures from five to 15 below. New Scotia was comparatively mild.

Heavy snow was along the east coast of Newfoundland and on outports of Labrador.

Southern Ontario was getting snow, central Quebec was sunny and cold and the Maritimes were dry with snowflurries.

Snow was falling in Montreal and Quebec City early today.

Indications are that the storm hitting central Canada will move into the Maritimes and Newfoundland with heavy snow beginning tonight.

As the Pennsylvania-spawned snowstorm moves northeast, the cold Prairie air is expected to swoop in behind it over the central part of the country.

Great Chance For Attacking Water Pollution

TORONTO (CP) — The new program of the federal government which offers $100,000,000 in loans to municipal sewage treatment projects provides a great opportunity for attacking water pollution, Minister Affairs Minister Warrender said Tuesday.

"The Ontario Water Resources Commission welcomes the assistance which will be provided through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, which is handling the project on behalf of the federal government," Mr. Warrender said.

He reports to the provincial cabinet on behalf of the OWRC.

The OWRC, Mr. Warrender said, is prepared to provide the financing in Ontario of storm sewers and other works which are not included in the federal government offer to aid Canadian municipalities — now distributed through this financial assistance to sewage projects.

Mr. Warrender said that the OWRC is prepared to also consider the financing of the remaining one-third of the cost of such projects.

In short, the legislation permits the OWRC to loan two-thirds of the cost of such projects and to receive 25 per cent of such loans on work completed by March 31, 1963.

JUDY LAMARSH GETS RISE OUT OF MINISTER

Member Critical Of Works Program

OTTAWA (CP)—"I would ask the minister not to be mean to the lady," shouted a galland Hazen Argue, CCF leader.

"Then let the lady be lady-like," replied Labor Minister Michael Starr.

The exchange took place Tuesday, in the Commons, and was touched off by the lady hereof, Judy LaMarsh, Liberal member for Niagara Falls.

Miss LaMarsh celebrated her birthday with a criticism of the government's winter works programs.

Perhaps one of her most treasured birthday presents: Getting a rise out of Mr. Starr, who interrupted her several times to reply to points of criticism she raised.

MAKES RECORD ARGUMENT

Miss LaMarsh, making her second Commons speech since winning a byelection Oct. 31, suggested that planner of the works program pay little heed to municipal budget procedures.

Miss LaMarsh complained the government had given no breakdown of the number of people who will be employed, together with length of employment, under the government's winter works program.

Mr. Starr interjected: "The municipalities are not giving that information. All we can give you

Salvation Army Band Visits Kiwanis Club

The sound of silver-tongued brass resounded through the Kiwanis rooms yesterday afternoon as local Kiwanians enjoyed the traditional Christmas visit of the Salvation Army band from the Belleville Citadel. There were several instrumental selections by the band members under Quarterly Bandmaster Les Price, as well as a pair of vocal duets by Enid Cooper and Joanne Brooker and a solo, "O Holy Night," by Jack Hatfield. Bandsmen were Marvyn Cooper, Gordon Fudge, and Bob Howes, Jack Hatfield, lead deputy bandsman Price.

Major John Carter of the Salvation Army was in charge of the program but also participated as accompanist to the vocalists and as a substitute cornet player.

In his remarks on Christmas, Major Carter said that although the exterior appearance of Christmas may be spoiled by commercialism, the inner truth and heart of the Christmas message still remains as strong and as good as ever.

The carol singing was led by Bill Stewart. The meeting was presided over by president-elect Bob Brain. Newt Macfie reported that there have been 875 subscriptions so far for the current travelogue series. This number is a record for the club.

COLD SPELL AHEAD — Below-normal temperatures are predicted for most of Ontario and Quebec in the 30-day outlook of the United States weather bureau for mid-December to mid-January.

This outlook is based on long-range predictions and is not a specific forecast. A change in weather pattern may produce major errors.

The bureau predicts light precipitation for British Columbia and the Prairies. (CP Newsmap.)

New Satellite Part of Missile Warning System

VANDENBERG AFT, Calif. (AP)—Discoverer XIX was in orbit today to test the device's temperature. This knowledge will help future Midas satellites detect any hostile missile firing by reporting flashes of heat above the normal level.

The 61-foot two-stage Discoverer rocketed southward through scattered clouds from its seaside launching pad Tuesday. The 2,700-pound second stage went into a 93-minute, egg-shaped polar orbit at 120 to 400 miles out.

Ober Discoverers have carried a recoverable capsule, but not this one. Instead it has a load of electronic gear to measure the earth's normal heat radiation.

Forthcoming Midas — missile defence alarm system — spacecraft will have infra-red "eyes" to spot the heat of enemy missilings. Eight to 12 Midases will provide continuous coverage of the world's surface.

Masked, Armed Man Routed By Service Station Operator Wielding Pail of Hot Water

The attempted armed holdup of a service station attendant was unhurried east of Belleville last night when the would-be holdup man received a pail of hot water in the face.

When the masked holdup man accosted Perry Young, Vigor service station operator on No. 2 highway, Mr. Young threw a pail of hot water over the bandit, then tossed the water pail after him and ran for cover behind the gasoline pumps.

But the intruder waited no longer and took to his heels down the highway, where he was picked up by a waiting car.

Mr. Young told police that he was preparing to close for the night and, after finishing mopping the floor, had stepped outside to throw away the wash water.

As he did so a man with a heavy scarf across his face jumped over his face accosted him and said, "This is a stickup — give me your money."

"I already had the pail of dirty water in position to throw it, so I just turned and threw it at the masked man," said Mr. Young.

Mr. Young said he then threw the empty pail at the man and ducked for cover behind the gasoline pumps.

Hearing the sound of the intruder's voice and the speed with which he took off down the highway, Mr. Young estimated the man's age as being about 25 years.

"I couldn't see anything of the man's face," Mr. Young said, "as he had his toque pulled low and his overcoat collar turned up."

The would-be holdup man is believed to have been watching the service station for some time. A number of visitors to the station had just left and the bolduper man failed to have waited until the operator was alone.

Routine Meeting Of Council Turns Into Stiff Debate

DESERONTO — The last council meeting of the year was held on Monday night in the town hall with two members absent. What ordinarily would have been a routine meeting turned at the final moment into a real debate with councillor Howard objecting to the action of the council regarding the right-of-way over the Marsh property along Water Street.

At a previous meeting of the council it was decided to take some action to assure the town a roadway to the pump-house. Mr. Marek took action to force the issue and council were about to expropriate the land allowance. Since that time the mayor and a committee have met with Mr. Marek and he has agreed to construct a road on town property immediately north of the existing road. This suggestion touched off the fuse to begin a real debate. Councillor Howard asked why the previous motion of the council had been ignored. He was informed that a simpler solution had offered itself to council and that was the action of the committee. Councillor Detlor moved that the motion of the meeting of November 21st be rescinded and the motion carried by a vote of four to one. Council are now to advise Mr. Marek that work on the new roadway is to begin immediately.

Another lengthy discussion was occasioned by the letter from the Public Utilities giving estimates on the extension of the water mains on Park Street and Dundas Streets. It was finally decided that a four-inch main would be more suitable on Park Street so that a fire hydrant could be installed. The cost however eliminated action by this year's council and this was also the case of the extension on Dundas Street to the western limits of the town. The letter was referred to the 1961 council.

Th police committee read a letter from Constable Closter regarding a complaint about the operation of the local pool room. Chief Closter said he had several times warned the proprietor about allowing minors to frequent the pool room and last week had found minors in the pool room on two occasions. He claimed that the proprietor did not seem too co-operative and that was the reason for bringing the matter to the council as they have jurisdiction over the licence. Council decided to ask Mr. Carter to meet with the police committee on December 28th to discuss the matter.

The resignation of H. Allord as chairman of the Board of Health was accepted as of November 24th. The appointment of his successor will be made by the new council.

Council agreed to purchase the old hydro sub-station from the Hydro Electric Power for the sum of one dollar. This is to include the heating equipment the meeting.

Lower picture shows rear elevation of proposed extension with additional service units extending out from main patient tower section. Construction would be such that future expansion could be made without disturbing existing facilities.

Quebec Would Consider Setting Up Lottery

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Jean Lesage said Tuesday night that if the federal government amends the Canadian Criminal Code his government will consider setting up a lottery.

Mr. Lesage, speaking at the conclusion of a long debate over the Quebec government's bill proposing an increase in the personal income tax, said the only cause for the boost was the extravagance of the Union Nationale party. The tax increases were adopted by a vote of 45 to 12.

Mr. Lesage said his government will have to borrow $50,000,000 before March 31 when the current 1960-61 fiscal year ends and another $100,000,000 during the following fiscal year. For this year alone, he said, the deficit will run to well over $100,000,000.

The provincial government had borrowed $97,000,000 earlier this year and with the forthcoming loan to be floated the total borrowing for the current year would run to $100,000,000.

CALLED TOUGH DECISION

Mr. Lesage accused the opposition of making demagogic appeals to the population in their attack against the tax increases. He said that after the promises he had made during last provincial general election it had been difficult for him to propose taxation increases.

Hospital Planning Board Envisions $6-Million Project For Required 240 Extra Beds

Faced with a present shortage of approximately 160 beds, and this to rise to 240 beds by 1966, the Belleville General Hospital Board planning committee are taking a long hard look into the future with the view of determining hospital needs for the next two decades.

What they have come up with are rough plans for a new hospital extension with 240 beds complete with all required services and costing an estimated six-and-a-half million dollars.

But the 240 bed hospital addition would accommodate only for immediate requirements. Hospital accommodation needs for 1986, based on population figures for Belleville and the surrounding area, could be expected to reach 720 beds.

Present accommodation at the hospital is just over 200 beds with the rate of occupancy 100 per cent. Hospital authorities consider 85 per cent a safe percentage of occupancy.

The current shortage of beds is now 160 and by 1966 when the population has grown to an estimated 125,000 or more, the hospital bed requirement will be 720 beds. Therefore there is a waiting list of 450 persons at the hospital.

PLANS CONSIDERED

At the present time plans for hospital expansion have been considered by the planning committee.

Members of the hospital board of governors are well aware of the need for additional hospital accommodation but so far have not been asked to approve any proposals.

The first and immediate stage of long range plans for hospital expansion would call for the construction of a six-storey patient tower, the first two floors of which would contain part of the necessary hospital additional services would be provided in two-storey units extending out from the main structure. Both patient accommodation and services could be added to, as needed.

Thus far no architects have been retained but with the assistance of two consulting engineers, members of the hospital planning committee have come up with what they think is required.

Pre-stressed concrete construction permitting additional floors or sections to be readily laid on, without disturbing existing floors, would be favored.

In order to accomplish this, structural shafts would be provided through which all services would be provided. Plans share would separate the various floor sections of the patient tower.

DOUBLE CORRIDORS

The initial patient tower would consist of three 100 foot sections, each with four floors and separated by 20-foot structural shafts. At one end would be a special 60-foot section containing stairwells and elevators.

Overall dimension of the initial patient tower would be 420 by 64 feet. Each of the four floors would have 80 beds per section, the three four-floor sections providing accommodation for 240 beds.

A feature of the patient tower would be double corridors on each floor with nurses stations between the corridors.

The proposed hospital extension could be constructed on hospital property at the south of present buildings just due to the slope and other characteristics of the property construction costs would be greater than on a new site.

Hospital Administrator Wesner Daschuel stated yesterday that the last addition to the hospital opened in 1956 merely supplied the need for the day. The day the new wing was opened it had 90 per cent occupancy, 10 per cent more than is considered safe.

The hospital planning committee, in a special report shows that the Belleville hospital has a higher percentage occupancy than in any other Ontario centre of a similar size. The percentage range is from 104 at Belleville down to 80.5 per cent at Chatham. Kingston is 81.8.

450 ON WAITING LIST

Taken the other way around Belleville has only 3.2 rated hospital beds per thousand of city population. Kingston on the other hand has 7.67 beds per thousand population.

The present year the waiting list at Belleville hospital has increased from 300 to about 450 at the latest tabulation.

It is noted that 87 per cent of the patients in Belleville hospital come from Hastings county and the city of Belleville with approximately one-half of these patients coming from the county and half from the city.

Present population of the area served by the Belleville hospital quirement of a b ast 2,000 to 100,000. On this basis of estimated population by 1986 of 178,000, the hospital bed requirement is expected to reach 720 beds.

2,000 OF STAFF

A hospital of that size would have a total staff of 2,000 persons, many of which would have to be trained locally. Extensive training facilities would be needed to meet this need.

The committee points out that each local community has the responsibility of providing adequate hospital facilities. The central governments provide financial assistance.

The report emphasizes that the hard facts of the local responsibility cannot be hidden nor can the problems presented be avoided.

"Today's planning must prepare for the future requirements," the report notes.

Members of the Belleville General Hospital Planning Committee are Dr. William Beattie, chairman; John Rohan, chairman of the hospital board of governors building committee; Miss Dorie Smith, director of nursing; Werner Daschuel, administrator; Len Burford, administrative assistant, and Mac Curzon.

Delegation Will Discuss College Street Control Dam

A delegation from the Moira River Conservation Authority of Ontario today, to confer with Hon. Wallace Downie, Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources, regarding cost benefits of the proposed College Street ice control dam in Belleville.

Making up the delegation are Alderman George Whalen, chairman of the Authority Water Control Advisory Board; county warden Earl Sager, and Authority secretary-treasurer Michael Chubb. Lee H. Grills, M.P. for Hastings South was also expected to attend.

Construction of the proposed College Street ice control dam has been in the discussion stage for several years but liability to secure the financing from the federal government has resulted in no definite action.

The original proposal called for the federal and provincial governments to pay 30 per cent of the cost with the Authority paying the balance. However, the federal government has since indicated it was not the policy of Ottawa to participate in projects below a certain cost figure.

A recent survey of expected benefits from the proposed dam indicates the benefit should be 3.6 times the cost.

Purpose of the dam would be to hold up ice during the spring breakup of the river and thus prevent flooding in the downtown area section of the city.

The last serious flood in Belleville was in the spring of 1936.

Mr. Grindle's invitation for the Moira Authority delegation to visit Ottawa came by way of a letter to Hon. William Nickel, Ontario Minister of Planning and Development. The letter was received only yesterday, being delayed a week due to Christmas mails.

Paint Company Safe Is Stolen

Safe crackers during the night fled with their loot from the Belleville branch of the Pittsburgh Paint Company on Church st. and carried away a small office safe containing petty cash and a number of company cheques.

Police Inspector J. B. McLauchlin said the intruders had forced a rear door to the warehouse and then made their way to the office.

He said the small office safe could have been carried out by one or two men.

Laos Water-Logged Powder Keg

If somebody, waiting rhetorical, demands that Laotians stand up and be counted they will be seeking something which has never occurred before. Nobody knows how many Laotians there are, one million or two million or any other number in between or thereabouts.

Yet this little heat-soaked, water-logged, poverty-stricken chunk of real estate, which no sane man would covet, could easily spark a second "Korean-type" war—and might even provide the push which would send the big rockets trailing their death-clouds from continent to continent.

Laos—which a sense of common decency prompts one to pronounce as Lay-oss but which, to listen to television commentators, is generally and apparently appropriately spoken as Louse—is one of four territories which, before the Second Great War, made up French Indo-China.

After Dienbienphu, when negotiations at Geneva finally resulted in an accord which ended the fighting in Viet Nam and divided that country as part of Indo-China into the northern Communist state of Viet Minh and the southern western-allied state of Viet Nam, it was specifically agreed that Laos should be neutral. French Indo-China was thus broken into four separate states, the two portions of Veit Nam, Laos and Cambodia, to the west.

The truce commission established at Geneva was supposed to supervise Laotian neutrality, but the Laotians, reportedly at U.S. instigation, requested the commission to depart. It did so, Canada voting for this acceptance of the Laotian request, India being opposed.

Subsequent events suggest that, in this instance at least, Nehru may have had a clearer view of the necessities of the situation than did Canada, separated by so many miles, and such a wide difference in philosophy and economy, from the Laotians.

"There seems little doubt but that the neutralist policy established at Geneva has been breached, by the West as well as by the East True, the Communists, Chinese and Russian and northern Viet Namese, have aided the Pathet Lao, the pro-Communist left-wingers. But not all U.S. aid has been for butter; guns have also been furnished."

First chapter of the present stage of the struggle in Laos was provided when neutralist forces under Captain Kong Le overthrew the pro-western government of Premier Boun Oum. At first, Kong appears to have battled both the Pathet Lao and the supporters of Oum, but he has now joined forces with the Pathet Lao.

"The United States Government," says the New York Times, "has served notice it supports the legitimate Laotian government of Premier Boun Oum and will do what it can to help that government overcome any threat of external aggression. This pledge is implicit in the action of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, which has put strategic Laos under its protection and denounced Soviet shipments of heavy arms and Communist technicians to the Left-wing rebel forces as 'outside interference' in Laotian internal affairs."

If this is the correct appraisal of the official position of SEATO—and somebody should inform the Secretary-General of that organization, Poete Sarasin, of that fact. In Bangkok, Thailand, on Monday he declared that Capt. Kong Le and the Pathet Lao have "by no means been defeated" and that SEATO had not yet been invited in the war. "The organization was not created to prevent people from going Communist but to prevent Communist aggression," he said.

Sarasin's words must have been pleasing to the car East correspondent for the Toronto Globe and Mail, who correct CA the CBC program "Background" Sunday evening. Given son said Nehru feared that SEATO intervention in Laos might provoke the Chinese into aiding the Pathet Lao on a large scale, thereby possibly touching off a new "Korea." From Stevenson's talk it appeared that Communist help to date had been limited to that given military, defeated Communists working in the rice paddies and teaching the poverty-stricken manner they gain the confidence of the Laotians and peasants how to raise larger crops. Of course, in this recruit new members for the Communist cause. Stevenson suggests the West should copy this techniques—if we have the guts. Which raised the word "guts," too.

It would appear we have here a situation which calls for careful study and cool judgment.

UP INTO HEAVEN

One hundred years ago, in 1860, — and in fact the world — as the people of the United States were on an upward surge. The industrial revolution was in full swing, and there was bowever, were on that vast area of land lying west of the Mississippi, world's atomic scientist issued a statement about the pos-other words, they were looking forward the horizon.

Fifty years later the eyes of the nation had turned down. Men were looking at ledgers, for it was a period of great business activity. They were looking through microscopes and test tubes, for science was going forward at an unprecedented rate. In the mills, workmen were bent over their looms. On the farms, men were looking down at the soil as they plowed it.

Present Peace of Nuclear Energy in the World

BY HON. ROBERT W. MACAULAY
Ontario Minister of Energy Resources

ARTICLE 55

The major atomic energy programs in the free world are those of the United States, Great Britain, France and Canada. Most of the expenditures upon these programs have been for military purposes, except in the case of Canada. Ostensibly the costs of developing civilian atomic energy are separate from the military, and are expected to average about $300 million annually in the U.S.A. in the next ten years. In practice, the civilian program can be costed separately only with difficulty, as the civilian reactor technology has originated in the defence programs of the last twenty years.

The civilian aspects of the program, particularly in the U.S.A., is like the part of the iceberg that shows, compared with the massive unseen substructure. The wide range of U.S. civilian reactor concepts, from small power packages for the Antarctic up to 600 thousand horse-power stations is particularly suited to derive benefit from research and development paid for under the military program.

Similar circumstances apply in the U.K. where the cost of developing the large natural uranium reactors of the U.K. and France, but Canada has largely devoted its effort to civilian research and development. The military programs of the various powers tend to continue regardless of economic fluctuations or the cost of competitive materials and devices. The civilian programs tend to be more sensitive.

CIVILIAN DEVELOPMENT

Since 1950 the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission has been subsidizing the civilian reactor technology in a wide range of reactor types. Canada and the United Kingdom have been forced by the high cost of nuclear development to concentrate on one or two families of reactors. The U.S.A., however, has been able to finance research programs in all kinds of reactors. In addition, large private firms have invested heavily in the development of a particular reactor with the prospect that their investment would give them a big advantage in the sale of reactors.

The U.S.A.E.C. has planned its program in a number of successive stages, deliberately leading to more highly developed reactors and greater proportional contribution from atoms. The intention is to hand over responsibility progressively to private enterprise until nuclear power stations become fully competitive with those of a conventional power station.

Although it is uncertain when this will happen, it is not expected to happen before 1970 in the case of the U.S.A. and therefore technology must be developing well before that time. Consequently the U.S. commercial and competitive nuclear power station is built. At present 340,000 horsepower nuclear power stations are producing electricity in the U.S., by 1965 this is expected to increase to about 5,000,000 horsepower and by 1970 to 8,700,000 horsepower.

CANADA

Atomic Energy of Canada Limited has had a continuing program of research in the advancement of research, and as a by-product, the production of plutonium. At present the prototype of a nuclear power station with a capacity of 20,000 kilowatts (27,000 horsepower), known as NPD, is under construction and scheduled for completion during 1961. Construction has begun on CANDU, 200,000 kilowatt (270,000 horsepower) which is to be completed in the 1964-65 period. This will be followed by one for the Southern Ontario Hydro electric System, and will be taken over by Ontario Hydro from Atomic Energy of Canada Limited when it has reached a stage of actual operation as a commercial proposition. Further developments at later development depends largely upon the degree of success.

UNITED KINGDOM

In Great Britain the civilian program is on a similar scale but on a cheqquered career since 1955. In 1955 Britain announced plans for another 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 (2,000,000 to 2,700,000 horsepower) by 1965. In 1957 this program was trebled. Later this was modified by 1965 to reach the target date to 1966. On June 20, 1960 this program was cut in half to 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 horsepower by 1966. This is slightly more than the scheduled American program for the same years and is a respectable total and still more than the program originally announced in 1955.

The fluctuations in the United Kingdom civilian nuclear power program have been due to fluctuations in the supply of conventional fuels. It is important to the fact that the cost of generating electricity in coal fired stations has declined rapidly in the last few years, so that the cost of nuclear power stations being competitive by 1965, as formerly expected, they are not now expected to be competitive until 1970. The supply of conventional fuels depended upon the British fear that, because there was a shortage of coal in 1938-56, and their oil came mostly from one source, potentially unstable areas, Britain might be starved of energy or forced to buy it at higher prices from dollar areas. The situation today is that there is a glut of coal in Britain and Europe, oil is being found over most of the world, and Britain is now prosperous enough to buy oil from dollar areas if the need ever arises. Therefore, it now seems to be the British intention to build more nuclear power stations to develop the technology and keep the nuclear engineering in-being, without spending money unnecessarily on the uneconomic source of power.

FRANCE

The French nuclear program is primarily military, with three plutonium producing reactors producing some electricity, and a natural uranium - sized (50,000 horsepower capacity) power reactor. One other civilian power station (about 70,000 horsepower) is under construction. Two others are planned but on no projected, totalling 670,000 horsepower. One of these reactors will be built in co-operation with Belgium.

CONCLUSION

In general, where programs are not stimulated by defence requirements, the trend is to employing research reactors to advance reactor technology, and are going forward as slowly as possible, because in the end it will be cheaper in most cases to use reactor concepts already developed rather than to develop more advanced countries. Even the Soviet Union, which in 1958 announced a large program, has now cut back to a primarily research and development program, instead of a full - scale thrust to economic nuclear power.

Washed Face, Pays 40 Cents

St. Thomas Times-Journal

The International Harvester Company in Chatham, England has a washing break for the benefit of workers whose hands get dirty at work.

Recently one of the employees, known as "Miss B.C.I.V.S." washed his face as well as his hands. For this unauthorized use of company time for washing his face, the company deducted the equivalent of 40 cents from his pay.

Need Highway S.O.S. Signs

Windsor Star

A car breakdown is a frustrating and sometimes dangerous event. Motorists who have had the misfortune to be caught on the front door of his car. When practical, it might help these same signals should be flashed together with the emergency set of tail lights and inside lights.

Motorists seeing these signals should report the trouble to the nearest garage or police station. They should, not stop, particularly at night, in case holdup men are in ambush.

Ontario highway officials should investigate the suggestions. There would be a big help when drivers need a helping hand.

The mystery of the shortage of lake trout that has confronted Prince Edward County and other Lake Ontario fishermen for the past two years may have been cleared up by the statement made before the International Great Lakes Fisheries Board of Inquiry, by Deputy fisherman, William Cahill, that the depredations of millions of eels are responsible for the dearth of this type of fish."

One of some thirty fishermen who testified, Cahill stated that he had travelled over the trout spawning beds and had seen eels 'by the millions, with heads buried in the gravel, and tails pointing toward the surface." These eels, he said, were feasting on trout eggs.

This was not quite up to the number expected but a full house including numbers was made up for it the ladies' contingent. The attendents were pleased to see so many of the teachers present this date show co-operation between masters and pupils. The highlight of the dance was the crowning of Miss Marion Lashbrook as "Miss B.C.I.V.S." Bruce Cronk was M.C. in connection with this feature; Eileen Cameron ran a close second.

The Blame For Accidents Goes Deep

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The dictionary defines as "accident" as an "unexpected happening without one's foresight or expectation."

I would say that most accidents are not truly "accidental" in character; that they are the result of unknown physical forces, but the consequence of fairly predictable human traits.

True accidents are rare; but even fully, poor eyesight and dullness are widespread. A sudden tidal wave may be an accident — an airplane crash rarely is not.

Consider the recent crash of the chartered plane carrying a football team back to California. The pilot, a man of pride, vanity, greed, adventuresome, reckless ness.

First of all, why should a small college send its football team 3,000 miles to play a game for a few hours? What vanity impels such nonsense in an educational institution?

Then, deciding to go, why pick a 15-year-old two-engine plane instead of a modern four-engine craft? Because the price was cheaper. But if you are going to spend $7,700 for the charter, what's a few thousand more? Committed to folly, why be penurious about it?

And who checked the airline and the pilot? The airline had been fined $18,000 a few months before, for violating FAA regulations. The pilot had a previous safety spotty record — for one thing, he had falsified some time.

Then, too, the pilot was paid only for the time he was in the air. Time "wasted" waiting at a socked - in airport was money lost.

How large a factor was human greed in selecting a pilot with such a situation?

Here was a complete and interrelated set of "causes" — beginning with collegiate America's almost overemphasis on sports, and ending with an inexperienced pilot taking an overloaded plane in a dense fog. Was this truly an "accident"? Or is it a classic example of Greek pamsaka overtaking human vanity, greed, and folly?

VIRUS OR GERM CAN CAUSE A FEVER BLISTER.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What causes a fever blister? I get rid of one and another takes its place. — L. M."

Aggravating, isn't it? Often some persistent virus or germ is the cause. Oddly enough it won't be the virus causing the blister when you get down to it, quite logical) sometimes a new strain vaccination will stop recurring blisters of this sort. Local infection lingering on or in the skin can also be a cause. So can an allergy.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I am moving from my own home to a hotel where I'll have to use a bathtub to which a few strangers will have access. What cleansing medium is advisable? — A.W.

For all practical purposes, just remember that soap and water and a good rinse in the simplest procedure, because soap is a very good antiseptic. That's all I'd do. If you have any further precautions, a swabbing of the tub with any of the household cleaning agents containing chlorine would be all right, or, to go even more to extremes, a dilute antiseptic solution containing phenol—which, of course, must be watch, of course, must be dilute and must be used with care. Hot soap and water should, still, thin out or disable most any of the germs that could be left by a previous user. Keep in mind; The previous user probably uses soap, too, and is probably clean person or wouldn't be using the tub, so your chances of picking up germs is really very slight indeed.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What causes the gray hairs? Are the hairs on the faces of so many women gray after the age of menopause? Is ther any safe, permanent way of removing them? — Mrs. R. S."

Some women encounter this before menopause, usually it is a family trait. After menopause, it is probably due to age, or to the result of unknown physical forces, but the commonest cause of fairly predictable human traits.

Bleaching these hairs to make them less noticeable is often a problem. Tweezing is the best removal by electrolysis, or "electric needle." It calls for skill, and a lan can refer you to someone who is skilled in this work.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WHO'S YOUR BOSS?

Bosses are all right — if they are the right Bosses. All through Nature and human affairs is felt the power of Bosses, good and bad. Whether in crystals or in pieces, the world would run sadly short of Bosses. Somebody's why it is a satisfying thing to know that you can selfyour own Boss.

There are Bosses — and Bosses. Some Bosses are like the inch paper of tobacco boss there. Some have been the cause of the loss of many lives by too many glasses of fire-water. Some of us are ruled by a mere wife Bosses. Some of us allow our stomachs to be our Bosses. Some are the victims of government to clothes and what not. Bosses are the heartiest! These are the hard Bosses. But don't forget —

You can select your own Boss.

I'm glad you are concerned about driving. We'd save a lot of lives, prevent a lot of injuries and save a lot of money if more people would take their defects in health can make dangerous drivers. In fact, various medications can affect alertness or reaction speed. These medications are not necessarily sedatives either!

Low blood pressure of 110 is not unusual. However, an eye disturbance could be due to the spots and dizzy spells. Anemia also can produce these symptoms.

In addition to knowing the exact trouble, or troubles, and correcting them, I can help considerably, and my suggestion is to have your physician do some testing. Or, if his opinion so indicates, let him send you to an internist for more specialized checking, which may well indicate ways in which your physician can pursue some confirming medication.

Letter To The Editor

Very Particular About Proof of Age

Editor,

Ontario Intelligencer.

May I, through the medium of your interesting paper, bring to light, what appears to be a very unsatisfactory state of affairs regarding minor sports.

From a very short time after my son was born, I have maintained documentary evidence as to the date and place of his birth, attested to by reputable godparents and the rector of the parish established. This document has been acceptable to the Department of Vital Statistics, and to two insurance companies, among other organizations, as the satisfactory proof of age. Now, I find it is not good enough for minor sports.

I am given to understand by local minor associations, that the only recognized documentary evidence of this type is not secured from the Ontario Minor Hockey Association with which the local organizations affiliate, but rather of proof of age is seems rather ludicrous that an association, such as the organizes should set themselves on a level with individuals and organizations, which are of far more importance to the well being of the youth of our country.

Surely Belleville citizens, including the writer, are very grateful to the coaches, referees and officials of the Belleville Minor Sports Association. They are giving of their time and effort to develop and train our youngsters, and receive very little thanks. If the information I have is correct, in this affiliation with the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, they can only surmise that a considerable amount of distrust separates the minor sports players. It is a poor atmosphere in which to train and develop youngsters.

BY GREGORY CLARK

It is difficult to live by your wits in a village. You need a large number of customers to get much to prey if you are gifted with intelligence alone, and most of the people in a village are that self respect which demands of them that they give as much as they get. Even in quite large towns, where there are people who could about full of trusting rural people, it is not too easy to live by your wits because your reputation eventually overtakes you, and you have to move to the city.

The city is the ideal climate in which to live by your wits. It is filled with strangers so liberally that many of them seem quite may never be seen again. A really brilliant man can live the life of a king in the city.

There is only one drawback to city life, and that is that the city is larger, the number of people living by their wits and preying on them. And it reaches a point, finally, where a man living by his wits never knows for sure whether or not he is up against somebody else living by his wits. That they do constantly fall foul of one another is proven every time in the courts of law and in the shopping streets where you see large prosecutions going out of business and numerous other evidences of men living by their wits the safest for living by your wits.

RCAF Aircraft Help Santa Deliver Gifts

From Whitehorse in the Yukon to El Arish in the Sinai desert, men and women of Air Transport Command will celebrate Christmas under widely differing climatic and scenic conditions.

For many of ATC's personnel unable to get home because of either duty or distance, the traditional Christmas dinner will, as in the past, be served by the officers and senior non-commissioned officers

Naturally the men at RCAF Detachment, Resolute Bay, on Cornwallis Island, 500 miles north of the Arctic Circle, will not get home for the festive season, nor will the men of 115 Air Transport Unit in El Arish, Egypt. These men, among other Canadians on duty away from home, will find their Christmas celebrations aided by parachutes delivered by Air Transport Command aircraft.

The most important item delivered to men on duty in the Arctic or overseas is mail from home, and special pains are taken to ensure that the mail gets through on time.

For the men serving in Santa's backyard 433 and 436 transport squadrons have successfully completed their paradrop of Christmas supplies.

A 435 Squadron C119 Flying Boxcar left its Namao base, near Edmonton and was loaded with 7,000 pounds of supplies at Fort Churchill, Man. Already aboard the aircraft were nine Christmas trees. The supplies, in parcels of 240 pounds, were packed in special, wicker pannier, manufactured by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind workshop in Toronto. The baskets were dropped by parachute on Dec. 3 at weather-reporting stations in the central Arctic: Arctic Bay, Pond Inlet, Grise Fiord, Alexandra Fiord, Mould Bay, Isaachsen and Eureka.

Similarly, 436 Squadron based at Downsview, near Toronto, carried out a Christmas paradrop to outposts in the eastern Arctic. These outposts are: Cape Dorset, Cape Hopes Advance, Clyde, Ivugivik, Koartak, Lake Harbor, Nottingham Island, Pangnirtung, Resolution Island, Sugluk and Wakeham Bay.

From the land of the midnight sun to the blazing heat of the Sinai desert near the birthplace of Christ, covers half a world. At El Arish, Egypt, men of 115 Air Transport Unit are looking forward to their Christmas festivities, which should be well-provisioned affairs, for 428 "Thunderbird" Squadron at Trenton has a reputation for getting the goods through in plenty of time. On its scheduled flights to the Middle East, the squadron has provided its men in Gaza with their only link with Canada.

The Thunderbirds are also Santa's helpers when it comes to supplying Canadians serving with the United Nations force in the Congo, and just recently a 426 Squadron North Star completed a two-week round-the-world flight to deliver Christmas mail and supplies to Canadians serving on the International Truce Supervisory Team with headquarters in Saigon, Indo China.

Stamp Club Party

TRENTON — Members of the Small Fry Stamp Club and their parents enjoyed a Christmas party in the recreation office on Ontario Street, last night. Presents were provided for the boys by officials of the club and refreshments, prepared by the mothers, were served.

TOWN LACKS NEEDY

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (Reuters) — Traditional Christmas charities will not be distributed in this prosperous town this year because "no one is poor enough these days to qualify," a city official said.

Mrs. Winnifred Chicrutt, president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and Mrs. Irene Young, vice-president, exchange Christmas gifts at the annual W.A. Christmas party in the Trenton Armouries last night. More than 50 W.A. members attended.

Boy Scouts Must Apply by Jan. 31 For Jamboree

TRENTON — Sam Mowbray, District Boy Scout Commissioner, has announced that the deadline for application for scouts wishing to attend the third Canadian Jamboree, which will be held July 6 - 15, near Ottawa, must be in by January 31.

On or before that date, all applicants from Trenton must be interviewed and a selection made to fill the four vacancies allowed from this area. Full details will be sent to provincial Scout headquarters.

The cost to the boys is approximately $40, plus the cost of a pre-Jamboree camp which will be about $5.

Applicants should be first class Scouts (or those who will be by May 1), and must have reached their 14th birthday.

Boys, Rovers and Scouters will all be required to have medical examinations and polio shots.

Applicants may apply to Commissioner Mowbray at 106 Shuter St., Trenton.

The district Scouts and Cubs are planning several activities for Boy Scout Week, Feb. 20 - 26. These include church parades, films, an Old Scouts reunion dinner, a leaders' dance and other special services and events.

A bird house competition is also being planned for this special week. There are two classes in the competition, Cubs and Scouts. The winning bird houses will be displayed during Boy Scout Week.

RCAF JET CRASHES

KAISERLAUTERN, West Germany — An RCAF F-86 jet fighter crashed and burst into flames Tuesday in a forest not here after the pilot parachuted to safety.

No Problems From Snowfall

TRENTON — Town Engineer Walter Murray said today that no major problems had arisen over last night's snowfall in Trenton.

The grader was out at midnight and the sweepers left the town streets at 4 a.m. and 7.30 a.m. The main streets were fairly well cleared. The snow removal equipment was to continue working until 5 p.m. and will be sent out again at midnight, as the weather forecast calls for an all-day snow session.

Several Trenton councillors reported that citizens have phoned them complaining about blocked driveways and snow-covered sidewalks.

However, members of the public works department were taking the problem in their stride.

Bus Hits Car, Youth Killed

FREELTON (CP)—A youth was killed and several young hockey players were injured late Tuesday night when a car and the team's bus were in collision on Highway 8 near here during a snowstorm.

The players were members of the Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A division They were returning from a game in Guelph.

Stephen Woods, 18, of Hespeler was dead on arrival at hospital in Hamilton 15 miles southeast of here. He was in the car.

The players were released from hospital after treatment.

GROUSE RECORD

The record bag for one gun in a day is 1,070 grouse to Lord Walsingham at Bubberhouse, Yorkshire, in 1886.

Youth Charged With Assault Of Young Woman

DESERONTO — Highly efficient police work on the part of Chief Glover resulted in the arrest of Stanley Osborne - Brant Saturday, about noon, less than 24 hours after he was alleged to have committed an offence involving a young Deseronto matron.

About 7.30 Friday evening the young lady was proceeding east along Thomas Street when, immediately past the United Church she was attacked. Her assailant took her by the arm to force her behind the church and when she resisted he struck her savagely over the head with a sharp instrument which he had concealed in his fist. The young lady was knocked to ground and, feigning unconsciousness was able to spring to her feet and take to her heels and escape.

Chief Glover was notified and found the young lady to the doctor where stitches were required to close the wounds in her head. Then he immediately set out to apprehend the assailant. Having little more than a description of the clothing, Chief Glover finally took into custody, about noon Saturday 19-year-old Stanley Wilson, who will appear in court to answer a charge of assault with intent to commit an indictable offence. The youth is resting at her home with her head bandaged and in a severe nervous condition.

$1,100 Damage In House Fire

DESERONTO — A fire Saturday morning at 9.30 did about $1,100 damage to the home of James Wringe, Green St. When firemen arrived at the scene, smoke was pouring from the roof and from under the eaves of the building. Putting two small hose lines into play from the pumper, the department brought the fire under control in less than 20 minutes, but not before considerable damage had been done to the roof and back wall of the building. The fire apparently was started by hot ashes dumped into a paper box in the woodshed which is attached to the wall and into the attic.

Another alarm about 4 o'clock in the afternoon was caused by the short circuiting of the wiring in a station wagon owned by Rev. J. M. Stone. The car took fire as he was proceeding up St. George Street and was controlled when a passer-by cut the main cable before too much damage was done.

SKI-DOO—That is just what Thomas Jury of the Bay Marina on South Front Street, is riding in the above picture. Powered by a seven horsepower air-cooled motor, the cross between a pair of normal sized skis and a miniature half track, the Ski-Doo can make up to 25 miles per hour with a second passenger aboard under deep snow conditions. Proponents feel the Ski-Doo is ideal for use as a level ground ski tow or in emergency use when roads are piled high with snow drifts.

JUDY LAMARSH

is the number of man days and the number of men to be employed and you divide one into the other and you get the average, something like 40 man-days per person.

WILL WRITE

In reply to further prodding from Miss Lamarsh, Mr. Starr said he would write to Niagara Falls to get the figures for that city. "Evidently the honorable member has no communication with them."

It was then that Mr. Argue asked that the minister "not be mean to the lady," and Mr. Starr replied: "Let the lady be ladylike."

Miss LaMarsh said winter works programs should be announced sufficiently in advance to enable municipalities to make allowance for them in the preparation of their budgets. The only other thing a municipality could do was to borrow by debentures.

Money raised through debentures had to be repaid by taxpayers owning property.

"This is nothing short of welfare. This government has shifted the welfare from the shoulders of the whole of the people of Canada—a principle which under a Liberal administration was well accepted—and put it on the shoulders of the province that owns real property."

In an effort to clear its desks for the Christmas recess, which starts after today's sitting, the Commons sat 32 minutes beyond its usual 6 p.m. EST supper adjournment to complete consideration of supplementary estimates covering $56,234,918 worth of government spending plans.

The opposition agreed to speedy passage of the spending estimates after receiving an assurance from Veterans Affairs Minister Churchill, the government floor leader, that they could be gone into in more detail later in the session.

HITS METHOD

Mr. Argue criticized the "slipshod" government operations that forced rushing the estimates through but he agreed with the speedup to avoid delaying any projects that would help ease unemployment.

The winter works program was debated when the Commons considered a $30,000,000 item in the supplementary estimates for federal shares of payroll costs of municipal projects, undertaken between mid-October and April 30.

WEDDING

CANNING — MANSFIELD

Bridge Street United Church was the scene of a lovely wedding on Saturday, December 3, when the Rev. H. M. Davis united in marriage Deanne Louise Mansfield, daughter of Mrs. Ronald Kaiser and Mr. F. S. Mansfield, of Toronto, and John Henry Canning, only son of Mrs. John S. Canning and the late Mr. John Canning.

Entering the church on the arm of her father in the strains of Henri Purcell's Processional Hymn, the bride was radiant in her gown of white cashmere lace with sabrina neckline, wrist-length sleeves and an overskirt of silk organza. Her circular veil featured a carpet of velvet leaves, centred with a silk chiffon bow and tear drop pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white pom-pom 'mums and red Sweetheart roses.

Miss Beverly Birdie was the bride's only attendant. Her gown of deep amethyst cotton lace was fashioned on bouffant lines with flattering boat neckline and satin cummerbund. A nylon amethyst halo dotted with tiny seed pearls completed her costume and she carried a nosegay of yellow pompom 'mums and carnations. She wore the bride's gift of a single strand of pearls with matching earrings.

Mr. Clarence Jones of Belleville attended the bridegroom.

During the signing of the register, Mr. S. Alec Gordon, organist of Bridge Street Church, played "Carillon" by Sowerby and "Trumpet Tune" by Henri Purcell for the recessional.

A reception for the immediate family was held at the Queen's Hotel.

Following a honeymoon in the United States, Mr. and Mrs. Canning took up residence at 159 George Street.

Previous to her marriage the bride was honored by a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Margaret Birdie with Miss Beverly Birdie as hostess, and a pantry shower at the home of the bride with Mrs. Gerald Crocker and Miss Thelma Smith as co-hostesses. The round couple was also honored with presentations by the Bee Bee Club of Deacon Brothers; the staff of Geo. A. Welch and Co., and the choir of Bridge Street Church.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

We have suspected for the past few weeks that winter was around, but not until today was it official; it arrived at 3.37 p.m. Eastern Standard Time this afternoon and brings with it the shortest day of the year. It is good that there is Christmas excitment, for then nobody notices how soon the light fades in the afternoon.

Four days before Christmas and everything is at fever pitch, children an example of perpetual motion, father resigned to the hubbub and mother harried and proceeding automatically. Coming in from another bout of shopping, she may say, dumping the parcels on the kitchen table: "Well, at least my hands won't be empty and my eyes sting with tears this year getting the onions ready for the dressing. I've just bought a bag of fresh ready-chopped onion, frozen, at the store. Now that is something I appreciate — I hate peeling and chopping onion." To meet women that will be a real gift.

Many things have been said about gifts and giving. John Lavater said, "The manner of giving shows the character of the giver more than the gift itself. There is a princely manner of giving and accepting." In the choosing of the gift, Thomas Fuller said, "When thou makest presents let them be of such things as will last long; to the end that they may be in some sor immortal, and may frequently refresh the memory of the receiver."

Looking at most things with a rare cynical eye, La Rochefoucauld held that "What is called generosity is usually only the vanity of giving; we enjoy the vanity more than the thing given." The wise Charles Dudley Warner has a thought which Christmas shoppers might keep in mind: "The excellence of a gift lies in its appropriateness rather than in its value."

With all the richness of tradition from the past, yet we add to and change many Christmas customs with our changing times. Could we have told our grandparents that we would have Christmas trees — some of them completely artificial — of silver, gold blue, pink and white! But have the manufacturers been able to improve upon these bright visions with the pungent odour of evergreen?

The season is still a home and family festival and coming home for Christmas is generally adhered to. But are we making made on this idea and we find people and whole families planning a trip away from home for the holiday. Do they miss their friends' cheery greetings at the climax of the season? Being out on the streets the last few days before the day seems to be one continuous chorus of "Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas!"

Yesterday on the street, carol music was filling the air. "Hear the Bells on Christmas Day" was the selection sung by a popular voice — lovely hopeful words, especially the last verse. Then we remembered that the man who wrote them was the same person who, as a nine - year - old boy, wrote the lumpy poem quoted in the last column.

For a final word about gifts, what could be better than the thought expressed by Erich Fromm: "In the sphere of material things giving means being rich. Not he who has much is rich, but he who gives much."

St. Joseph's P.C. Holds Yuletide Meet

The December meeting of the Parish Council of St. Joseph's R.C.W.L. was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number in attendance. The highlight of the evening was a one-act comedy entitled, "After The Dance Is Over," produced and professionally presented by Mesdames Margaret Reid, Dorothy Barrett, Marie Bell, Lou Scafton, Muriel Doran, Betty Flemming and Mary Pat Keeley.

Mesdames Liz McLellan, Anita Canty and Reggie Salonen were in charge of the Christmas tree and exchange of gifts. The spirit of the season was further enhanced by the tea table with colorful Christmas cloth, silver caretakers and a lovely centrepiece of red and white mums which was won by Mrs. Lou Scafton.

The ladies were offered a variety of dainty sandwiches and tasty cakes and cookies by Mesdames Mary Bankey, Helena Clarke and Irene Kennedy.

A Christmas cheque was presented to the director, Rev. J. J. Buckley, who thanked the ladies for their kindness, their co-operation and work during the year.

Mrs. W. Meagher and Mrs. F. Maund reported great success with the sale of their no-bake cook book. They still have a few copies on hand if anyone would like more.

Mrs. R. Konders will deliver the Christmas baskets in the parish.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three women and a woman's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers

Mrs. A. S. — I was happy in Florida and want to return there.

June S. V. — She should stay up here near her children.

Mrs. A. S.: I'm 68 years old and a widow. For the past five years I lived and worked in Florida. A few months ago I fell ill and came north to recuperate. I took a room near my married children, a son and a daughter.

Now that I'm fully recovered I'd like to go back, but my daughter won't hear of it. She doesn't understand how unhappy I am up here. Down there I felt better in general. I'm not afraid to venture out on the streets in the winter the way I am here. I can come and go alone, without depending on anyone.

My life would be much simpler in Florida. But every time I mention this, my daughter makes me feel like a deserter. My son wants me to do as I wish. Who's right?

June S. V.: There's no good reason why my mother should run 1,000 miles from her family. It would be different if she had no comfortable place to stay here, or if she had to have her Florida job to support herself. But my brother and I each have room for her, and if she doesn't want to stay with us, she has enough income from Dad's insurance and savings to maintain herself in a nearby apartment.

The only reason my brother encourages Mama to leave is he knows it won't be up to him to run down there and take care of her if anything happens. It'll be up to me. And I'd rather have her here where I can keep tabs on her health and prevent any long-distance SOS's.

Regardless of Mama's whims and fancies, it seems to me a mother's place is near her family. At such a distance, she'll be a stranger to her grandchildren, and the family circle will be broken.

The Council: June should face the fact that there comes a time in Mama's life when she's entitled to pursue her whims and fancies." In dashing cold water on Mrs. S.'s brave plans to go it alone, her daughter seems to be thinking more of her own needs.

Mrs. S. seems to be the type of mother who attended to all the musts of life conscientiously and now wants to turn to the "should-likes." While her health holds up, this is her right and June should send her off with a smile, a corsage and a bottle of champagne. The cloud of unwelcome illness — which can shadow any of us anywhere — is irrelevant.

Can it be that June will miss a free and indulgent babysitter? A sounding board? A cushioning shoulder to weep on? These are not valid reasons for depriving Mrs. S. of the comfort of easy-to-take climate, the freedom of coming and going without comment or reproach or complaint, the sense of self-sufficiency.

As to estrangement from the grandchildren and the gap in the family circle, there are always visits to look forward to, and midpoint rendezvous where Mrs. S. and her children spill the miles, age 30-500 and meet somewhere interesting.

However, we suggest that Mrs. S. examine her true reasons for not just picking up and going, regardless of what her daughter says. Does she really want to go? Is she fishing for reassurance, or rather excuses for not going, to make it look as though she's being restrained from doing something she doesn't want to do anyway? If she wholeheartedly wants to go, we advise her to do so and continue the discussion with June, from Florida!

Madoc W.M.S. Elects 1961 Officers

MADOC — Members and visitors of Trinity United W.M.S. and Women's Association held their annual union meeting in the church parlors on Wednesday afternoon.

W.M.S. president Miss Annie Holmes took charge and chose for opening, "A Word Picture of the Birth of Christ," with Mrs. Estey playing the familiar music, "Star of the East," and Miss Holes using a brief candlelight service.

Mrs. Albert Bailey gave a reading, "Could You Spare Five Minutes for Christmas." Prayer was given for the missionary, Miss B. French of "All People's Church," Hamilton. Mrs. O. B. Jackson closed the worship service.

BUSINESS PERIOD

Money was voted for the purchase of cards for Sunday School Christmas concert by the Women's Association.

Mrs. A. Adams contributed a solo, "The Holy City" and Christmas readings were given by Mrs. R. C. Jackson, Mrs. Joe Ashe and Mrs. W. McCoy. Conference of worthwhile meeting a pleasant half hour was enjoyed with the ladies serving afternoon tea and sandwiches.

HOW DO YOU LEAVE A PARTY?

Several readers have written in asking if I suggest "any rules" for those guests who, after they make a move to leave a party, keep everyone standing at the front door while they chatter about things they forgot to tell you during the evening."

Meanwhile, the house-and-you get thoroughly chilled.

We have all had this experience, and I for that sense of our best friends, and we ourselves, at times are guilty of this very inconsiderate habit.

After an enjoyable evening with friends with whom you are at complete ease, it is easy to have so much to talk about that, when the times comes to go, lots of things are left over that you want to discuss. Wait until another time! Nothing is worse than an anticlimax. When you get on your feet to go, go! Standing around, offering long-winded farewells, keeping others standing too, can spoil the ending of any evening, no matter how fine the rest of the evening has been.

Ask one reader suggested it. He "wishes these hangers-on either would sit down again, or go, preferably the latter!" As you can see, a heedless is of direction of mind is that alternate. There's a natural satisfaction that host guests have enjoyed themselves so much that they can't tear themselves away. At the same time, there's complete frustration as to how to get rid of those who have overstayed their welcome.

How to get them moving? Be politely frank (if there is such a thing). Say, as politely as you can, "We're terribly sorry, but we have to get up very early in the morning, and it is getting late. Then, too, it is pretty chilly standing here." Another approach (though you are taking a chance here) is to invite them to come back in and sit down. Maybe they will, but usually it works. They take their departure.

King George H-S Presents 'Varity Night'

Christmas "Variety Night" was held by the King George Home and School Association on the evening of December 19th in the school auditorium. The program opened with a welcoming poem recited by Miss Barbara Kirkham.

Mr. Ronald Lee acted as master of ceremonies for the evening and introduced the various acts. Many piano solos were rendered along with exhibitions of baton twirling, acrobatics, tap dancing, waltzing and guitar solos. An accordion solo was played by Miss Jane Aakley, and a lively skit, under the direction of Mrs. Burtt, was presented by a few of the students.

A nativity play was enacted under the direction of Mrs. Burtt, Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Downes. Mrs. Burtt, "The Twelve Days of Christmas" was sung by 12 pretty maidens and the program closed with a recitation of "Christ's Christmas Story" by Miss Nettie Easton.

A presentation was made by Mrs. Scott to Mr. R. Moorcroft in honor of his forthcoming marriage. Mr. Comm, school janitor, was presented with a Christmas gift, and thanked for his help at Downes, Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Burtt, and Home and School meetings.

Mrs. Scott extended her thanks to all the teachers for a most enjoyable evening, and particularly to Mrs. E. Burtt, who accompanied many of the numbers on the piano.

Homemade candy and soft drinks were sold and refreshments were served to the students participating in the program.

Sweets To Make At Home

By Mary Moore

The smooth texture that marshmallows impart to many dishes has much in its favor.

This smoothness has been used to advantage in making a Christmas fudge. The fudge turns out as smooth as velvet and can be made by rank amateurs and perennial fudge lowers. If moulded in thick slabs it may be used for Christmas gifts gaily wrapped in red cellophane.

FOOLPROOF CHRISTMAS FUDGE:

1 2-3 cups granulated sugar, 2-3 cups evaporated milk (a little less than a 6-oz. can holds), 1 1-2 cups miniature marshmallows, 1 1-2 cups semi-sweet chocolate chips, 1-3 cup whole blanched almonds, 1-3 cup halved green candied cherries, 1-3 cup halved red candied cherries, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-4 teaspoon salt.

In a large saucepan combine the sugar and evaporated milk. Bring to boil and boil 5 minutes exactly, stirring frequently. Remove from heat and add marshmallows and stir until dissolved. Add all remaining ingredients and stir until blended. Have ready a buttered dish 10 x 6 1-2" or 9" glass pie plate. (Note: This size results in fudge 1-2" thick.) Pour fudge in, quickly smooth top, and chill. Cut in 1" squares to serve. Note 2: This fudge freezes excellently after it is well cooled. If you freeze it cut it into squares for serving, arrange on greased aluminum or stiff paper plates. Cover carefully and completely with foil and saran and freeze. Note 3: Cherries may be omitted. If so, nuts should be increased to 1-2 cup and chopped walnuts may be used instead of almonds.

Dinner Menus

WEDNESDAY (Guests)

Cranberry Juice Cocktail; Baked Back Bacon; Raisin Sauce; Baked Jacket Potatoes; Fresh Frozen Green Peas; Blueberry Cobbler; Pouring Cream; Coffee.

STUFFED DATES NO. 1:

Make a cut the entire length of choice table dates and remove stones. Fill cavities with pecans or English walnuts, and shape in original form. Roll in granulated sugar. Pile in rows on a small plate covered with a doily.

STUFFED DATES NO. 2:

Remove stones from dates and fill cavities with cream cheese or canton ginger or fondant (see below) and roll in finely chopped nuts.

FONDANT (uncooked):

2 3-4 tablespoons soft butter or margarine, 2 3-4 tablespoons corn syrup, 1 3-4 cups sifted icing sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla.

Blend butter, corn syrup, salt and vanilla in large mixing bowl. Add sifted icing sugar, all at once. Mix altogether, first with a spoon and then with hands, kneading in dry ingredients. Turn onto board and continue kneading until mixture is well blended and smooth. Store well covered in a cool place to ripen for 24 hours.

Christmas Concert

WHITE'S DISTRICT S.S.

WHITE'S DISTRICT — White's Church Sunday School held its annual Christmas concert on Friday evening with a good attendance of children and parents.

The Bayside Guides and Brownies and the Sunday School pupils were on stage for the opening chorus. Miss Kathy Jones welcomed all by singing "We're Glad You're Here."

FINE PROGRAM

A fine program was presented by the Bayside Brownies and Guides under the leadership of the District Commissioner Mrs. George Caves. Guide Captain Mrs. Jack Glydon and Brown Owl Mrs. Clifford Miller and Tawny Owls Mrs. George Colpien and Mrs. Betty Fulton. Much credit for the success of the concert goes to Mrs. Caves, who was pianist throughout, and to the other officers who assisted.

Following the "manger scene," the teachers of the Sunday School presented each pupil with a gift.

The attendance awards were presented. Mrs. Eric Jones, kindergarten teacher, presented Kenneth Pelletier and Carol Anne Howe with gifts. Mrs. Albert Jones, primary teacher, presented Katherine Jones and Ian McDonald each with a "Lord's Prayer" plaque; Mrs. Jack Glydon, junior girls' teacher, presented Wendy Jones, with a "Ten Commandments" bracelet; Mr. Robert Van Allen, teacher of the junior boys, presented Danny Stickle with a "Lord's Prayer" plaque, and Mrs. Lorne Hunt, teacher of the intermediate girls and boys, presented Brenda Yeaman with a "Tree" bracelet and Larry Silbarn with a "Lord's Prayer" plaque.

The superintendent, Mrs. Albert Jones presented Mrs. George Caves with an ear-ring and brooch set on behalf of the Sunday School. Mrs. Lorne Hunt, on behalf of the Sunday School, presented Mrs. Albert Jones with an ear-ring and brooch set.

A letter was read from the Fred Victor Mission in Toronto, thanking the Sunday School for "while gifts" received.

While all sang, "Here Comes Santa Claus," he arrived with bags of candy for all, and the presents were distributed from the gaily-decorated tree by Santa and his helpers.

WANT CLOCK SILENCED LONDON (AP)—The ministry of works was asked Tuesday to silence famous Big Ben, bell of the Westminster Palace clock, from midnight to 6 a.m. daily.

Stupid Spot, a Conservative member of the House of Commons, said the bell's clanging, every 15 minutes, seriously disturbs patients of nearby St. Thomas Hospital.

Silver Anniversaries Marked By Approximately 100 Guests

The Wallbridge Hall was appropriately decorated with pink and white streamers and bells on the evening of December 10th on the occasion of the silver wedding anniversaries of Mr. and Mrs. John Kingston and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Cassidy.

About 100 guests from Trenton, Foxboro, Belleville, Shannonbeam, Frankford and Harrowsmith were greeted by the honored couples. Mrs. Kingston received her guests wearing blue satin brocade, with a corsage of white carnations and silver bows, while Mrs. Cassidy wore a purple nylon sheer dress with yellow carnation and silver bow. The bridesmaids assisted each wearing a carnation boutonniere.

The bridegrooms are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kingston and the late Charles Cassidy and Mrs. Robert Blair. The Kingstons have four boys, Douglas, who is married and living in Belleville, and Charles, Bert and Dave at home. The Cassidys have three girls (Pauline), Mrs. Gordon Sarsfield, of Foxboro; and twins Donna and Mona, living at home and two sons, Allan, married of Belleville, and Kenneth at home. The Kingstons have one grandson, while the Cassidys have two grandsons and one granddaughter.

After all the guests had arrived euchre was played followed by an hour of dancing. The honored couples danced the first dance and later on one of the bridegrooms, Clifford Cassidy, called the square dance.

The honored guests were seated at the front of the hall and best wishes were expressed by a brother of Mildred Kingston and Clifford Cassidy. Bert Cassidy, of Sydenham, acted as chairman.

The lovely gifts and greeting cards were displayed on a platform behind the head table.

Mildred and John, Laura and Clifford voiced appreciative thanks to all for the party and the gifts. The mothers also were called on to speak and each expressed their happiness to be able to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversaries with them.

The attendants of the Kingston couple were Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brenton and of the Cassidys the former Marion Kingston, (Mrs. Frank Phillips), were present at the head table. Unfortunately, Mr. Earl Cassidy of Toronto was unable to be in attendance.

John is an engineer on the CNR, his three sisters, Laura, Mrs. Clifford Cassidy, of Foxboro, Margaret, Mrs. Bart Hinchcliffe of Wallbridge, Marion, Mrs. Frank Phillips, of Frankford. His two brothers are Howard, of Harrowsmith, and Ken of Foxboro. Clifford owns a 150 acre farm at Foxboro and has three sisters, Mildred, Mrs. John Kingston, Belleville; Helen Mrs. George Ankers of Sydenham: Hazel, Mrs. Garfield Terry of Toronto and four brothers Earl of Toronto, Cleburn of Wellington, Roy of Trenton and Bert of Sydenham.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tier anniversary cake, decorated in pink and white with nylon bells placed around the bottom. Pots of chrysanthemums were used for decoration.

A buffet luncheon was served and flash pictures taken throughout the evening.

Corporation Tax Laws Will Be Made Easier

OTTAWA (CP) — Corporation tax laws will be made easier for firms building new plants in areas of chronic unemployment and for the manufacturing of new Canadian products, Finance Minister Fleming announced Tuesday night.

It is believed to be the first time that federal tax law will provide special relief for geographical areas and for specific lines of business.

Starting Jan. 1, the government will issue certificates to manufacturers of new products, and to manufacturers establishing plants in depressed areas, permitting them to write off twice the normal amount of their capital investment for taxation purposes.

At present, depreciation write-offs permitted by the revenue department in corporation tax bills range from six per cent a year to as high as 45 per cent for aircraft plants and 100 per cent for small tool manufacturers. The largest group, manufacturers of goods not otherwise listed in the 18 classes, are allowed to write off 20 per cent of their capital investment each year.

Under the new plan, for the first, second or third year of operation, a new plant may write off double the normal amount of depreciation.

NEW FEATURE

This new feature of Canadian tax law will apply in three cases:

1. To assist new industries in areas where there has been a unemployment over the years.

2. To aid in the development of new products from processing operations not hitherto carried on in Canada.

3. To encourage the production of new types of goods.

The cabinet will designate the areas of chronic unemployment in which the new tax relief will apply and Trade Minister Hees will announce later the procedure by which manufacturers can apply for the special write-offs.

The Maritime provinces are expected to be among the first designated areas. Some products which may be affected are rust-resistant steel impregnated with uranium and automatic automobile gear-shifts, not made in Canada.

Mr. Fleming said that Canadian tax law already permits generous write - offs for capital equipment and the new provisions are primarily designed to overcome unemployment.

ANOTHER OBJECTIVE

"Another of the objectives of the government is to achieve a greater measure of industrial processing in Canada of our own raw materials and natural resources.

"There is a widespread belief that industries in various fields are on the verge of expanding into new fields of endeavor. I fully share this optimism about the capabilities of Canadian industry. I am anxious to do everything within our means to encourage initiative and enterprise."

The new plan will apply to firms undertaking new projects during 1961 and 1962.

WON'T SHUT UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Explorer VII, the U.S. satellite that refuses to shut up, may well go on "braying like a donkey" for years to come, space agency officials said Tuesday. The 214-pound sphere, launched Oct. 13, 1959, was supposed to have its radio cut off automatically by a timing devile a year later so its radio frequency (30 megacycles) would be released for use by future satellites but it still chatters in its high-pitched voice.

Govt. Acts to Stop Imports Beating Tariff Protection Given Canadian Producers

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has acted to stop imports from escaping the tariff protection afforded Canadian producers, Finance Minister Fleming announced Thursday night.

His budget speech proposed to call "its halt by defining for the first time in the customs tariff act imports which are of a "class and kind" made in Canada and thus subject to higher tariff rates.

In addition custom-made imports will no longer qualify for lower tariff rates if Canada has adequate facilities for commercial production of such goods within a reasonable time.

By putting this definition into law the government is taking a new look at several hundred million dollars worth of imports to decide which should be assessed higher tariffs.

The range of products includes most of Canada's imports of machinery, manufactured iron and steel items, such as auto parts, and chemicals. The United States supplies about two-thirds of them with Britain and West Germany shipping most, though substantial quantities.

In addition to this major step, the government has asked the tariff board to examine the 10 per cent tariffs on oil seeds and vegetable oils in the wake of pressure from soya-bean and rapeseed growers for greater protection.

These oils are important ingredients in making margarine, as cooking and table oils and in the manufacture of paints and varnishes. Canada imports about $100,000,000 worth annually, with exports about $985,000,000 worth.

The tariff is to be so far as targed to seven members from time and provision is to be made for it to speed modernization of the tariff structure.

In outlining the proposals to define imports that are of a class and kind made in Canada Mr. Fleming said Parliament originally intended that the lower tariff rate apply only to goods "not directly and closely competitive with those produced in Canada."

Until 1950 that was the interpretation used but since then "the effect has been to enable to some extent the protection afforded to Canadian producers."

Until now, customs officers have decided whether goods are of a class or kind made in Canada, with the tariff board ruling on disputed cases.

Starting today, the customs officers will apply the terms of the new section as a test in settling the duty. It states that goods shall be deemed to be of a class and kind made in Canada if "goods of approximately the same class or kind are made or produced in Canada."

If he decides that approximately the same kind is produced in Canada he may apply the higher tariff.

The first he must use another test, which has been in effect since 1958 on certain goods. This test also is being written into the law.

It states that goods which aren't custom - made "shall be deemed to be of a class or kind made or produced in Canada if goods of the normal Canadian commercial practice are made or produced in Canada."

Where the imports are customs-made, the buyer's specifications, the customs officer must determine whether adequate facilities exist in Canada for the economic production of such goods "within a reasonable period of time."

If he decides there are such facilities, the higher tariff is applied.

The revenue minister's rulings are final on the question of whether goods are for consumption, whether goods are customs-made and whether facilities exist in Canada for economic production within a reasonable time.

Exchange Bonus On Dollar May Decline

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming indicated Tuesday night he anticipates a decline in the exchange premium on the Canadian dollar will result from his budget plans.

He told a press conference after his budget speech that he expects the budget will lead to a reduction in bond borrowing by provincial and municipalities in the New York market.

Since this borrowing has been one of the factors behind the exchange premium on the Canadian dollar, he said, he expects the budget to "have an effect on the rate."

"We don't like the premium on the Canadian dollar," he said.

"We have wished that provinces and municipalities wouldn't go to the U.S. to borrow."

In his budget speech he noted the unfavorable effect of the premium in making Canadian exports more expensive and imports cheaper.

The budget change which Mr. Fleming expects will reduce Canadian borrowing in the U.S. is one which imposes a 15 per cent from five the withholding tax levied on most payments to foreign lenders in post-budget bond issues. Where the tax is payable in foreign currency, as it most provincial borrowing in the U.S., the tax is boosted to 15 per cent from zero.

"I hope the provinces will see that what we have done is in the best interests as well as the interests of the whole country," Mr. Fleming said.

He apparently was referring to the dangers of Canadian borrowers repaying American bond issues at a time when the U.S. dollar costs more than when the loan was made.

The premium on the Canadian dollar, in terms of the U.S. dollar, was as high as $1.05½ last March and as low as about $1.03 in May. Tuesday the dollar was quoted at a fraction under $1.02 in U.S. funds.

The effect of his first acts after delivering his budget speech was to notify Bank of Canada Governor Robert Anderson of a tax change which affects direct U.S. capital investments in Canada.

The requirements of pre-budget secrecy, he said, prevented him from giving the U.S. government advance notice.

He said he telephoned Mr. Anderson after his budget speech. Mr. Anderson made no comment.

The phone call was to tell about the change in government's unilateral action in boosting to 15 per cent from five the withholding tax on dividends paid by Canadian subsidiary to its controlling American parent company. A Canada-U.S. tax agreement provides for such unilateral action.

Asked what he expects U.S. reaction will be to his budget, Mr. Fleming said:

"I would think the United States will be interested in seeing how we are meeting our problems here, especially problems common to both countries."

Fleming Declined to Play Santa Role But No Scrooge

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming had a satchelful of Christmas cash for Canada's businessmen.

For nearly all other Canadian taxpayers, he declined to play the role of Santa Claus. Happily, he also forswore the part of Scrooge.

In his tandem budget—the first instalment arrived last March—Mr. Fleming imposed no new taxes on personal income, liquor or tobacco or any new sales or excise taxes. He didn't cut any of these taxes, either.

His major tax changes were those all confined to the business world—and it may require a company lawyer in some cases to figure them out.

The general import of these changes is to encourage Canada and for Canadian business.

Some tax privileges enjoyed many years by foreign, especially American, corporations and investors in Canada are being removed. For instance, the principal new dividend withholding taxes are being brought to a uniform level of 15 per cent. This is one which interest-bond investholders will pay the full 15-per-cent withholding tax on dividends from investments in Canada.

The profits of Canadian branches of non-resident corporations will be subject to a special 15-per-cent tax.

The big gain for Canadian businesses—especially small businesses—is that the normal 21-per-cent tax will apply on the first $35,000 taxable income instead of the first $25,000. Up to now, a 50-per-cent tax rate has started after the first $25,000.

Some 55,000 of the 62,000 Canadian corporations have incomes below $35,000 a year. They account for about 15 per cent of profits of Canadian corporations.

Double depreciation will be allowed for one year for capital outlay by new industries established in areas where unemployment is particularly bad.

The same benefit will go to companies which produce new types of goods, in any area.

The only class of citizen picked out for personal-income reductions is the university student. He will be able next year to deduct tuition fees when computing income tax. The deduction will also apply to a parent claiming a student as a dependent.

If the student taxpayer is looking for any gifts, he'll have to look under his own Christmas tree.

Canadians Urged to Invest More of Savings in Industry

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming Tuesday suggested that more Canadians start encouraging Canadians to invest more of their savings in Canadian industry.

He removed the four-per-cent surtax on investment income derived from Canadian sources. The loss in revenue would be only $11,000,000 a year and the surtax tended to discourage Canadians from investing in Canadian business, he said.

The surtax was applied to all investment income except property rentals.

He also announced new restrictions on the investment policies of mutual funds and mutual investment funds.

Administrators of pension funds who invest pension money primarily are in gilt-edged securities such as government bonds, pay no profits tax on their operations.

Their investments now will be required to return 90 per cent of their income from Canadian sources. To bring the new policy into effect gradually, they will have to get 70 per cent of their income from Canadian sources in 1961, 80 per cent in 1962, and 90 per cent thereafter.

The mutual investment funds, now pay corporation taxes as investment companies. An investment company must derive 90 per cent of its income from investments in shares, bonds and marketable securities.

Mr. Fleming has been no limitation on the geographical source of the income for mutual funds, but Mr. Fleming announced that to enjoy the lower rate of corporation tax the mutual funds must have 75 per cent of their income coming from Canadian investments.

To bring the policy into effect gradually for the mutual funds, 55 per cent of their income must be Canadian in 1961, 65 per cent Canadian in 1962, and 75 per cent Canadian thereafter.

To qualified as an investment company, a mutual fund pays taxes at the rate of 21 per cent of profits. Other firms pay 50 per cent of their profits over $35,000 a year, effective Jan. 1.

Mr. Fleming said the pension and mutual funds govern the largest flow of individual savings into the ownership of Canadian industry.

The assets of Canadian pension funds now exceed $4,000,000,000 and are increasing at the rate of $300,000,000 a year.

No information was available on the amount of money investment funds and pension plans would have to switch to Canadian from foreign securities.

NAMES NEW SENATOR

Fleming Plugs Tax Leakage In New Budget

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming has moved—effective immediately—to plug what he calls a tax - law loophole through which provinces and others in like boundaries to evade the income tax payable on all bond interest.

It will apply income tax to gains in capital value of high-discount bonds or debentures issued by provinces, municipalities, school districts or charitable organizations—all non - taxable entities.

Thus, these issues offered at high discount will be less attractive to high-income investors who have been specializing in such issues, Mr. Fleming said.

Bond interest is taxable; he told the Commons in his budget speech, but "unfortunately increasing use is being made de-liberately of a device to provide bondholders the equivalent of interest in a form that is tax free."

For example, a borrower might issue a one-year $100 bond at par —a discount of $4—and a coupon interest rate of one per cent.

The discount and interest amounted to a yield of four per cent on investment but it had been found difficult to collect tax on more than the interest.

Mr. Fleming said the trouble lay in the difference between taxable and non-taxable borrowers like provinces.

Henceforth this will be the situation for tax - exempt borrowers:

If a bond issue bearing coupon interest below five per cent is sold at a discount which makes the effective yield to maturity more than one-third higher than the coupon rate, then the entire discount is classed as interest income for the first Canadian holder.

Mike looked again. "Were all those his brothers and sisters?" he asked.

"Some were cousins," John laughed. "Dad used to tell us he'd had twice as many sisters and cousins as did his brothers, but his eldest sister had exactly five times as many cousins and brothers as she had sisters."

Quite a family! How many brothers and sisters must John's father have had?

Possibility of Long Range Drop in Consumer Prices Seen in Fleming Budget

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadians expecting tax cuts as a Christmas gift in Finance Minister Fleming's new budget got a long-range alternative instead — the hope that by Christmas of 1961 they may be able to buy better quality goods at unchanged or lower prices.

Mr. Fleming told reporters Tuesday night after presenting his baby budget to the Commons that he could not see much hope for immediate price cuts in consumer goods arising out of his corporation tax changes.

He left open the possibilities for the long-range future.

The budget is designed to encourage Canadian industry to expand. With expansion and creation of new industries, particularly in areas of chronic unemployment, they could expect that improved productivity will result in Canadian industry being able to produce more and better goods during more and better goods at unchanged or lower prices.

CHANGES BRACKET

Particularly affected are firms in the lower middle income bracket, with taxable profits in the $25,000 to $35,000 a year range. They have been put in a lower tax bracket.

After Jan. 1 the 21-per-cent tax on corporations will apply on profits up to $35,000 instead of $25,000 as now, with the 50-per-cent tax on the corresponding after $35,000 instead of the lower figure as at present.

That means little of the big corporation. It amounts to relief of $1,400 a year for the small owner of one junior employee for the big company.

But the medium-small corporation whose profits have been $25,000 or more will benefit. Figure, it is an encouragement to expand, knowing that another $10,000 profit can be made without incurring the stiff 50 - per-cent tax rate.

Mr. Fleming said in his budget speech that if the new measures would be affected, and that only 7,000 now remain in the higher bracket of income, the effected firms contribute 15 per cent to total corporation profits.

A feature of the budget is the accelerated depreciation to be allowed on the capital investment of new firms in chronically-depressed areas and those locating on new Canadian production lines-rials.

MAT BE HEADACHE

In this, Mr. Fleming may have given his accountants a headache, a major political headache.

They must decide what areas or individual communities should be designated as chronically un-

2 Youths Given Total of Eight Years in Prison

KINGSTON (CP)—Two youths were sentenced Tuesday to a total of eight years imprisonment in the kidnapping of two women and the armed robbery of more than $2,000 from a bank at Verona.

Brent Mavety, 21, was given six years in penitentiary on two charges of armed robbery and two of armed robbery. Stanley Davis, 22, was sentenced to two years less a day in reformatory on one kidnapping count and two armed robbery charges.

The youths, both from Lansdowne, had pleaded guilty to the charges.

The robbery and kidnappings occurred Dec. 2.

Testifying Mrs. W. F. Cronin, wife of a Kingston bank manager, at a Kingston parking lot and forced her into her car for the ride to Verona, 20 miles northeast.

At Verona, he and Davis held up a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada and fled with $17,000. They also took bank teller Shirley Akey as a hostage.

The two women were found later, locked in the trunk of Mrs. Cronin's abandoned car. Neither had been harmed.

All the was recovered.

PLANS TO RESIGN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Thurston B. Morton said Tuesday he plans to resign as Republican national chairman effective Jan. 1. The politician senator from Kentucky has held the post since April 11, 1959, and directed its activities during the recent national elections.

Commission Given Opposing Views on Method of Building Robust Periodical Industry

OTTAWA (CP)—Suggestions for coping with American competition while preserving a robust periodicals industry tailored to Canadian tastes and needs ranged Tuesday from tariff protection to the quick club of government action.

Direct opposites in arguments before the royal commission on publications were Kenneth Johnstone of Monetary, writer of magazine articles, and K. L. Bowman of Ottawa, Canadian executive of a firm that publishes reference books.

Mr. Johnstone told the three-man commission headed by M. Grattan O'Leary, president of the Ottawa Journal, that he has a high regard for many Canadian periodicals—but that his respect falls flat when confronted by Time magazine and the Reader's Digest.

In his background remarks, Mr. Johnstone identified himself as a former Time employee in London, England, as a part-time contributor and on staff, from 1954 to 1958, when he felt "it was time for me to leave Time."

Both Time and Reader's Digest publish "Canadian editions" which pursue advertising revenue in Canada. Canadian publishers say the editions are far from Canadian, and that the two magazines have an unfair advantage because most of their costs are incurred by their world-ranging parents.

Said Mr. Johnstone, arguing that genuinely Canadian periodicals must be maintained if Canada is to preserve its national identity:

"If I were in a position to determine Canadian policy on the entrance of American magazines into the Canadian markets, I would propose the simple and startling if illegal fee magazines whose head offices are outside of Canada to accept advertising from Canadian companies."

He said distortion of the facts is common in Time and that the magazine is helping engulf Canada in a flood of words presenting a point of view which seems to be becoming more and more alien to Canadians.

"... I have come to consider it and its sister publications among the most subversive forces coming into Canada. It seems ironic to me that Canadian advertising revenue should subsidize the spreading of a point of view which I consider inimical to Canada's best interests."

The Time viewpoint was the viewpoint of one section—"I hope a minority"—of the Republican party of the United States.

Mr. Brown, executive editor of the Encyclopedia Canadiana, publication of the Grolier Society of Canada Limited, a subsidiary of Grolier Incorporated, New York, said Canadians should work out a "reciprocal arrangement" with American publishers aimed at strengthening Canadian periodical press instead of trying to stifle foreign competition.

"I do not believe that we gain in stature as a nation by placing an embargo on knowledge of any sort, written and produced anywhere," he said. "... It is possible and feasible, too, to promote relationships with American publishers that would indeed help make our printing and allied industries expand more rapidly."

Mr. Brown said the big Canadian publishers do require might be help through the formation of a permanent government body whose main task would be to help develop, but not control editorially in any way, a strong publishing industry in Canada.

Commented George Johnston, chairman and founding editor of publications firm and a member of the royal commission: "Surely to goodness we've got enough government bodies now."

Mr. Brown said his suggested government committee might, for example, "undertake a market analysis research service to investigate potential markets for many different types of publications. There were many other possibilities."

"The proposed committee might make, as one of its goals the successful encouragement of publishers of foreign magazines and other printed media, to make more use of Canadian artists, writers and editorial advisers and it might find ways and means to encourage American publishers with a large distribution in this country, to print a part of their publications in Canada."

budget levies a special 15-per-cent tax on profits of unincorporated Canadian branches of foreign firms. This becomes effective after Jan. 1.

Mr. Fleming said he expects many of these branch plants will become incorporated in Canada.

The tax increases will bring an estimated $50,000,000 annually into the federal treasury, and $14,000,000 in the current fiscal year ending next March 31.

The minister made clear, however, that he was more interested in the economic effects of the new policy than in the added revenues.

He did not say whether he expects any reduction in the flow of direct foreign investment into foreign-controlled Canadian subsidiaries. This amounted to $500,000,000 in 1959—three-quarters of it is from the U.S.

But he said he expects Canadian bond borrowings abroad will be reduced. Last year provinces and municipalities floated $607,000,000 in new bond issues in the U.S.

Too-heavy inflows of capital, he said, put upward pressure on the exchange value of the Canadian dollar, thus encouraging imports, discouraging exports and increasing Canada's international payments deficit.

In certain circumstances, he said, capital imports can "aggravate an existing unemployment situation."

Government statistics show that last year $656,000,000 was paid to other countries in interest and dividends to service foreign investment in Canada. Of this, $337,000,000 went to the U.S.

More than three-quarters of the dividend payments went from Canadian subsidiaries to their controlling foreign parents. These are the payments directly affected by the budget changes.

There is no change in the withholding tax on dividends paid to foreign investors, holding less than 50-per-cent ownership in Canadian firms.

The idea of the tax has been to put foreign investors in roughly the same position as Canadians who must pay income tax on their investments in Canadian stocks and bonds.

Mr. Fleming said Canada has had great benefits from the inflow of foreign capital. It was not the government's view that foreign capital was unwelcome and should be sharply curtailed. This would produce "a little Canada," he has added.

"At this stage of our national development, it is appropriate to withdraw some of the special incentives which were designed in past years to attract foreign capital.

"As a result of such special concessions, non-residents profiting from investments in Canada do not always bear their fair share of the general costs of government and administration, although they benefit in full measure from them."

The special concessions were being withdrawn "in the interests of financial equilibrium with the outside world."

The increase in withholding tax for foreign investors will work this way:

A Canadian company, majority control in which is held by an American parent firm, transfers $1,000,000 in dividends to the parent. Of this, $130,000 will go to the federal treasury instead of $50,000 as in the past. This is on top of the regular corporation income tax.

The same increase in withholding tax to 15 per cent from five will apply to Canadian subsidiaries wholly owned by a foreign parent.

If a subsidiary's profits are retained in Canada and re-invested, the withholding tax does not apply.

Mr. Fleming said his goal is to apply a uniform 15-per-cent tax on all transfers of profits from Canadian firms to foreign shareholders.

It was "unnecessary and undesirable" that a preferential low rate should be allowed a foreign firm on condition that it holds a large degree of ownership in the Canadian subsidiary.

In applying the new 15-per-cent tax to Canadian branches of foreign firms, Mr. Fleming did not specify what advantages they might get from incorporating as Canadian companies.

But he said that if the tax weren't imposed, foreign parents could withdraw profits from their Canadian branch plants without incurring the same kind of taxes being applied to dividend payments by Canadian subsidiaries.

Taxation Experts Are Wary About Any Hasty Judgments About Effect of New Budget

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Taxation experts and accountants were torn from their Christmas shopping today to figure out what Tuesday night's budget means to their employers.

Few would hazard comment until the paper work is done and approval or disapproval, so far as it was given, was mostly confined to general propositions.

J. C. Whitelaw, general manager of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said the budget's principal significance is that it recognizes the imperative need to afford some added and immediate incentives to Canadian industry. He added:

"Inevitably, there will be those who think the finance minister has not gone far enough, but at least he has taken a step in the right direction and, in these days that's something."

CLC COMMENTS

Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, commented that the federal government failed to tackle the basic problem of promoting a better market for Canadian goods in Canada. This, he said, "is what is needed to provide jobs and reduce unemployment."

He said it is "a great disappointment" that no relief is provided for individual taxpayers, but he welcomed "the idea of assisting smaller industries and allowing some additional exemptions to assist a limited number of students."

Eric W. Kierans, former economics professor now president of the Montreal Stock Exchange, said the budget cannot be expected to produce the economic growth Finance Minister Fleming wants.

Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia welcomed tax incentives to encourage industry to set up in under-developed areas.

The broader interpretation to be given to the section of the customs tariff dealing with goods of "a class or kind not made or produced in Canada" is good news to many manufacturers.

They considered past interpretations worked out of line with the original intentions of Parliament, and felt competitive goods were being allowed in at low rates just because their exact duplicates are not made here.

TRADES 'CONTENTIONS'

Rudy Usick, president of the Manitoba Farmers' Union, said, however:

"The government's trend towards higher tariffs is continuing. We cannot expect to increase grain sales to other countries by making it more difficult for them to sell goods to us."

While these comments dealt with the more obvious budget points, the real pencil work will be on the tax changes designed to encourage Canadian investment and withdraw some investment hitherto given to foreign capital.

Dr. A. M. McLeod, economist of the Toronto - Dominion Bank, described them as relatively mild measures that would have little effect on investment by Canadians. The budget would "do likely do much to reduce Canada's balance of - payments deficit.

British Columbia finance officials said the increase in the withholding tax on Canadian bonds owned by foreign investors will "effectively raise interest rates." They said the action will not prevent foreign borrowing, but it will cost more. At the same time, they expressed some doubt that the new provision can be enforced.

SEES HIGHER RATES

Frederick G. Gardiner, chairman of the council of Metropolitan Toronto, also felt the budget's effect would be to increase interest rates on municipal borrowing.

However, he said "Mr. Fleming is doing the best he can under difficult conditions."

G. Arthur Lascelles, Toronto metro finance commissioner, said there simply isn't enough money in circulation in Canada to satisfy all borrowers.

H. A. McMartin of Vancouver, president of B.C. division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, commented that if the budget tends to slow investment from the United States, business may also be slowed.

Speculation arose over the effect on investment funds of the requirement that they have a high percentage of Canadian investment to qualify for lower income tax rates.

MAY BE MINOR

At least one fund, with large investments in American securities, thought the effect would be minor. This source said these investments are for purposes of "diversity" and probably would not be switched because of a relatively small loss in return.

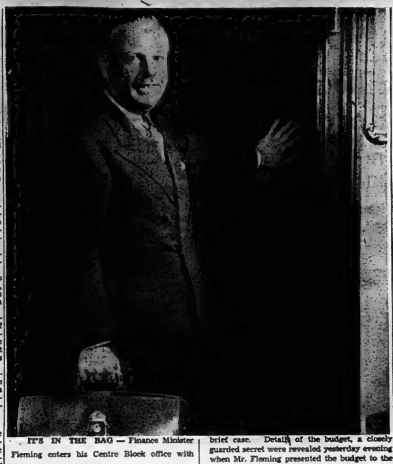
The effects of budget provisions on the earnings of American firms with subsidiaries in Canada were not immediately clear. Nor was the possible effect on Canadian firms with subsidiaries in the United States, if Canada-U.S. tax agreements were revised.

Karl E. Scott, president of Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, said he hopes the government is not passing legislation that will be detrimental to the advancement of Canadian companies controlled in other countries.

"At the moment I don't know what the implications of the budget will be for Ford," Mr. Scott said. "We are the only automotive company with Canadian stockholders having a 25-per-cent interest. I don't know whether the tax provisions will hold any implications in regard to expansion of our company in Canada."

RESIDE THE POINT

Ron W. Todgham, president of Chrysler Corporation of Canada Limited, said that whether the tax works to the detriment of foreign-controlled companies is beside the point.



"All that matters right now is the Canadian economy."

Mr. Todgham said he wished to study the budget further.

E. H. Walker, president of General Motors of Canada Limited, declined immediate comment.

Sweeney Finds NHL Tough To Enter

Has Brilliant Minor Record

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

High on the list of minor league players who wonder what they have to do to make the big time must be a slender, scintillating centre named Bill Sweeney.

Sweeney, 23, a native of Guelph, plays for Springfield Indians of the American Hockey League and is the property of the wallowing New York Rangers of the National League.

In three AHL seasons, the 165-pound playmaker has produced a brilliant record. He was named rookie of the year in 1957-58 after joining Springfield from Guelph Biltmore Juniors.

Last year he was voted centre on the first all-star team, scoring 37 assists and 59 assists for 96 points.

This year he is leading the league in scoring with 17 goals and 31 assists for 48. The Hill league total is 296 points on 116 goals and 180 assists.

BIG THEY AVOIDED HIM

So far he has appeared in only four NHL games. He was called up by the Rangers for the latter part season and, although he was used only irregularly, scored one goal.

With forwards Dean Prentice, Camille Henry and Brian Cullen out with injuries, Sweeney's prospects for getting a longer chance to prove himself in NHL play should be brightening, but the Rangers executive has bypassed him in their search for reinforcements so far.

General Manager Muzz Patrick called up centre Bob Kabel from Springfield and defenceman Dan Belisle from Vancouver Tuesday.

When Patrick was introducing coach Alf Pike to the press early last season, he talked about upcoming young players in the organization. Not once was he mentioned was Sweeney and he talked in glowing terms of the brilliant future the youngster would have in the NHL the next season.

MAYBE SIZE TO BLAME

Patrick never has shown anything for small players and he may consider sweeney too light to take the corner beatings in NHL hands out.

But with the Rangers showing themselves woefully weak down the centre, a sharp playmaker should seem a good prospect.

The Rangers, struggling to stay out of last place, will have a chance to evaluate their hroup tonight when they face the troubled Chicago Black Hawks.

The Hawks, after starting the season in the style most observers have expected, have been having a hard time getting a winning streak going and have dropped to fourth place. Seven points ahead of the Rangers who are only one ahead of Boston Bruins.

Jim Brown Gets Fourth Rush Crown

NEW YORK (AP)—The great Jimmy Brown of Cleveland Browns has earned the National Football League's rushing crown for the fourth straight time.

The ace fullback is the first four-time winner since Steve Van Buren of Philadelphia Eagles took the honors from 1945 to 1949.

League statistics released today show that Brown ended the 12 - game regular schedule last Sunday with a total of 1,257 yards in 235 carries for an average of 5.8 yards a carry.

Paul Hornung of Green Bay led the scorers with 176 points on 15 touchdowns, 41 converts without a miss and 15 field goals in 26 attempts. Hornung broke the record of 138 set by Don Hutson of Green Bay in 1943.

Royals Whip Kingston 5-3

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Royals came from behind with four unanswered third - period goals Tuesday night to defeat Kingston Frontenacs 5-3 for their first Eastern Professional Hockey League win at the Forum since Nov. 27.

Centre Reggie Gray scored the winning goal at 10:35 when he relayed Joe Sihra's knee-high pass past goaltender Ed Babiuk. Grigg also added the insurance marker at 16:40, again on Sihra's pass.

Rookie Wayne Connelly tied the game 3-3 at 6:42 after veteran centre Skippy Burchell notched the 100th goal of his career with the Royals.

George Gosselin scored twice and Randy Miller once for Frontenacs, in third place with 26 points. Guy Black scored the other goal for Royals, who remain in the cellar with 23 points.

Referee Bill Friday called six minor penalties, four to Kingston. Black's first - period goal game with Kingston shorthanded. Royals' goalie Jacques Cyr stopped 27 shots, Babiuk 28.

Top Spot at Stake

Belleville McFarlands have another key game on tap at Memorial Centre here tonight when they play host to the first-place Peterborough Canucks in an OHA fixture.

Tonight's game is of the utmost importance to the locals since all four of the OHA Eastern Conference clubs are in action. The Macs can be anywhere from a first-place tie to alone in fourth spot after tonight's games, that's how close the standing is at the present time.

Peterborough holds the top rung at the moment with 11 points, followed by Whitby with ten, Belleville with nine and Kingston with eight. Tonight's other games pits Whitby against Kingston in the Limestone City. Coach Gordie Bell will likely be minus two of his veteran defencemen for this game against the Canucks. Gary Goyer is taking treatment at the hospital for a leg injury that will keep him out of the last two games. Goyer says he feels like playing but the doctor has warned him that chest returning to the blades too early. Ron Hull was tied up with a Christmas job last Saturday and is also likely miss tonight's game too.

Bell will have his club gunning for their first win over the Peterborough club tonight. The clubs have met twice before, both games going into overtime, with the Canucks winning 5-4 in the first game and the clubs tying 3-3 in the other tilt.

And don't forget the big Christmas draw for a bicycle at the big game, as well as a draw for regular door prizes, and the Mac's Scooter Club's three-star selection.

Loch Lomand, 23 miles long and covering an area of more than 32 square miles, is the largest lake in Scotland.

Would Like Winter Games On Coast

VANCOUVER (CP)—John Taylor, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Vancouver-Quadra, is in favour of developing any of the four proposed British Columbia sites for the 1968 Winter Olympics would exceed $18,000,000.

A member of an informal federal Olympics committee, Mr. Taylor was questioned after he estimates given Friday for the B.C. sites of Grouse Mountain, Manning Park, Rossland and Fernie.

"The figures are rough to scare the people of Canada into being against the idea of hosting the Winter Olympics—if Canada was chosen as the host country."

Estimates ranging from $25,000,000 for Garibaldi to $5,000,000 for Fernie were given Friday following an announcement that a $10,000 federal grant will finance an engineering study to determine which Canadian site would be most suitable.

FITS OFF DECISION

NEW YORK (AP)—Sugar Ray Robinson said Tuesday he will not make a decision on his ring future until after Christmas. Promoter Norm Rothschild of Syracuse, N.Y., has contended Gainford, Robinson's manager, holds a fourth bout decision. Their meeting, two weeks ago, Fullmer and Robinson drew.

'Fit' Program Proposed By Kennedy

NEW YORK (AP) — A four-point program of physical fitness aimed at United States youth is proposed by President-elect Kennedy to be put in operation when his administration takes office Jan. 20.

In a copyrighted article in Sports Illustrated, Kennedy says a growing softness in Americans is a menace to our security as well as our ability to live up to the challenges which lie ahead.

He suggests: 1. Establishment of a White House committee on health and fitness, to carry out a program to improve the physical fitness of the country; 2. Basic physical fitness of youth under direct responsibility of the department of health, education and welfare; 3. Invite governors of every state to set up an annual national youth fitness conference; and 4. Proclaim through all government departments that promotion of sports participation and physical fitness is the basic and continuing policy of the U.S.

Eagles Want Dry Field

Van Brocklin Packers Big Threat

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP)—Green Bay Packers look on quarterback Norm Van Brocklin as a brilliant passer who functions as a coach on the football field.

So it is only logical that the Packers concentrate on building a defence against the Philadelphia Eagle star for their National Football League title game in Philadelphia next Monday. It will be Green Bay's first crack at the crown in 16 years.

"We've got to stop Van Brocklin and his passing to Tommy McDonald and Pete Retzlaff," Packer coach Vince Lombardi said Tuesday as he sent his men through a rugged drill on frozen turf.

Lombardi said that in addition to breaking up the overhead game directed by the brilliant passer who functions as a coach on the field," the Packers have to stop the Eagles' ground attack.

"The Eagles have shown mobility on the ground," he said. "Billy Barnes and rookie Ted Dean are not only excellent receivers but they are fast runners."

The game will be televised over the CBC's Dominion network starting at 11:45 a.m. EST.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Coach Buck Shaw of the Philadelphia Eagles said today he hopes for a dry field Monday in the National Football League title game against Green Bay because a muddy field would be advantageous to the Packers.

As he cast a long eye toward the weather, Shaw explained that a muddy field would give Green Bay the advantage "because of their over-all running and blocking."

While he conceded that the Eagles have never been a good blocking team, Shaw called the Packers "the best in the league."

"They play a pretty standard defence," Shaw said, "normally a 4-3 setup. When a team feels they're not capable they do a lot of crazy things defensively. But the Packers have a good, substantial defensive team and whatever they show you, they usually do. They don't start playing around such as Washington did against us last week."

The Tracks

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — A strike might close Santa Anita Race track Tuesday, the day after it opens its 1960-61 season.

"We're giving notice that we intend to strike," said Joseph Dettemerly, head of Local 280 of the Parimutuel Employees Guild.

Robert Strub, president of the Los Angeles Turf Club, said the union's "contract expires Sept. 16. There's a threat, but we have high hopes there will be no stoppage. We're going ahead with plans to open the season."

The strike would involve 425 workers.

The union has asked a raise of $1 a day over a three-year period, plus fringe benefits. The parimutuel sellers now average $27.50 a day, cashiers $30.50 and calculators $62.50.

Logan Bows To McNeeley

BOSTON (AP) — Heavyweight Tom McNeeley used mauling, battering tactics Tuesday night to gain his third victory over blood-stained George Logan in a unanimous 10 - round decision. McNeeley weighed 198 pounds, Logan 202.

Referee Rocky Marciano, former heavyweight champion, couldn't break up the pair until 15 seconds after the final bell had sounded. They continued to slug away at each other, unaware the fight was over.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Before the turn of the century, polite society included among its physical diversions a game called fat batting a ball across a net with something that resembled the offspring of an Alaskan sourdough's snowshoe.

The game proved popular. So much in fact that in 1900 two young men walked to the opposite sides of a tennis court in Brookline, Mass., and faced each other. One was an American, the other an Englishman.

This was the first match for the International Lawn Tennis Trophy which has come down to us known simply as the Davis Cup.

The first rally of those two young men started one of the outstanding international sports competitions of all time.

On Monday in Melbourne, Australia, global hotbed of tennis, a doughty youthful band of Italians face an experienced team of Davis Cup champions from the land of the kangaroo and "Waltzing Matilda," confident they can wrest the honored mug from its current holders, and take it back for the first time to the sunny slopes of the home of the olive, the pizza, chianti and full-bosomed movie actresses.

Just for the record, the Davis Cup is a gleaming thirteen-inch-high bowl named after one of the players of that famous afternoon, Dwight F. Davis, who ordered a Boston silversmith to fashion the cup from 217 troy ounces of silver.

Davis didn't know at the time that his gesture was destined to alter drastically the entire approach to the ancient pursuit of tennis.

As was note before, prior to the start of the cup rivalry, tennis was a game enjoyed largely in the polite circles in England and the fashionable centres of the United States.

Accounts in the newspapers of underdogs upsetting top-heavy favorites; —of undaunted athletes snatching victory from the jaws of defeat; of mighty battles between titans—have served notice that tennis is no longer the province of effete ladies and gentlemen, but of the people.

This year's Davis Cup matches hold a particular interest. They will mark the first time a European country has challenged for the trophy since some 24 years ago when a British team won it. In that time Davis Cup challenge matches have been dominated by the United States and Australia.

The defeat of the favored United States team by the young Italian stars in the pre-challenge round rocked the international sports world. It was not only the biggest upset in years, but has focused the eyes of global sportdom on the Cup matches.

The Italian youngsters staged a spectacular comeback to defeat the Americans. Down two matches they rallied magnificently to win the next three and the right to challenge Australia for the Cup.

You know the story of the Americans' "bad-boy" behavior after their defeat. Racquets were tossed and other childish antics indulged in. Their behavior caused a furore in Australian-American tennis circles. The Americans said the incidents were "blown up." The Aussies protested to the United States Tennis Association. Whatever it was, American sportsmanship tennis-wise was given a black eye.

Arthur Daley, the erudite sports columnist of the New York Times wrote: "The Americans acted like spoiled, arrogant brats. They should have been taken to the woodshed and given a good old-fashioned spanking."

The Australians, who have held the Cup so many times, it is beginning to develop kangaroo ears, will likely be favorites to retain the honorable silverware. Sentimentally, the young Italians will get the nod of sport in general.

As the three-months-old family pride said to his master: "It's time for a change," so this corner along with Tommy Maconro, will be pulling for the time-honored bull to obtain a switch of scenery and back in the warm Italian sunshine for the next year at least.

SINGLE CYLINDER

The first motorcycle in the world was a single-cylinder machine constructed in 1885 by Gottlieb Daimler of Germany.

MONTREAL (CP) — Jake Gaudaur, general manager of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, said Tuesday he expects to know "in 10 days or two weeks" whether Sam Etcheverry will play for the Big Four Football League team next season.

Etcheverry was to tell Gaudaur his decision Tuesday but when Gaudaur arrived in Montreal he asked for more time to decide.

"This is perfectly acceptable to me," Gaudaur said. "Naturally we would like to know as soon as possible. But there certainly isn't any need to panic yet . . .

"We have tried to sell Sam on the merits of moving to Hamilton. We want him. He certainly would look good in one of those black and gold uniforms."

Etcheverry and end Hal Patterson were traded to Hamilton Nov. 9 for quarterback Bernie Faloney and defensive end Don Paquette. Since then rumors have flowed about Etcheverry's future, the most recent that he would join New York Giants of the National League.

"We have never mentioned salary or terms. We have never discussed his status legally, said Gaudaur, referring to Etcheverry's contract with Montreal which reportedly states he cannot be traded without his consent.

Gaudaur, who said the Tiger-Cats wouldn't initiate any legal action no matter what Etcheverry's decision, denied rumors the quarterback was seeking a $25,000 to $30,000 annual salary. He added that there are no problems about Patterson reporting.

"When I spoke to Patterson earlier he appeared quite happy over the prospect of signing with us."

APPROVE AS PURCHASE

BOSTON (AP) — American League club owners Tuesday night approved purchase of controlling stock in Kansas City Athletics by insurance executive Charles O. Finley, President Joe Cronin said. Finley's bid for 53 per cent of the Athletics' stock left in the estate of the late Arnold Johnson was approved by Chicago probate court Judge Robert Dume.

Royals Blank Flyers 5-0; Extend Lead

PLAYER LEAVES HOSPITAL

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Dave Earley, 20, St. Catharines Tee pees forward severely injured during an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game against Hamilton Red Wings Dec. 10, has been released from hospital. He suffered a lineal fracture of the skull and a broken collar bone during a fight. He is not expected to play again this season.

GUELPH (CP) — Fans were treated to a fine display of goaltending at both ends of the ice Tuesday night as Guelph Royals took a five-point cushion atop the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings by shutting out Niagara Falls Flyers 4-0.

The flawless goaltending of Dennis Jordan and single goals by Billy Taylor, Borden Smith, Paul Andres and Don Diberardino gave Royals the victory and widened the gap between them and second - place Toronto St. Michael's College Majors in the standings.

Wayne Rutledge also turned in a superb performance in the Flyers net and was especially frustrating to Guelph snipers on close-in drives.

The Royals took a 3-0 first-period lead and counted single tallies in each of the remaining periods.

Taylor's goal was the first in Junior A competition for the youth who came up through the minor hockey system of St. John's, Nfld.

NO SNAKES

Wildlife is scarce in Ireland and snakes are almost nonexistent.

Senior Hockey

GALT (CP) — Chatham Maroons scored three goals in the third period to earn a 5-5 overtime tie with Galt Terriers in Ontario Hockey Association Senior play Tuesday night.

Ted Power, who scored three goals for Maroons and assisted on another, and George Montague fired two goals in 30 seconds late in the third frame to send the game into overtime.

Harry Neale scored twice for Galt with George Zak, Pete Ko-walchuk and Butch Martin adding singles.

Elmer Skov was the other Chatham marksman.

RANGERS GET HELP

NEW YORK (AP) — The injury-riddled New York Rangers of the National Hockey League called up forward Dan Bellisle, 23, from Vancouver Canucks of the Pacific League Tuesday. They also returned Wayne Hallman to Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers of the Eastern Professional League.

At the Belle

Outlaws, U.S. cavalry, and the Shoshone Indians who lived the drama of the opening of Dakota Territory, live history again in the adventure-packed "Walked Tall," starring Willard Parker and co-starring Joyce Meadows and Kent Taylor. The 20th Century-Fox picture opens Thursday at the Belle Theatre.

Popular Joyce Meadows who co-stars with Willard Parker in "Walk Tall," entered motion pictures after a brilliant career on the stages of New York and Los Angeles. More recently she has appeared on television in "Jagon Train," "77 Sunset Strip" and "The Texan."

"FRECKLES," STORY LOVED BY MILLIONS

Adventure and stirring drama in the wild timber country when lumber thieves pose a menace, is brought to the screen in CinemaScope and DeLuxe Color production of "Freckles," the co-feature attraction tomorrow at the Belle.

In refreshing contrast to the science-drama presentations of the atomic era, the story goes back to the natural beauty of the Limberlost, when lumber barons fought to protect their property from bands of outlaw lumberjacks. The gallantry of 20-year-old Freckles, arrived from Chicago, whose left hand is missing, in protecting the forest alone for his employer is known throughout the world. Gene Stratton Porter, the author of the novels "Girl of the Limberlost," "The Harvester," "Laddie," and "Freckles," because during her lifetime, the largest selling writer in American history.

Starting tomorrow, "Walk Tall," will be presented at 2.00, 7.00 and 9.30; "Freckles" will begin at 2.00 and 8.25, at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

DENIES FIGHT RUMOR

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Bill Fugazy, president of Feature Sports Incorporated, says no decision has been reached on a date or location for the third heavyweight championship bout between Floyd Patterson and Ingemar Johansson. Asked about a report that the fight will be held March 13 in Miami, Fugazy, whose organization holds the contract for the match, said: "There are still details to be worked out."

Series on Negro Problems Powerful and Sympathetic

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Sit-in, the second of NBC's excursions into strongly editorial broadcasting in a series called NBC White Paper, proved Tuesday night to be a powerful and sympathetic account of the Negro lunch-counter demonstrations in Nashville, Tenn.

It told clearly and graphically the story of the successful efforts by Negro students to force local stores to serve Negroes' food. It included film shot during scuffles between Negroes and whites and filmed interviews with leaders of both factions and community officials. Often the camera work was imaginative and shockingly effective, and the earnest statements of the Negroes, marked with religious flavor, were moving.

Occasionally, however, the scenes—such as the one in which a group of young Negroes were gathered in a gymnasium singing—showed signs of careful stage management.

The principal difficulty with the program was in its failure to give the other side as fair a break as it provided for the integration forces.

Television used in this intimate, dramatic way can be a strong molder of public opinion. This program had shock value, vast impact but, in a vastly emotional area, it was obviously loaded on one side.

Jerry Lewis Moving In As Successor to De Mille

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dots from the lois . . . .

What's known the logical successor to Cecil B. DeMille at Paramount? Jerry Lewis. Don't laugh. The guy got the studio to build him a $500,000 three-story cross-section of a mansion to play with for Ladies' Man. As producer-director-writer - star, he rules it like a benevolent despot, expressing his wishes through the public address system. No parleys, though . . .

Youngster Sal Mineo steals Exodus right out from under the noses of the big-name cast, ranging from method-actors to Sir Ralph Richardson. The film is a collection of often excellent scenes which don't quite add up to a satisfying whole . . .

The Sundowners is the first film in a long time to get excellent reviews from New York critics. And it's doing great business at the Radio City Music Hall. If it gets such treatment elsewhere, maybe producers will be convinced that good, clean family films can pay off after all . . . .

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RICHTER

Thursday, December 32

General tendencies: Now you have a wonderful day for making whatever changes may be necessary, but in a tactful, diplomatic manner with much consideration for the attitudes and viewpoints of whomever else may be connected with you. Be sure you do think deeply what you want. Then you can get those who be to aid to give their full support to such arrangements. Fine for Christmas Shopping — day and evening.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Go over your Christmas lists and make any revisions you may deem necessary. Then concentrate on having a greater abundance and how to achieve such an end. This evening you have an opportunity to help one who is in need.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — It is best to shop in the company of good allies today and get what is needed. You can make fine new friends or contacts indirectly that way, too. Attend some very nice social affair this evening and have a ball.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Important you get in touch with those higher-ups who can assist you in some phase of your career, such as credit for whatever is connected with public life. Then don't be shy in bringing your fine talents before right people.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — A change of attitude or methods is imperative right now if you want to be successful and happy. This will bring fine, new contacts within your ours who can be most helpful to you in the future. Be kind and win them over.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — If you are still long enough, you can get that intuitive flash that will help you with your ideas or problems. Also, get suggestions from authorities in your field. Evening is then fine for romance and inspiration. Be sweet.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — Ideal day to be with good friends and start getting the Christmas spirit. Make peace with everyone with whom you have had misunderstandings. Much progress can be yours if you act circumspectly and are alert.

Libra (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23) — This can be a very happy day for you, and you can bring joy to others, too, if you get the Christmas spirit early and very gingerly little parties, etc. P. M. have them. Dance, sing, be gay.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) — This can be a most enjoyable day for you. Be off to the amusements and sports that most appeal. Take your loved ones with you and be most generous and convince him, or her, of your true affection. Forget all worries.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — A day for thinking about home and family, seeing that all is in perfect order and loved ones are happy and satisfied. Do something that will insure their future, too. Work together harmoniously this evening.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Fine day for shopping and getting just the right gift for the right person. Also, take time to come to a real and fast agreement with those with whom you have any important business. Evening is fine for fun and frolic.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — Every opportunity is yours now to meet with success in whatever has to do with properties and money. Impress others with your good practical sense and you can add much to your present income. P. M. be very early.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — A day to think pretty much of personal affairs, being with persons you enjoy, start exchanging gifts, etc. Also, contact whomever can be helpful in the future with regard to your career. Have a lot of innocent fun P.M.

If your child is born today — he, or she, will be loaded with talent and the most practical sense for making these pay off adequately from earliest years. However, it is important you early give fine spiritual and ethical training so that the grade can be made with ease and inner happiness, plus insuring the greatest success. Wonderful chart for the business man or woman.

Three Menbers Of Notorpus Gang Jailed

MONTREAL (CP) — Three members of the notorious "Cooksville Boogie-Woogie" (Hi Hood) gang got prison sentences Tuesday for possessing offensi weapons and a husky pooch. All were given nine years for manslaughter.

Brothers Stanley and Lawrence Hood and Mitchell Hood, all of Cooksville, Ont., were also given an 11-year term or attempted murder and holdup.

Your Honor, Mr. Justice Mignolon said 2,000 campfires of heroin were involved.

Roger Bertrand, 33, was placed on rehabilitation for his part in a $25,000 tobacco warehouse heist last July but Mr. Justice Lazure said he would get five years in prison for the least infraction.

"You're extremely fortunate," the judge told him, "rehabilitation officers gave me an excellent report about you."

Roger Dumoon, 28, his partner in the holdup, was sentenced last month to three years in penitentiary.

Trading Stamps May Be Outlawed By Government

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Fulton threw out a hint Tuesday that the government may be considering amendments to the Criminal Code dealing with so-called trading stamps.

Replying to CCF Leader Argue, who asked whether the government has given any consideration to introducing amendments to the Criminal Code that would effectively outlaw trading stamps Mr. Fulton said:

"The only answer I can give to that question is that the brave speech forecast that there would be amendments to the Criminal Code during this session. When the bill is introduced, government policy in that regard will be indicated."

The Supreme Court, in a unanimous judgment handed down Monday, upheld the legality of stamps issued by Loblaw Groceterias Company Limited of Hamilton and an independent Grocery Alliance store in Windsor. The court said trading stamps are lawful in Canada by the Criminal Code are specifically described in the code. The Loblaw and IGA stamps did not fall within this prohibition.

No Further Clues In Disappearance Of Immigrant

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Police say they have no further clues in the apparent disappearance of a German immigrant who was to have boarded a ship in New York last week and did not show up.

Richard Kuhlmann, 36, was scheduled to leave here a week ago Monday by train for New York with a round-trip steamship ticket for Bremerhaven, Germany. He made one stop in Toronto but did not know if he actually took the train.

A few days later the North German Lloyd's Steamship Company checked with a London, Ont., travel agency to ask why Kuhlmann had not shown up to board the vessel Bremen at New York. Friends of Kuhlmann, a butcher who worked as a laborer at a planing mill, said they have heard nothing from him since the day he went to the station.

Kuhlmann came to Canada seven or eight years ago from a suburb of Hamburg.

CHANGES AIMED

ing, said Mr. Fleming had painted the general picture with his usual broad brush.

But any higher income that might result for a few from the budget provisions wouldn't impress those Canadians "whose incomes have ceased to be large numbers."

The scantily-filled public galleries were kept waiting 16 minutes for Mr. Fleming's speech. The night sitting began at 8 p.m. EST with Frank Howard (CCF—Skeena) raising a question of privilege about car allowances for cabinet ministers. The question was set aside until today's sitting.

Mr. Fleming then gained the floor and spoke for 94 minutes before a house whose attendance was unusually low—for a budget night—because of the proximity of Christmas.

ECONOMIC SITUATION

His stage-setter was a 6,500-word summary of the economic situation — the unexpected slowdown due largely to similar developments in Europe and the United States and Canada's paradox of high unemployment and record business activity at the same time.

This would mean a challenge for management and labor to make Canadian exports more competitive on world markets. Both would have to show "restraint" in their demands on the public. Each would have to maintain a "proper relationship" between production and wages.

Meanwhile, Mr. Fleming reported, Canada now is importing more foreign capital than necessary. Outside capital still would be needed. The government did not intend to block it.

TAKES THREE STEPS

These were the steps Mr. Fleming took to cope with the problem:

Effective at once, "special attractions and incentives" to foreign capital in the form of exemptions from the 15-per-cent withholding tax on interest and dividends paid foreign investors and lenders will be eliminated.

He estimated this will add $14,000,000 to the federal treasury in this fiscal year and $50,000,000 in a full year.

Mr. Fleming said the change is not intended to be "unattractive" to foreign capital. It is designed to keep Canadian provincial, municipal and private borrowers off the United States money markets. He has cautioned these borrowers before that such action can push up the exchange rate on the Canadian dollar — and thus put Canadian exporters at a disadvantage in sales returns.

UNILATERAL ACTION

Mr. Fleming said the government is taking unilateral action to increase to 15 from five in the tax on dividends paid to U.S. parent firms which have majority ownership in a Canadian subsidiary.

The minister told reporters later that immediately after the speech he phoned Robert Anderson, U.S. secretary of the treasury, to advise him of the change, a step impossible to take in advance because of the rules of budget secrecy. He said Mr. Anderson made no immediate comment.

Tax brackets for corporations will be changed to save some 4,500 companies about $24,000,000 a year. Under the new system after Jan. 1, the low 25-per-cent tax rate on corporate income will apply on profits up to $35,000 instead of $25,000 as at present.

The 50-per-cent tax rate will apply on profits beyond $35,000.

DOUBLE DEPRECIATION

Starting Jan. 1 for a two-year period, double depreciation will be allowed in calculation of income tax on new private enterprises in areas of "chronic unemployment—areas to be designated by the cabinet—and in connection with any area Canadian production in new processing methods and in lines of goods not already made in Canada.

The budget will enforce a form of Canadian content in the investment programs of Canadian-based pension funds and investment companies, commonly known as mutual funds.

To qualify for low-tax treatment the mutual funds will have to be recurring by next year 33 per cent of their revenue in dividend from taxable Canadian corporations. The requirement will rise to 66 per cent in 1962 and 75 per cent in 1963.

Registered employee pension plans will have to put 75 per cent of their investment income from Canadian sources in 1961, 80 per cent in 1962 and 90 per cent thereafter.

Tuition Costs For Students Now Deductible

OTTAWA (CP)—Tax relief for Joe College and his dad was announced by Finance Minister Fleming in the shape of a provision allowing deduction of university tuition costs from resident-earned taxable income.

It will take effect Jan. 1, Mr. Fleming said Tuesday in his budget speech. In his own case it comes too late to help out his daughter, Mary, in her last year. One son is not yet at university and another is a senior student at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph.

The present law provides a $500 deduction for any parent supporting a child in university—even after 21 years of age. But if the child earns more than $600 that exemption is lost.

If tuition costs cut the taxable income below $600, the $500 exemption will be retained under the new provision. Deducting tuition fees for the working student also may lower his taxable income to the tax-free zone below the basic $1,000 exemption granted all single Canadians.

The only qualifications by Mr. Fleming were that the student must be studying full-time toward a degree, including post-graduate work. It was understood that the definition of a university will be the same as that used for federal capital grants to institutions of higher learning, thus excluding normal schools or teacher colleges.

Mr. Fleming made no reference to what the tax concession may cost the government but the amount was understood to be less than $500,000 a year.

Budget Dates

OTTAWA (CP)—Effective budget dates:

End High School At Grade 12 Says U Of T President

Suggests 13 Be Set Aside For Advanced Education

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Claude T. Bissell, president of the University of Toronto, Wednesday night recommended that Grade 12 be recognized as the ending of high school education and Grade 13 be set aside for advanced education in preparation for university.

In his annual presidential report, Dr. Bissell said that it is becoming increasingly apparent that the present Grade 13 system can no longer bear the strain imposed on it by the increasing number of students.

He suggested that students in the Grade 13 year should concentrate on first courses in the university which they would major at university.

Specialist teachers in secondary schools would welcome the benefits attached to the plan, said by this system, he says, and such a Grade 13 "would greatly enhance the value of the secondary schools and the university faculties that is so conspicuously lacking."

SUGGESTS COLLEGES

Dr. Bissell also suggested that a series of residential colleges be established at the U. of T. to cope with the influx of arts and science students.

He said, too, he said, Ontario needs a string of liberal arts colleges of good quality and a network of post-secondary-school technical institutes that would concentrate on specific professional goals.

The basic defect with Grade 13, Dr. Bissell said, is that it tries to serve two purposes, "it is a qualification for the high School honor graduation diploma, and qualification for university entrance."

He suggested Ontario should operate on the present British system, making Grade 13 akin to the "advanced level" of the United Kingdom and Grade 12 akin to the "ordinary level" of secondary education.

The new student proceeding into Grade 13 would still face examinations, he said, but "not these would be relatively few in number and would be designed to test powers of analysis rather than powers of absorption."

CRITICIZES BUDGA

D. A. Morrison, director of education for Toronto's suburban East York, said the plan leaves something to be desired if "the idea is to expect the secondary schools to graduate nothing but university when this should normally be the function of universities in the students' first year."

S. G. B. Robinson, secretary of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation said that the plan would conflict not only with the universities and Dr. Bissell's proposals will be studied closely by secondary school teachers, Mr. Robinson said.

Freeman Stewart, executive secretary of the Canadian Federation of University Women, said the plan should be studied carefully before any three years is added to high school.

Dr. Bissell also called for a public build-up for something, like the Queen's Plate, to match three days of "mush" lava. There was very little in the Plate that could have been normally presented in a normal budget in the spring.

Mr. Fleming returned the Liberals of "weeping and wailing" about the fiscal statement without offering any constructive proposals.

Health Program To Be Studied By Commission

OTTAWA (CP)—A royal commission is going to study whether there should be a national pre-paid medical care plan in Canada.

The announcement was made in the Commons Wednesday by Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who said establishment of the commission had been recommended by the Canadian Medical Association.

A letter to Mr. Diefenbaker from Dr. A. D. Kelly, general secretary of the association, Dec. 12, urged establishment of a commission to assess the health needs and resources of Canada "with a view to recommending methods of ensuring the highest standard of health care for all Canadians."

Dr. Kelly's letter said the medical profession's concern in this field had been demonstrated in the establishment — under medical-professional auspices — of voluntary prepaid medical - care plans covering 4,000,000 people.

It filled the association would lend its full co-operation to the work of a royal commission.

WILL TELL LATER

Mr. Diefenbaker said the scope, authority and personnel of the commission would be announced early in the new year.

Paul Martin Jr.—Essex East—who was health minister under the old Liberal administration, said the government might have embarked on a medical care plan without going to a royal commission — "just as the former government did with regard to hospital insurance."

CCF Leader Hazen Argue said he believed the announcement was merely another indication that the people of Canada are anxious to get a prepaid medical plan as soon as possible.

Record Arrests By Tavern Squad

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan police are arresting drinking drivers at a record rate.

Police have arrested 294 motorists on charges of drunk or impaired driving since the annual carnival season began with police parties and drinking and driving started Dec. 1.

This year, Toronto's deputy chief John Murray ordered special squads to watch taverns and hotels in an attempt to intercept persons obviously under the influence of alcohol before they get to their cars.

Police have sent numerous people home in taxis and told them to pick up their cars next morning.

VET DERELICTS FLAG

He had been held on an American flag to keep snow off the windshield of his truck.

BUDGET DRAWS POLITICAL WRATH OF OPPOSITION

House Adjourns Until January 16

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons opposition brought down its political wrath Wednesday on Finance Minister Fleming's special mid - term budget. It had virtually nothing good to say about it.

Liberal financial critic William Benidickson accused Mr. Fleming of false optimism, erroneous assessment of a slumping economy, and of an unnecessary budget "void of real remedies or the serious situation we are facing."

"Small potatoes," added CCF spokesman Hazen Argue. Canadians generally were "horribly disappointed" with the pre-Christmas offering, he said, it lied down on the "timorous only a little nudge at a time when it needs a big push."

Both critics offered motions of non - confidence in the government—motions more in line with parliamentary tradition than in the case of the latter the Progressive Conservative administration, with its heavy House majority.

SET VOTES ASIDE

However, the political bitterness was quickly dissolved in the Yuletide good cheer in which the House of Commons adjourned Jan. 16. Votes on the non-confidence motions were set aside until then.

Highlight of the budget debate was Mr. Benidickson's non-confidence motion. Usually, such motions are brief, simple and straightforward.

But the Liberal member for Kenora-Rainy River ran his to about 800 words, including quotations from cabinet ministers' speeches in an attempt to back up his claim that the government was "persisted stubbornly and blindly in a mistaken assessment of the economic situation," and has shown lack of foresight.

Speaker Roland Michener refused judgment on whether the motion was in order. J. J. Mc-Cann (PC—Edmonton - Twin-gate) said the Liberal motion was a "pure 1958 House precedent."

WANTS EASIER CREDIT

Mr. Regier, CCF member for Bonavista - Exploitam, made a more direct approach. He called in his statement for easier credit, an increase in the money supply, and government action to reduce the bank rate on the Canadian dollar.

Mr. Benidickson called the budget a stocking with a coal in the bread of a candy cane. But he saw one positive sign in it—since it contained practically no taxes. The average Canadian taxpayer, this must mean has received relief—and there was not in the books for the immediate future.

"Government supporters looked sad indeed at the empty packages," he said. There was a big build-up for something, like the "dawn" of prosperity three years ago "and much lava. There was very little in it. This could have been normally presented in a normal budget in the spring."

Mr. Fleming returned the Liberals of "weeping and wailing" about the fiscal statement without offering any constructive proposals.

Concern among American authorities also centred on the Canadian budget announcement, providing broader definitions of the made-in-Canada tariff regulation. American officials feel that the load higher Canadian tariffs on some $300,000,000 worth of American machinery and other goods moving across the border.

One tariff authority said, if these fears are realized, the U.S. may have to consider tariff retaliation against Canada though he emphasized that such retaliation would be undertaken "only as a last resort."

He understood U.S. Treasury Secretary Robert Anderson's duties in Ottawa next week-end to discuss these matters.

Erect Wire Fence Around Prison To Keep Out Unwelcome Visitors

VICTORIA (CP)—A wire fence has been ordered around William Head prison, Canada's first honor prison without bars, it's to keep people out not in.

The prisoners have been preparing for Christmas, a real Christmas affair, normal officials decided on the fence to keep intruders from taking away their fun-fests.

There are 190 prisoners at William Head, a minimum-security institution, and they are looking forward to a traditional Christmas, much of it spent with their families.

Warden Harry Collins said on Wednesday none of the inmates will be allowed to go home for the festive season but their families will be permitted to visit them Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, staying as long as they wish and with no limit on numbers as long as the visitors are family members.

There will not be any turkey. The prisoners will eat steak, the tradition in Canadian penitentiaries, but they will have the menu trimmed-up found in most homes, including Christmas cake and pudding.

Prisoners have decorated Christmas trees and attended to Yuletide mail, received and distributed with almost no restrictions.

William Head, about eight miles from downtown Victoria, was put into operation two years ago. It is on a rocky point jutting into the Pacific Ocean and is a prototype of five minimum-security prisons to be opened in the country within three years.

BROKEN TANKER'S STERN — Stern section of the American tanker Pine Ridge, which was broken in two during raging storms off the southeast coast of Florida, floats helplessly in high seas and gale winds. At least five members of the crew are barely visible standing on deck. At top, right is tip of wing portion of the U.S. Coast Guard plane from which picture was made. (AP Wirephoto).

House Warned Jobless Insurance Kitty Drying Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Unless the government acts soon, the unemployment insurance kitty will just about dry up by next May.

A nine-man advisory committee has submitted its views to the government recently. It was tabled Wednesday in the Commons—just before MPs recessed for Christmas.

Government officials said the fund could decline to "almost unsafe level" by the end of March, 1961.

This would be a massive drop from its present level — around $200,000,000 and even greater drop from its 1956 high of close to $500,000,000.

The government has forecast special action to bolster the fund and to correct abuses. But so far, no details of any proposed legislation have been given before the Commons.

After Parliament had recessed, opposition spokesmen lambasted the government for slipping the report on the fund before the Commons in the dying hours of the pre-Christmas session.

Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson called it "arrogant and contemptuous treatment of Parliament."

"It contests show why the government was afraid to have it discussed in the House of Commons at this time."

Hazen Argue, leader of the CCF party, said Finance Minister Fleming "craven really overlooked" the report in his budget speech Tuesday to the Commons.

"The blue budget baby is getting blurry," he said.

Total revenue for the 12 months to Sept. 30 was $322,900,000, an increase of $28,700,000 over the previous 12-month revenue of $228,200,000. But the extra money was still not enough to cover the heavy drain caused by seasonal benefits and payments to jobless fishermen.

In fact, said the report, it totalled a loss of $135,760,000.

The advisory want the government to boost its contribution to the fund.

At the moment, the government puts up one fifth of the total. Contribution rates were raised about 20 per cent 15 months ago for workers and companies, but the government ratio was not changed.

U.S. Makes Quick Move To Offset Canada's Decision

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States moved quickly Wednesday to retaliate against the Canadian government's decision to divert a larger share of American profits in Canada into the Canadian treasury.

A U.S. treasury department spokesman said instructions are being issued to increase the American withholding tax on dividends paid by American-owned companies in the U.S. to 25 per cent from five, effective immediately.

The American action followed a surge of last-minute protests and cries of steps announced by Canadian Finance Minister Fleming Tuesday night to increase taxes against American branches and subsidiaries operating in Canada.

Agriculture Federation Urges Equitable Tax Distribution

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Federation of Agriculture Wednesday night urged the province to establish a select committee to study the fields of assessment and taxation with a view "toward a more equitable distribution" as between urban and rural ratepayers.

In its annual brief to the provincial cabinet, the federation said the costs of education and other services should be examined.

The federation said in 1959 the municipal tax burden on farms reached $42,290,000 — an increase of 200 per cent in the last 10 years.

During that same period, net income from farming operations increased over all only by only 29 per cent.

"It is less equitable to or within urban municipalities the weight of the tax on farm land is especially severe, since urban extension has forced the farmer to assume a large share of the cost of services for which he has felt no need," the federation said.

The federation asked the government to grant assistance in

SNAP ELECTION FOR QUEBEC SEEN AS POSSIBILITY

Lesage Sticking To Guns on Tax

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Jean Lesage's new government, meeting for the first time in the legislative assembly since it was elected to power last June, is sticking to its guns on personal increases in personal and corporation income taxes.

Mr. Lesage and his members have sat out without any attempt to stop it, a marathon debate by the Union Nationale opposition which accused the government of going back on the election campaign promise that taxes would not be increased to finance a social welfare program.

The two tax bills today were to receive third reading—the final stage of becoming law.

The bill on corporations is to come up first. Premier Lesage said Wednesday night, presumably because it could be disposed of more quickly than the other.

Daniel Johnson (UN — Bagot) said that, by the tax increase on corporations, the lower rates had an advantage it has over Ontario of attracting industry by lower tax. The low-powered incentive has been largely offset by

RCAF's Slemon at NORAD Helm As False Missile Scare Received

OTTAWA (CP) — Steel-nerved RCAF Air Marshal Roy Slemon averted what could have been a nuclear disaster Oct. 5, highly placed informants said today.

Air Marshal Slemon, deputy commander of North American Air Defence command, refused to be panicked by radar information which made it appear that long-range missiles had been launched against North America.

Sitting in the war room at NORAD headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo., Slemon reasoned that the information from a radar at Thule, Greenland, must have been false.

He ordered an immediate check and it was found that the false radar information was caused by a malfunction in the ballistic missile early warning station at Thule.

The danger in the situation was that long-range American missiles might have been launched in retaliation against what the radar's information could be nuclear attack.

Defence officials said the incident occurred at the time that NORAD commanders—Gen. Laurence Kuter of the U.S. Air Force and Air Marshal Slemon—have cool heads and will not order an alert on information which might be checked.

In short, they said, there are no flicky trigger - fingers at NORAD headquarters.

For two months, defence authorities in the U.S. and Canada decided against making the incident public.

Early this month, however, the U.S. Air Force disclosed the missile scare Oct. 5, partly to show that NORAD headquarters

Navy 'Copters Save 13 Seamen; Fear 7 Drowned

Ships Search in Gale For Men Afloat in Sea

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Navy helicopters from the aircraft carrier Valley Forge today gingerly hoisted 13 of the survivors of the broken tanker Pine Ridge from the bobbing stern section.

Seven of the ship's company of 35 aboard the Pine Ridge were feared lost when the 10,000-ton vessel was ripped in two Wednesday in mountainous seas 100 miles off Cape Hatteras, N.C. The tanker's master, Clark Sovereign of Pascagoula, was reported among the seven missing. They were in the bow section when it broke away and capsized.

The skipper of the Valley Forge, Capt. Clarence A. Melvin, advised the navy he hoped to pick up the seamen remaining in the stern section before sunset. These aircraft were reported to be no immediate danger with light, heat and food available on their rolling island.

Seas that ran to waves of 30 feet in Wednesday's 50-to 60-knot winds had abated to 10-foot waves and the wind was down to 35 knots at noon.

An air and sea search continued for survivors of the ship's crew of seven navy ships, three coast guard vessels and 10 aircraft.

FIND EMPTY RAFTS

The destroyer Leary said it had recovered two 20-man life rafts dropped by coast guard planes—but they were empty.

Survivors airlifted from the bulk reported that the master, all the mates, the quartermaster, radio operator and steward were in the bow of the ship and were unable to reach the stern section before it broke away.

Liferafts and lifejackets for more than 50 men were dropped, but the pilot of one of the planes told of a futile effort to land the Norwegian tanker Artemis to the five men afloat in water reported only a few minutes after the survival if they weren't swamped.

The Artemis joined off the area search with the terse report Wednesday night: "Lost sight of Pine Ridge, broken in two in a severe gale and mountainous seas 200 miles off the North Carolina coast.

"Impossible to render any assistance under present weather conditions," the master of the Artemis radioed the Associated Press in response to an inquiry. The gale and blizzard struck at 11:49 a.m. EST.

BUCK GALE WINDS

Buck gusts of up to 50 and 60 miles an hour, planes and surface craft found searching for the scene. The Tanker Enzo Jamestown arrived near dusk and sent its lifeboat ashore. The vessel was aboard the stern were okay.

NEGROES CONVICTED

LUANDA, Angola (Reuters)—Nine Negroes of the Bakongo Tribe accused of belonging to a secret anti-Portuguese African colony charged with "activities endangering the security of the state" have been sentenced by a military court to sentences ranging from 20 years to life imprisonment, it was learned today. The accused were all Negroes, many of them civil servants.

Prince Edward County Roads All Blocked

Today's snow storm has closed in all roads in Prince Edward County. It was reported by the district Provincial Police office at 1.30 o'clock this afternoon. Picton and district residents are advised to stay out of the county, which has reduced visibility to zero, before attempting to travel on the roads.

Highways No. 401 and No. 2 are reported to be very bad from as far west as Cobourg and so far east as Kingston.

Belleville has many snowfall locally, the sun is reported as shining in Madoc and the roads are open around the Stirling area, with little or no snow fall.

Southwest Part Of Province Due For More Snow

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Southwestern Ontario today braced itself for another blanket of snow as the weather bureau in Toronto issued a warning for up to eight inches of snow for the northeast shore of Lake Erie.

The heaviest snow of the season fell in the Owen Sound district Tuesday and Wednesday. A blizzard dumped 15 inches on Owen Sound and the area north and west of the city.

The weather bureau said Northern Lakeshead and Welland counties would bear the brunt of today's storm. Considerable drifting was predicted for the southern sections of the counties. A cold west wind sweeping across Lake Erie was responsible for the storm. The westerness tail of the snow should taper off tonight as the wind swings northwest.

Sarnia in Lambton County was hit hard by a blizzard Tuesday night and Wednesday that left inches fell on the city, still several inches remained from a 20-inch fall the previous week.

Freezing temperatures ranged across Ontario, the mercury fell to 30 below across the north country during the night and to around zero in Southern Ontario.

It was 23 below at White River, 21 below at Sault Ste. Marie and 17 below at Sudbury. Windsor recorded 13 below, Kitchener 8 below and Toronto 10 above.

The weather bureau said the cold spell would continue today.

NOT TOO MANY TURKEYS OFFERED ON LOCAL MARKET

For those desiring a bird for Christmas dinner this morning's market offered a good variety of poultry. Geese and Muscovy ducks were available at 60 cents a pound, turkeys, classified and ready for stuffing at 55 cents a pound and young chickens at 45 cents the pound. There were also a few offered at

Other condiments suitable for the Christmas table fare included summer sausage and sage and onion cents a bunch. Apples, potatoes and a small assortment of other produce could be had at the same prices which have prevailed for the past few weeks.

Christmas trees could also be had at prices from one dollar up, depending on the size and type of tree desired.

FUNGI GROWING IN COURT ROOM

Who says the court room above the city police station is dull?

It's not old, it's just fertile.

There, locked in a wire box where it joins the north wall by a radiator and you'll see. There, between the radiator and a pipe grows the nicest cluster of fungi visitors to court have seen in a long time.

Chief of Police Makes Plea for Careful Driving

"Christmas and New Year's celebrations should be the happiest time of the year if we could banish death from the highways".

In this pre-holiday statement Police Chief Walter Probert added that scores of accidents can be avoided from now to the end of the year if each citizen would do his share.

He suggested that drivers should observe the following principles during the festive season:

Is it better to be too late than to kill others and yourself as a result of speeding.

If you must drink during party celebrations, leave your car in the garage.

Prevent accidents by carefully obeying traffic laws and regulations. Always make signals when turning or slowing down. Always be courteous, and intolerant of other drivers and pedestrians. Be on the lookout for them to make a mistake.

To remain alert, drink coffee before driving home after work or in the evening.

Whether you drive or walk, you have to stay alert if you want to stay alive. The Traffic officer's job would give him greater satisfaction if everyone would first watch out, the Chief said.

J. J. Cash Holds Enjoyable Christmas Party

The employees of J. J. Cash (Canada) Limited held their annual Christmas party on Tuesday evening at Club Cascade. Highlighting the evening was the announcement from the general manager, Mr. E. H. Hall, that the company would once again have a cash bonus, which slated the spirits of all present.

Mr. D. Hadley, president of Cash's Social Club, introduced Mr. Hall, who congratulated the employees for their sincere cooperation in the past year and presented the bonus cheques.

The tables were appropriately arranged with Christmas decorations. A delicious turkey dinner, with all the trimmings, was served by the Ladies of the Canara Auxiliary.

Don Lee acting as master of ceremonies for the entertainment, introduced the young dancers from the Dorothy Dickey Dancing Studio and the "Keynotes" barbershop quartet. Both groups brought the Christmas spirit and presented gifts to all. Carols and dancing concluded the evening. The door prize was won by Miss Anne Way, and dance prizes by Frances Zigar and Roy Davis, Grace Lindsay and Jim Bradley, and Betty Murray and Ray Marsh.

CHILDREN'S PARTY

The children's party was held on Monday at the plant and many children of the employees were treated to candies, oranges, balloons and gay drinks while waiting for Santa Claus to arrive. On his arrival he was greeted with hearty cheers from the eager youngsters; he presented gifts and then, wishing to all and ringing his sleigh bells, went merrily on his way, promising he would visit them again on Christmas Day.

Tinsel Caught In Bulb Socket Sets Tree Afire

Those tinsel and aluminum decorations on your Christmas tree can be a very dangerous fire hazard.

This was noted yesterday by Fire Chief Gerald Vance who said that already this year there has been a Christmas tree fire which could easily have had disastrous results.

The tinsel wasn't set afire by an open candle, a cigaret, or other open flame.

It was caused simply through a piece of tinsel getting caught in the light socket while the homeowner was in the act of changing a bulb. The current set the tinsel afire and in a second the tree was ablaze. Fortunately the owner had the presence of mind to topple the tree and stamp out the fire.

"But I'd be been a child changing the bulb who did not have the presence of mind of an adult, a disastrous fire could easily have resulted," the chief said.

Mr. Vance urged householders to observe a few simple rules of Christmas tree fire safety. "Always select a fresh, green tree that is not dropping needles," he said, "and keep it in a cool place until you are ready to set it up. Then, cut off the trunk at an angle about an inch and a half from the bottom and place it in water. Be sure to keep the water container full lat all times. Inspect your strings of lights for breaks, frays or shorts and replace any defective strings with new ones, and when purchasing new strings be sure to look for the CSA mark of certification — your assurance that they are safe from fire and shock hazard."

Obituaries

MRS. WILLIAM HUTCHINS
Peterborough

Mrs. Pearl Hutchins died suddenly Sunday at Peterborough Civic Hospital, in her 53rd year.

The funeral was held Wednesday at the Kaye Funeral Home, Peterborough.

Canon Walker gave a comforting message from the family and friends.

Mrs. Hutchins was born in Belleville, Huntingdon Township, daughter of the late Harry Vanderwater and Mable Haight. She received her education in Madoc High School and Toronto Normal School. She taught school for a number of years, more recently in Peterborough.

In 1943 she was married to William C. Hutchins, and resided at 1008 Juliet Road, Peterborough.

She is survived by her husband William, a son, Robert, and daughter Sharon, both at home, and a brother, Milton Vanderwater, of Moira.

Many beautiful floral tributes testified to the esteem held for the deceased and sympathy for the family.

Interment was in Wills Lake Cemetery.

ALEXANDER BONIAKOWSKI
(Point Anne-Belleville)

Following a brief illness, Alexander Boniakowski, 67, of Dundas Street and former employee of the Canada Cement Company, Point Anne, for many years, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this morning. He was born in Poland, 61 years ago and came to this country as a young man. He settled in Point Anne and for years was employed in the compressor room of the plant. He was well known and highly respected. Mr. Boniakowski moved to the city a few months ago after his retirement from the plant.

He was a member of Holy Rosary Church and is survived by his brother and two brothers in Poland, one daughter, Mrs. Frank (Catherine) Jones of Rosemore and one sister, Mrs. O. Pryjma of Dearborn, Michigan. His wife, Stella Boniakowski, died a few months ago. Also surviving are two grandchildren.

Resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home, 80 Highland Avenue. The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. THOMAS LESLIE

In failing health for the past eight years, Mrs. Margaret Leslie, Queensboro, died at Kingshouse, Ontario, in the act of changing a bulb. The current set the tinsel afire and in a second the tree was ablaze. Fortunately the owner had the presence of mind to topple the tree and stamp out the fire.

"But I'd be been a child changing the bulb who did not have the presence of mind of an adult, a disastrous fire could easily have resulted," the chief said.

Little Hope for Federal Aid In Purposed Ice Control Dam, Delegation Is Told

Unless there is some change in legislation Providing Federal grants for conservation projects the Moira River Conservation Authority has little hope for obtaining assistance in the construction of the proposed College Street ice control dam.

This was made Saturday by the local delegation which went to Ottawa to discuss the matter with benefit brief to Hon. Walter Dinsdale, Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources.

The delegation consisting of Belleville Authority control committee chairman George Wilson, Authority secretary Michael Chubb and Clarence Ti Graham of Tweed, went to Ottawa at the invitation of the department minister, Lee H. Grills M.P. for Hastings South also were present.

"We were not given any assurance whatever of help", stated Mr. Wilbert on his return to Belleville.

One of the reasons given as the dam would be of benefit only to the city of Belleville only was the fact that it is within the city limits.

The latest cost estimate for the proposed ice dam is $440,000. If the project is to receive federal assistance, the Ontario and federal governments would each pay 37½ per cent with the remaining 25 per cent to be paid by the Authority.

With no assurance of federal aid, Mr. Wilbert said the only alternative to build the dam would be for the Moira Valley Authority project under which the province would pay 50 per cent of the cost.

He noted there would be a possibility of the dam being built as a winter works project, although even this type of program the cost to the Authority would not be greatly reduced. The reason for this is that under winter works labor costs only come in for government subsidy, while the greater portion of the cost of the dam would be in materials.

ASKED FOR COST

During the period when Hon. Alvin Hamilton was head of the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources, a delegation from the Moira Authority had gone to Ottawa seeking financial aid for the ice control.

At that time the department stated the cost of the local project was not great enough to be eligible for federal assistance. It was then some thought, however, that the legislation might be changed.

The minister at that time, however, expressed interest in the College Street dam and had asked that a cost benefit study be made.

It was for presentation of this that the delegation went to Yesterday's delegation went to Ottawa.

"But we were given no assurance by Mr. Dinsdale of federal aid. We left feeling we received any hope that there might be some change in legislation to allow for federal grants to a project the size of ours," said Mr. Wilbert.

Reserve Youth To Get Mental Examination

Stanley Osborne Marcle, 18, of the Tyendinaga Reserve, was committed to the Ontario Hospital not more than 60 days for mental examination when he appeared today in county magistrate's court charged with assault with intent to rape a Deseronto woman last Friday night.

The charge was laid Saturday after 24 hours after a woman had claimed she was attacked on Thomas St. in Deseronto. She was taken behind the United Church where she was struck on the head with a sharp instrument while reading. She said she was then attacked and, feigning unconsciousness, jumped up and escaped.

Chief Constable Kenneth Chester took the woman to a physician who stitched a wound in her head.

A story from Deseronto in yesterday's edition of the Ontario Intelligencer identified by identified Stanley Osborne Brant as being charged with the assault. The Ontario Intelligencer regrets any embarrassment this may have caused Mr. Brant.

Special Events Will Be Held In Holidays

The Belleville YMCA has set up a program of special events for local boys and girls during the Christmas holidays. The program commences on Thursday, December 27th, with a floor hockey tournament for junior and intermediate boys in the morning and a fun night of games, dances and dinner in the evening for both boys and girls under 15.

On Wednesday there is another floor hockey tournament in the morning, this time for prep boys. A prep and junior girls' floor day takes place in the gym during the afternoon.

Thursday's program features a swimming meet for prep, junior and intermediate boys in the afternoon and a prep basketball tournament in the afternoon.

Friday, the last day for the special events program, starts off with a youth table tennis tournament in the morning and finishes with a Hi-Y dance in the evening.

The regular "Y" programs will be held on the Friday and Saturday, a week this Saturday and on Monday, January 2nd. The "Y" will be closed for Christmas Sunday and Monday and New Year's Day.

Special supervised swimming sessions have also been announced. They are: Tuesday will be swimming on Friday between 2:00 and 3:00 p.m., next Wednesday between 1:00 and 2:00 p.m. and a week this Friday between 8:00 and 11:00 a.m.

Girls' swimming will be on next Tuesday between 2:00 and 3:00 p.m. and on Wednesday next between 4:00 and 5:00 p.m.

YEAR DISAPPOINTS

MONTREAL (CP)—This year has been disappointing in many ways for the Canadian chemical industry, Peter C. Allen, president of Canadian Industries, Ltd. said Wednesday. Although shipments of chemical and allied products approached a record $1,500,000,000, higher sales did not generally result in a corresponding increase in profits, he said in a year-end statement.

TORONTO (CP) — Industrials were climbing rapidly again today in a moderate stock market where most sections were riding on the Christmas bandwagon.

On index, industrials were up as at 313.08, base metals were up .27 at 159.61 and western oils improved .10 at 81.32, golds eased .01 at 88.19.

The 11 a.m. volume was 254,000 shares compared with 332,000 at the same time Wednesday.

Canada Malting, Canadian Tire and Huron and Erie led industrials higher, adding ¼ each.

Moore dropped ⅛ and U.S. Ford eased ⅛.

Golds were under pressure from Hollinger and Kerr Addison — each off ⅛ at 19⅝ and 13¼. Giant Yellowknife was up ½.

Geco and Normetal led base metals, up ¼ at 19½ and 40¾. Denison was the only senior uranium affected, up 20 cents at $9.50.

Major Conflict Seen Developing In Govt. Ranks

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters)— A major conflict on racial relations appears to be developing in the ranks of South Africa's ruling Nationalist party, observers said today.

The controversy, they added, could be brought to a head by the anti-apartheid line taken by the World Council of Churches conference here last week.

Seven South African Protestant churches, including two of the biggest Dutch Reformed churches, had resolutions last week backed principles running directly counter to the Nationalist regime's official policy of apartheid.

Dutch Reformed Church members include many Afrikaners. The Afrikaners, generally the government's solid supporters, are the descendants of Dutch and French settlers.

VERWOERD WORRIED?

The Johannesburg Sunday Times, which leans less opposition United Party, ran a story by its political correspondent saying he had learned that Prime Minister Verwoerd himself was "extremely worried" by the council of Churches statement.

Main cause of the intra-party controversy, it was said, arises from Verwoerd's rejection of demands by moderate Nationalists for a "new deal" for this country's 1,500,000 "coloreds" instead of mixed race.

These moderates have included giving the "coloreds" the right to elect their own representatives to parliament.

Amateur Missile Most Complex Ever Made, Fired

CHINA LAKE, Calif. (AP)— "I'm the happiest boy alive," a 20-year-old Marine said after the successful firing of the homemade rocket he has sweated over for nearly five years.

Expert say it is the most complex amateur missile ever built. It's the only one built by a layman ever to reach U.S. Navy base. A previous attempt to launch it from Hollywood last September because of the failure of a 10-cent battery.

The navy had 70 technicians get it ready for the launch Wednesday at this mountain-framed naval ordnance test station on the Mojave desert, 136 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Marshal Kriesel, the designer-builder, who has applied for a patent on part of the guidance system, directed the countdown from a concrete blockhouse 500 feet away.

The 11-foot missile, five inches thick, was designed to go 1½ miles high but exceeded all its estimated 2,000 feet.

Success anyway? Yes, say navy scientists, despite a malfunction in the controlling fins up front.

Robert Blaise, associate head of China Lake's missile propulsion division, said the rocket's liquid propulsion system worked excellently. Said Kriesel, "We've demonstrated some new principles."

Kriesel is a sophomore majoring in aeronautical engineering at the University of Minnesota.

SET PEDIGREE LIMIT

OTTAWA (CP) — A move to guard the purity of widely-grown varieties of cereals and other field crops was announced Wednesday by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association. The association pedigree for registered seed will be limited to a life of three generations—with a further one-generation term for certified seed, a lower degree of pedigree.

W. J. Houston, principal of Trenton High School, was welcomed to Air Transport Command Headquarters by Air Commodore F. S. Carpenter, air officer commanding. Mr. Houston and members of his staff were entertained yesterday by the air commodore, Group Capt. D. J. Williams, commanding officer of RCAF Station Trenton, and other RCAF personnel.

Local High School Teachers Visit Transport Command

TRENTON — Air Commodore F. S. Carpenter, air officer commanding Air Transport Command, yesterday stressed the importance of good public relations between the RCAF and all their families stationed at Trenton and the citizens of Trenton, during an informal talk to the principal and staff of Trenton High School.

W. J. Houston, principal, Mrs. Houston and members of the high school staff and their husbands were guests at lunch and spent several hours at RCAF Station Trenton yesterday afternoon. They were met by the air commodore, the station's commanding officer, Group Capt. D. J. Williams and their officers.

In a briefing concerning the role of Air Transport Command in the over-all RCAF functions in Canada, Air Commodore Carpenter said that the only "reason for the existence" of the command was to assist the armed forces of the country to maintain peace.

He said that the RCAF was comprised of six commands, all under the leadership of the chief of the staff. Air Transport Command supplies all transport of men and equipment for these commands. In addition to this support, the command performs a number of other functions.

All auxiliary RCAF reserve formations come under its jurisdiction. Support is given to air cadet squadrons in Ontario; the command is responsible for Arctic reconnaissance which involves an air patrol of this vast area; air photography is carried out and ATC planes provide an airlift for disaster relief in any part of the world.

All search and rescue operations in Ontario and parts of Quebec are carried out by this command. Special training along this line is given to personnel in survival is given to the personnel.

The air commodore touched on the support given by his command to United Nations forces in various trouble spots in the world. He said that the manpower in the command was chosen carefully and that they were carefully trained.

STRESSES IMPORTANCE

He stressed the importance to his command of modern and functional aircraft and equipment. Ranges and payload potentialities were explained. He said that the new CC-108 aircraft, which is capable of carrying a payload of 60,000 pounds, over a 2,500-mile range, would arrive in Trenton next month. The new hangar at the east end of the station will house this aircraft, and training of air and ground crews for this aircraft will commence shortly.

Air Commodore Carpenter predicted that within 10 years air transport would become the normal means of transportation.

He particularly stressed the importance of his command in the overall peacetime defence program of the RCAF.

Group Capt. Williams explained the function of 302 Composite

Reporter Talks To Serviceman In the Congo

TRENTON — Yesterday afternoon at RCAF Station Trenton a reporter from this newspaper was given the opportunity of speaking via radio-telephone to Sgt. F. C. Richardson who is stationed at Leopoldville in The Congo. Sgt. Burns used an Congo radio from RCAF Station Clinton, Ont., on Oct. 23 .

Sgt. Burns said that the temperature at the time (4.30 p.m. EST — 10.30 p.m. in Leopoldville) was 110 degrees.

He said that while he would much rather spend Christmas in Canada, he was looking forward to a turkey dinner with all the trimmings as the Canadian Army Signal Corps headquarters in Leopoldville. A few days ago, he said, an aircraft from Canada had flown in supplies for Christmas dinners for the signal corps, which has the largest representation of Canadian forces in the Congo.

Sgt. Burns said that he was speaking from the radio shack in Leopoldville where he is stationed while, where he was on duty directing airlift operations.

Unti in search and rescue operations over the 320,000 square mile area allocated to the command. A brief run-down was given on field technical operations, the role of stationary and mobile air movements terminals; the training of maintenance and service personnel and the training of air crews.

Wing Commander J. D. Swerdfager of Training Command, who is attached to Transport Command, explained the training and examination organization in this area.

The guests were taken to the operations room where they were introduced to Group Capt. G. J. J. Edwards, chief staff officer of operations, and Group Capt. W. H. Schroeder, chief staff officer, administration.

An example of the daily briefing given aircrew personnel was given by Flt. Lt. Jean.

The teaching staff was entertained at a buffet supper and were taken on brief flights around the Quinte area.

Mr. Houston thanked the air commodore and his staff on behalf of the teachers for the opportunity of seeing Air Transport Command in action.

Will Consider Bids at Tuesday Council Meeting

TRENTON — The public works committee of town council, headed by Councillor N. J. McNair, considered bids for the reconstruction and widening of Division Street.

Mayor Walter Murray was present at the special meeting.

The tenders submitted were: J. Venaticos, Trenton, $78,-335.50 (his bid was accompanied by a letter stating that the firm agrees to start work at once under a winter works program); Lake Shore Construction, Belleville, $84,304.75 (no qualifications) ; Orway Construction, Trenton, $75,949.50 (qualified bid).

Mr. Murray said that the qualified bid was rejected.

The tenders will be considered by council next Thursday at the last council meeting of the year.

Canadian Troop In Congo Hosts To Children

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP)—Canadian troops serving with United Nations in The Congo have remembered that Christmas is for children, especially with children.

Signal. James Doe of Glasgow, N.S., and his nine Canadian of the signals section at Elizabethville, Katanga province, started off rolling with a party for 60 feast of St. Nicholas, Dec. 6, Leopoldville reported.

The detachment donated 5 trains (ROD) for a party in Le Leopold II Hospital there. Arranged from bundles of clothes and toys in Canada.

The larger Canadian group Leopoldville headquarters, planned its children's party Friday, inviting the families of the 60-odd Congolese workers the camp, about 300 in all.

Mercury Falls to Ten Below 20 Degrees Below Forecast

Right on top of the season's first fall of snow which officially ushered in the winter season, Wednesday night of the year was registered last night.

Dropping nearly 20 degrees below the level predicted yesterday by the weather man, the mercury in the Belleville area fell to a low of 10 degrees below zero early this morning.

The mercury dropped steadily during the night and reached lowest point of ten below about eight o'clock this morning.

At 9 o'clock it was still below zero by three degrees.

And this morning motors attested to the sudden drop in temperature. More than a few auto batteries gave the ghost as car owners tried to coax life out of their chilled motors.

A Bold Approach

It is easy to grasp what Hon. Donald Fleming, federal minister of finance, was trying to do by means of his so-called "baby budget." It is by no means so simple to judge whether he will accomplish his objectives. Indeed, there is good reason for wondering whether even the best-trained economists, after extensive calculations, will be able to come up with any prediction better than a well-informed guess.

The budget was obviously aimed at stimulating the economy and doing this by luring taxes, or the absence of taxes, as incentive for certain lines of action. The difficulty is that people do not react similarly to similar stimuli. Not even the most gifted economist can be certain what percentage of Canadians will be induced to increase their investment in Canadian industries by the application of the lower corporation tax rate on the first $35,000, rather than the first $25,000, of profits. Or can there be any certain regarding the effect on foreign investments of tax increases designed to restrict the flow of foreign capital into Canada and thus at least partially cure our existing unfavorable balances of payments.

Only time will tell us, if we ever learn for certain, how successful the methods adopted by Mr. Fleming will prove in reaching his obvious objectives. One thing, though, appears certain; this is a "Chamber of Commerce" budget, as opposed to a "Congress of Labor" budget.

There are two diametrically opposed theories as to the best method of stimulating the economic machinery in a country in times of recession. One, favored by labor leaders and by many others, too, advocates the widening of spending power by the simple device of printing cheque means, in the belief that they will immediately be used to purchase goods, thereby increasing effective demand for the products of farm, mill and factory and priming the economic pump. It is this theory, in large measure, which has been used in the past. It is perhaps safe to say that it has failed because there would appear to be no method of proving that economic conditions would not be worse had measures of this type not been employed. Certainly, though, if this remedy has proved of any benefit it has only been in easing the pain, rather than curing the patient.

A completely different approach is the view that spending power is most effective when placed in the hands of those who have no pressing need to increase their purchase of consumer goods. Instead of spending, these people will "save," it is argued; in other words, they will invest. Investment will provide more jobs, does the argument, and this, in turn, will increase the demand for consumer goods, accelerating the whole economic machinery of the country. This is the course of action generally favored by the Chamber of Commerce and groups like the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. It would appear only fair that, the opposing theory having been tried and found, if not wanting, at least no complete remedy, this approach should get a test.

It will be some time, though, before the effects of his policy are felt, if, indeed, there are any effects of the kind predicted by proponents. And, as with the opposing theory, it will always be a matter of argument as to whether, if there is an improvement in conditions, this was because of, or in spite of, the government's action.

One thing, though, is certain. There is little fear of contradiction. It took a brave, or a desperate, man to apply his remedy in the face of existing conditions. If it works, Mr. Fleming is unlikely to get all the credit he deserves. And if it fails, either because it is the wrong medicine or because the dosage was too small, or not powerful enough, Mr. Fleming is going to earn the displeasure of a lot more people than would have been the case had he expanded a policy of aiding and subsidizing the needier elements of the population.

How We Pay Our Way

So far Canada has covered up its huge annual deficit of payments by importing capital in the form of large investments, chiefly by American interests. This is another way of saying that we are paying for our bond interest, shipping and trips abroad by selling our natural resources and manufacturing plants. — Victoria Times.

MUSIC IN THE AIR

Music is indeed the gift of God, in we imagine human life without it it? Just last evening in our community a great violinist gave a concert and every one went away thrilled as he, by his playing, reminded them of their past classical heritage, and even some of the new musical modes.

Music has always been tied up in religion to such an extent it we can almost say that music the offspring of religion. To be sure there is other music beside ligious music and there have been many other composers be- Palestrina and the godly ones. But as the carols are sung a week we shall keep reminding ourselves of the glorious heritage which has come down to us in the form of beautiful music. Shall we at Easter time we shall again rise up on the wings of song.

All that we have is God's gift. Can we imagine anything that you have which has not been given you by God? You may have worked, you may have planned and striven, but God is behind it all. And among God's great gifts few are greater than the gift of song.

Praise be to God! Glorified be the name of the Most High. Let our hearts sing as well as our voices. Music is God's gift. The Psalmist declares, we sing is God's greatest Gift.

World Demand for Uranium

By HON. ROBERT W. MACAULAY
Ontario Minister of Mines; Resources
Article 50

It is now well-known that the Canadian uranium industry is faced with weak markets for its uranium. Last year the United States and United Kingdom announced that when their contracts to purchase Canadian uranium expire in 1963, they would not exercise their options to buy further quantities in the ensuing years. It was later announced that the U.S. and U.K. would agree to stretch, over a longer period, up to 1966, the amounts of uranium which otherwise they would have taken in the shorter period up to 1963.

This agreement has enabled the Canadian uranium industry, gradually to adjust itself, and companies have merged, mines have closed, and others may close. Consequently, smaller quantities of uranium will be produced annually, and by 1965 the industry will be smaller, but stronger; than it would have been in 1963. However, the industry is now faced with the problem of where to sell its uranium after 1966, although it has avoided the crisis in 1963 which previously threatened it. For example, present estimates indicate that copper-nickel ore on hand and contracted for in the U.K. will last until 1970.

In any case, the primary demand for uranium was for defence purposes, and since 1954, military demand was limited by the supplies available from the stockpiles of the nuclear powers, and by the nuclear-test-ban moratorium between the United States, on the one hand, and the Russian Bloc, on the other. Since then production has risen significantly, it has risen most in the United States, as the result of a full-blast exploration program. By 1965, the U.S. was producing 18,500 tons annually, Canada, 13,000 tons, and the rest of the world, about 10,000 tons. Moreover, uranium has been discovered in many countries such as Sweden, Brazil and others, and these sources are being developed for non-militaristic reasons. By mid-1960, both the U.S. and the U.K. were fully overcommitted themselves, and that during 1961 they will be in the market as a buyer's market for uranium. Already the U.S. is considering selling back to Canada some of its current requirements.

FUTURE DEMAND

The main hope for the production of civilian demand will pick up, as the military demand subsides, which is already ahead for. This civilian demand, in the present state of technology, will consist mainly of a demand for uranium as fuel for nuclear stations for nuclear power stations. It was hoped some time ago that, as natural uranium demand fell off, civilian demand would take up the slack. This has not occurred, and seems to have turned out to be premature. There will be a gap of a few years after 1966, before the civilian demand reaches a significant figure.

The generation of electricity by nuclear means is becoming attractive, and in the long term will become essential so that the world will conserve its fossil fuels. At present, however, we are faced with a situation in which the costs of nuclear power have not come down as expected, especially in the U.K. and the rest of Europe.

It is now estimated that nuclear power will not be competitive in Canada before 1970 at the earliest, and not before 1975 in Europe. It is expected to be competitive in the U.K. and on the Continent of Europe, by 1970 at the earliest, and not before 1975 in Europe. It is expected that in the more remote parts of Canada by 1970, but it is expected that by 1970 it will be economic not more than 500 tons of uranium will be used in Canada per year, and perhaps not more than 1,000 tons by 1975. These quantities will supply its own needs for many years, but the potential nuclear power will not be competitive in the U.K. and Europe, before

Saud Takes Over Full Control Of His Kingdom

LONDON (Reuters) — King Saud of Saudi Arabia named the Arabian ambassador to Iraq as foreign minister today as he took full administrative control of his oil-rich desert kingdom.

Mecca Radio announced Wednesday night the king was taking over the premiership from his younger brother, Crown Prince Emir Faisal.

Feuding had been reported between the two brothers since Saud handed administrative authority over to Faisal in March, 1958.

They were reported to have differed because Saud was reluctant to accept as leader of the Arab bloc Gen. Gamal Abdel Nasser, president of the United Arab Republic, who is at loggerheads with the Iraqi premier, Maj.-Gen. Abdul Karim Kassem.

Mecca Radio today announced Saud's new 10-member cabinet, with Ibrahim Al-Gewael, ambassador to Iraq, as foreign minister.

Mecca Radio said Wednesday night that Faisal, who also held the posts of foreign, defence and finance minister, had asked to be relieved of authority.

The tall, near-sighted king, 58, was said to have toured the country earlier this year to win tribal support for a "full return to power."

Tractor Trailer Ends in Ditch

Going out of control on the icy road after the brakes were suddenly applied, a big Liquifuels Ltd. tractor trailer jackknifed on No. 14 highway at Charleston yesterday and skidded into the ditch.

The tractor and trailer remained upright but considerable damage was caused to the tractor. The driver, Malcolm Carruthers of Bath, was not injured.

Mr. Carruthers told police that he was southbound with his empty truck when as he rounded a curve he saw the highway snowplow in the centre of the road. He applied his brakes but his truck jackknifed and skidded into the ditch opposite the Charleston store.

Otherwise no serious accidents were reported by police, although there were several minor mishaps, one of them a minor fail-and-run in the Trenton area.

Six Wounded on Crowded Bus As Two Passengers Stage Gunfight

CHICAGO (AP) — A bus loaded with Christmas shoppers was the scene of panic and bloodshed Wednesday night in a wild gunfight between two passengers. Six persons were wounded, one critically.

Police said the battle apparently started after a sudden quarrel near the exit to the crowded bus on the city's west side. Police gave this account:

One man, complaining he was jostled by three others as he neared toward the exit, drew a .38-calibre pistol from his topcoat and threatened: "Either you get out of my way or I'll blast you in the mouth." One of the men blocking the exit fired back. About a dozen shots raked the rear of the bus in a wild exchange of shots.

Passengers wounded in the crossfire, including one woman, fell to the floor. Other passengers stampeded toward the front exit. Women and children screamed.

In the melee, the man who police said provoked the shooting fled after pulling an emergency lever. The other gunman, identified as Thurston Burgess, 32, was listed in serious condition in hospital.

Luther Perkins, 19, one of the five passengers hit by bullets, was reported in critical condition.

RAF Command To Be Under NATO Control

LONDON (AP) — The RAF Fighter Command, a force of more than 100 jet fighter planes plus guided missiles, is to come under the control of NATO's supreme commander, U.S. Gen. Lauris Norstad.

Defence Minister Harold Watkinson told the House of Commons Wednesday night the RAF fighters will join the North Atlantic alliance's new unified air defence system for Europe. Unification is necessary, he said, because of the speed and range of modern aircraft.

West German, Dutch, Belgian and some other contingents have already been committed to NATO command. French President De Gaulle, the chief opponent of unification, had agreed to give the NATO command control only of French air units in West Germany and those in France near the German border.

Watkinson said that to safeguard national interests, British authorities still will control the "size, composition, role and deployment" of the air units assigned to NATO.

Firemen Play Role of Elves Acting as Santa's Helpers

They'll not be dressed in white trimmed red suits nor wearing bushy white beards, but nevertheless Belleville firemen are doing a lot of substitution for Santa Claus this week.

No. 2 fireball on Moira Street is a real hive of industry these days as firemen busy themselves with toys and packing candies and nuts for Christmas distribution to needy children in the city.

Part of the firemen's pack will be used toys rejuvenated by Eric Cooper and his band of Kiwanian helpers. The remainder will be new toys, dolls, hockey sticks and mittens purchased by firemen, themselves to make this Christmas happier for local kiddies who otherwise might have been left out in Santa's routes.

The Kiwanis-Firemen Christmas toy project seems to gain momentum each year and this year close to 1,000 kiddies will receive gifts.

Last year approximately 850 children received toys from firemen.

Like Santa himself, firemen check their lists then check them twice, just to make sure no deserving child is forgotten and also to avoid duplication of gifts.

On a sort of production line basis firemen yesterday were busy filling plastic bags with candies, nuts and oranges, the bags to accompany gifts of toys or dollies.

Then the lists are again checked, toys are loaded and the big delivery job is under way with a completion date set for Christmas Eve.

ACCIDENTS DECREASE

TORONTO (CP)—Traffic accidents on Ontario's highways continued to decrease in November, provincial police statistics released Wednesday show. With 36 persons killed and 856 injured during that month, the total so far this year stands at 618 dead and 9,291 injured. In 1959 there were 704 killed and 9,341 injured.

Works Dept. Busy Clearing Snow

The first visit of winter has kept the public works department's snow-clearing crews busy over the past few days.

Snow removal crews were working at about 4:00 a.m. this morning clearing snow from the city parking lots and the downtown area. By today most city streets will have been cleared and the sidewalks plowed.

The only other major project undertaken this week has been the construction of the sanitary sewer on Victoria Ave. West and still progressing on this part of the city's sewer system.

The winter works projects of the department are also continuing, and regular maintenance work is being carried out as usual.

This week the new grader was put into action and its effectiveness is reported as satisfactory.

Harold Seldon Bowing Out After 15 Years of Service

After 15 years as member of the former Belleville Board of Education, and of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board, Harold C. Seldon, local pharmacist, has bowed out of the educational field.

Mr. Seldon first became a member of the old Belleville Board of Education back in 1945 at which time the board looked after both public and high school matters.

He served as chairman of the former Board of Education and with the formation of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board in 1953 was appointed city representatives on the board and became its first chairman. Three times during elections for Board of Education, he headed the polls.

Throughout his membership on local education boards, Mr. Seldon has taken an active interest in the erection of new schools and as chairman of sites and accommodation committees saw the erection of the Prince Charles Public School, Queen Elizabeth School and the Quinte and Moira secondary schools, as well as an addition at Quinte Total estimated construction expenditure amounted to over $4,000,000.

ENJOYED WORK

"I have thoroughly enjoyed the work on both the Board of Education and on the High School Board," he said.

Mr. Seldon recalled that the formation of the Bay of Quinte High School District was the first time in Ontario that a city or urban municipality had joined with rural municipalities in setting up a high school district.

As such it was on strange ground in deciding on many of the accompanying problems with local board members being without the advantage of precedent having been established elsewhere.

City representatives on the high school board next year will be A. C. Campbell, who was re-appointed, and Jack McArthur, who returns to the board again after a few years' absence.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stephens, of Belleville, Ont., were recent guests at the Park Plaza Hotel, while visiting Toronto.

Mrs. Douglas Cummings, of Hallowny, who is a patient in Belleville General Hospital, is progressing favorably following a recent illness.

Canadian Legion LA. Elects Officers

The Ladies' Auxiliary to Branch 99, Canadian Legion, Belleville, held its annual general meeting on December 20, with Mrs. G. Hughes, presiding.

After the meeting was opened, Dr. D. C. McVicker, Zone Commander F.A. was called upon to conduct the election of officers for 1961, which are:

President, Mrs. D. Jeffs; first vice-president, Mrs. B. Hodge; second vice-president, Mrs. E. Blair; treasurer, Mrs. E. Souler; secretary, Mrs. J. Farrary; sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. M. Hughes; chaplain, Mrs. D. Lowery; executive officers, Meadames S. Heesman; A. Ackerman; B. Smith; A. Bradford; E. Meeks, M. Bailey; pianist, Mrs. A. Hardwick.

After the election was completed President Hughes thanked Dr. McVicker and presented him with a gift on behalf of the Auxiliary.

Regular business followed after which refreshments were served by Mrs. B. Batchelor and her committee.

Club Activities

ORR RHO FELLOWSHIP

Two popular Yuletide contingents, Chaos and mixed chorus, were dropped but never forgotten, when the Orr Rho Fellowship ushered in the Christmas season with something new and different, a "Christmas Ramble."

Festivities opening at the church hall for carol singing and to the warmer homes for the exchanging of gifts, dancing and other forms of entertainment, including the showing of various fellowship activities by slides) and the serving of refreshments, the program proved a tremendous success.

The gathering will be the last for the Fellowship until they meet on January 4th to elect new branch officers for 1961.

"White Gift" for needy families was brought by the individual members and were collected previous to the carol singing which was led, on the piano, by Al Gardiner and Marg Eagle. From the church the members re-assembled at the home of Joanne and Herb Cavalier where gifts were exchanged around the Christmas tree, followed by a question and answer quiz. Don Burdett won the quiz and a huge all day sucker for his efforts.

Dancing was on tap, as the members boarded the premises of Betty and. Al Gardiner, with a side-offering of potato chips, cheese dip and drinks to help maintain the pace. Novelty and square dashes served as "breakers" and yielded Ev and Ted Warwick with spot prizes, two giant candy canes. The final stop on the ramble, at the residence of Pat and Earl Tucker, brought the fun-loving fellows to view many highlights, events of the fellowship's past term.

The slides taken and presented by Ted Warwick, of the fellowship, evoked many good-natured remarks and smiles from the members.

Afterward, refreshments were served from a table adorned by a little silver Christmas tree complete with hanging colored balls made for the occasion by Kay Ingraham.

The refreshments were provided and served by Eleanor Butcher, Marj Chambers and Jean James.

The meeting was under the direction of Joanne Cavalier's group.

The program concluded with prayer.

Weddings

MURPHY — CLARK

St. George's Anglican Church, Grafton, Ontario, was the setting on Wednesday, December 14, at high noon for a very pretty wedding when Eleanor Jane (Nell) Clark, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Truscott Clark, became the bride of James Parker Murphy, of High River, Alberta, son of Mrs. William McGown Murphy of High River, Alberta, and the late Mr. Murphy. The Rev. P. H. Knight of Grafton, officiated before an altar banked with white and yellow chrysanthemums.

The traditional organ music was rendered by the church organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her floor - length bridal gown fashioned on princess lines, with fitted bodice, having long sleeves pointed over the wrists. She wore a crown-type headdress with finger-tip veil of illusion tulle, and carried a white prayer book crested with red rosebuds and white streamers.

Miss Jacqueline Skinner, of Belleville, was her only attendant, gowned in flamingo orange, with matching feather hat and shoes and carried a bouquet o' 'mums.

Mr. Dewey Lee, Law of Camp Borden, R.C.A.F. brother-in-law of the bride, attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Harry Simpson, of Belleville, cousin of the bride, ushered the guests.

The reception was held at the Chateau Motel, Cobourg, where the bridal table was appointed in the traditional manner and centred with rosebuds and white 'mums and red roses.

The bride's mother, wearing deep-blue brocade with feather hat, had matching shoes, silver mink stole and pink rose corsage, received the guests, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was attired in black velvet with matching accessories and corsage of pink roses.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride wore a polished wool dress with white tweed-white hat with gold band, matching coat and shoes and a bouquet o' 'mums.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy will reside in High River, Alberta.

GATLAND — WHITELAW

Selkirk United Church, Selkirk, Manitoba, was the scene of a very pretty winter wedding of wide interest on Saturday, December 16, at 8:00 p.m. when Jean Marie Whitelaw of Selkirk, Manitoba, became the bride of Constable Roy James Gatland, R.C.M.P. Regina, Saskatchewan. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Whitelaw of Selkirk. The groom is the son of Mrs. M. E. Moore, of Belleville, Ontario. The bride-groom Dr. G. R. Rogers, of Selkirk, officiated in the candlelight service.

The wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Gordon Bruce, who included "The Wedding Prayer" and "O Perfect Love."

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Joseph Whiteiam, the bride was lovely in her gold brocade gown fashioned on princess lines with scooped neckline and long tulip-point sleeves. She wore a Juliet cap of net petals, and fingertip veil of silk tulle illusion well and carried a shower bouquet of red roses.

She was attended by Mrs. K. Nicolls, of Burnaby, B.C., who was gowned in lime wool dress with matching accessories, and carried an arm bouquet of three large white chrysanthemums, tied with blue satin ribbon.

Constable G. Rouber of Selkirk, Man., attended the bridegroom, while Constables J. P. MacPhee and J. M. Connell, both of Selkirk, ushered.

The reception was held at the Canadian Legion Hall in Selkirk, where the bride's table was appointed in the traditional manner, and centred by candles and holly.

The bridegroom's mother received, attired in pure silk purple peau de sole with black accessories and corsage of yellow carnations.

For the wedding trip to the United States and Southern Ontario, the bride travelled in Oxford-grey ensemble with green accessories, and corsage of holly and white gardenias.

Guests were present from Burnaby, B.C., Belleville, Ont., Selkirk, Dauphin, Brandon and Winnipeg, Manitoba.

The happy couple will reside at 441 Dall Avenue, Beausejour, Manitoba.

The executive extends its appreciative thanks to all those donated the prizes, and wishes for them a very Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Col. Phay Wills Branch Enjoys Pot-Luck

A pot-luck supper combined with a very successful and short business meeting made an enjoyable evening for the members of Col. Phay Wills Branch of the Canadian Legion on Monday night.

A letter of congratulations with well wishes for the new branch was read by the president, Comrade Billy Kerby. It had been received from Comrade Elizabeth Robinson from a former Canadian, now in England, Meadames C. Z. Donaldson, V.R.D., RCN (R), M.P., House of Commons, Ottawa.

Two items had been contributed by members for raffle purposes. The carving board, donated by Comrade Janet MacDonald, was won by Betty McBride and the baby set from Comrade Clara Anderson went to Olive Schmidt.

According to the report from the treasurer, Comrade Val Tucker, the December bake sale was successful, with Mrs. Hoolin and an interesting manner related much history about the legend and explanations of such associations, both ancient and modern.

The wreath is symbolic of victory; candles denote Christ as the light of the World; the star speaks of other worlds and God's heavenly hosts.

Many legends are concerned with the Christmas rose and the mistletoe flower. Martin Luther was perhaps the first to bring a small evergreen tree indoors. This became a custom in Germany, thence in Britain, the evergreens standing all the year round.

God was the first Giver of Gifts, sending His Only Son into the world.

MOST REAL THINGS UNSEEN

St. Nicholas was a fourth-century bishop renowned for his good deeds. Whether in Germany, Italy, Britain or America, the spirit of Santa Claus points up the fact that the most real things in the world are the unseen things.

Mistletoe, a parasitic plant of the laurel family, has survived down the Druid days, Yule Christ.

The five miles from Bethlehem to Jerusalem are typified by the fir trees and the scarlet berries of the holly branches symbolic of the latter.

Although much used in celebrations in Egypt and Rome, it was A.D. when exile were first used by Christians. In Europe are many bells bearing religious inscriptions and some are reverenced almost as humans.

FIRST GREETING CARDS

Cards of greeting were first introduced in England in 1840 and by 1870 had become an accepted custom. By 1884 they probably reached highest perfection in the Raphael Tuck publications. Used with the right spirit, they add to the blessing of Christmas.

More recent symbols are the Christmas T.B. seals, of varied designs, but always incorporating the cross of Lorraine. This idea, originated with a Dane in 1853 but has been adopted in America only since 1907 and then much urging on the part of Miss Bissell.

At the close of the meeting special Christmas refreshments were served by the hostesses; Mrs. J. A. Buchanan, Mrs. J. C. Murdock and Mrs. Ralph Ellis.

'Christmas Symbols' Timely Topic at Woman's Study Guild

"Symbols associated with Christmas" was the timely topic at the Women's Study Guild meeting held at the home of Mrs. A. Weiff, Geddes Street, on Monday night.

During the business meeting, presided over by Mrs. E. A. Fleming, it was decided to accept sponsorship of a child through the Save the Children Fund.

The worship service was led by Mrs. Leslie Reid, who read the Christmas story" from Phillip's translation, which in modern English made it very real. Mrs. Reid continued with a description of the refugee situation in Hong Kong where many are becoming drug addicts because of the lack of ordinary, decent living conditions.

PROGRAM

Mrs. E. A. Orr and Mrs. Wylie, in charge of the program topic, divided the symbols associated with Christmas between them and in an interesting manner related much history about the legend and explanations of such associations, both ancient and modern.

PRETTY — BRADSHAW

Miss Wanda Tyler, of Trenton, and Miss Lois Tyler, of Toronto, cousins of the bride, were bridesmaids. Their gowns were replicas of that of the maid for attendant, fashioned of sapphire velvet, with matching headpieces in rosebud design. They carried bouquets of golden 'mums, tied with velvet and gold ribbon.

The flower girl, Miss Kathy Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Robbins, of Trenton, wore a frock of American Beauty velvet with adorable puffed sleeves and a pretty lace collar edged with lace. She wore a matching bonnet and carried a miniature replica of the bridesmaids' bouquets.

Groomsman was Mr. Helmund Khun, of Frankford and the ushers were, brothers of the bride, Robert and Richard Bradshaw.

For the wedding reception in the CPR hall, the mother of the bride had chosen a navy blue crepe frock with lace insets and a draped lace bodice. Her ensemble was completed by a black hat and gloves. She wore a pearl necklace and a corsage of pink roses.

The mother of the bridegroom assisted, wearing a becoming dress of peacock blue lissue faille, fashioned along Empire lines, with rhinestone jewelry and black accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses.

For the wedding trip around Lake Ontario, the bride wore a peacock blue wool dress with black accessories. She wore a black Persian lamb coat with a feather hat of peacock blue. Her corsage was fashioned of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Pretty have returned from their honeymoon and are presently living in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were from Niagara Falls; Kitchener; Cornwall; Kingston; Consecon; Toronto; Campbellford; Belleville and Frankford.

SHERIFF NAMED

TORONTO (CP) — Philip J. Ambrose, 45, executive officer of the Metropolitan Toronto juvenile and family court, has been appointed sheriff for the county of York, Attorney-General Robarts announced Wednesday. He succeeds Sheriff Col. J. Douglas Canover, 65, retiring because of ill health.

SOCIAL DRINKING AND THE SOCIAL SEASON

During this next two weeks parties and more parties will be the order of the day. Just are you going to weather this storm? Will you have fun, full of pep and really be an addition to any party? Or will you stand around because you are overdoing the celebrating?

Moderation in all things — in work, in play, in eating and drinking — is an attribute well worth cultivating. It is particularly important when it comes to "social drinking." Moderation in this case is for the individual to determine. It's impossible to define what amount of alcohol is moderate for everyone. If you do drink, determine what is moderate for you, and act accordingly (particularly during these next two weeks).

If recently read an article put out by a group of distillers which I believe rather good advice. "If it's a pick-up you need don't depend on alcoholic beverages, if you're tired and run down, see your doctor. Social drinking is for the physically well and mature people who enjoy good food and good drinks, within reason. These are people who know that alcohol, if used at all, must be handled intelligently. "If it's a good reasoning, I'd say.

Goodness knows I am not discussing the "evils of drink"! The point I am trying to make is that social drinking is for good taste. To practice it in the homes of others one must use utter lack of consideration for the hosts and fellow guests. Be sure not to exceed on the old theory that if a little is good, a lot certainly would be better!"

Courtesy works both ways in this instance. The hosts also have an obligation to their guests. If they are clever, they will drink lightly, or not at all, at their own party. They will not follow "the old theory that a party's success is measured in terms of how much liquor is served. They will remember to serve non-alcoholic beverages, as well as hot drinks and fruit juices, for those who may prefer them. They will never force anyone to have a drink. This is an extremely rude habit, and one that is prevalent.

Then there is the person who is afraid he will seem prudish if he refuses a drink. He feels that his popularity will be lessened. There is absolutely no reason why anyone should not refuse a drink if he wishes to do so. Neither is there any reason why he should lose face. It is necessary to give any reason for refusing. If he does, thank you kindly, but pleasantly as if you were saying "Yes." Why a simple "No" that strengthens its purpose as it removes the sting. Expressing a preference for tea or coke is done an impartiality that implies no criticism of those who do not do as you do.

Christmas Concerts

9TH LINE SCHOOL — ST. GEORGE'S H.S.

RYLSTONE — On Monday night, December 19th, Mrs. Miller and her pupils of the 9th Line School, held their annual Christmas concert in the school. The weather was favorable and a good crowd attended.

Dennis Grey one of the senior pupils ably filled the chairmanship for the evening's program: "Welcome," by pupils; recitation, "How Mr. Monkey Saw Jim's," Lynne Spencer; a recitation, "Christmas Activities Class"; recitation, "Speaking Parts," Marlene Shortt; song, "Susie Snowflake," Lynne Spencer; Christmas drill by six girls; recitation, "Santa's Clothing," Lyle Heath; duet, "Holiday for Strings," by Johnny and Jerry Heath; duet, "Donald's Future Wife" by Alan Martin; a play, "Wanted a Mother"; duet, "Christmas," Lynne Spencer and Marlene Shortt; short skit by juniors "December"; poem, in the form of letter, "How Johnny Kept House"; solo, "Long Ago," Maureen Stewart; chorus, "Peace and Good Will"; consolation, Suzanne Spencer; recitation, "What Christ Was Born"; songs by the school, "Silent Night," "Holy" and "There's Just One Santa Claus" by Lynne Spencer and Maureen Stewart taking solo parts.

Santa Claus paid a visit to the part of the children and distributed gifts.

For a school of 18 pupils, mostly juniors it was a splendid concert.

WILLIAMS — ALLEN S. S.

... Now is the time for all good RAWDON — On the evening of December 15th, the entertainment of Awdon Church Hall was filled to capacity for the annual Christmas concert put on by the pupils of the public schools in the community. Williams S.S. and Allen SS 2, with their teachers, Mrs. Rod Parr and Mrs. G. L. Mark.

The hall platform was decorated with red and green paper streamers and the new stage lights were a real attraction. On one corner of the main hall was a large evergreen tree shining with myriad lights and topped by a Santa Claus. The juniors opened the concert by the singing of "Jingle Bells."

Mesdames Hollingshead and Stanley Williams were in charge of the door fees and the proceeds were $43.80. This fine Methodist concert and it was the largest crowd in attendance since 1935.

The Rev. W. G. Fletcher, pastor of Rawdon circuit was chairman for the occasion. He introduced the curtain. Miss Grace Pitman, A.T.C.M., choir supervisor, officiated at the piano during the evening.

Over 40 children stood on the platform for the opening of the program. The juniors from the Williams school, gave an exercise, "Journey to Christmas Land."

The Allan school pupils presented a 10 minute cantata in two scenes, entitled, "Santa's Vacation". The group were all in costume, some carried evergreens, and others glittering stars. The costumes presented elves, fairies, dolls and other nursery rhyme characters—all of the girls were gowned in white and their frames were decorated with tinsel. Kenneth Smith portrayed Santa Claus with Joyce Cooney as Mrs Santa. Shirley Potts sang, "Help Make Christmas a Happy Time for All". Five boys sang, "What Would Christmas be Without a Christmas Tree." Barbara and Brenda Williams sang, "Wonderful Christmas Time." The dialogue was centred on the sad fact that Santa had decided to take a well earned vacation and finally the group sang a chorus on that theme. In the second scene there were various solos and it all ended merrily, when Santa changed his mind and gave up the idea of a vacation.

Twelve pupils of the Williams school presented "The Nativity Scene," which opened with the singing of "Glory be to God Our King." The road to Bethlehem was depicted with Wise men, shepherds, and lastly the Babe in the manger, complete with an old fashioned doll buggy. Several of the children had solo parts.

Both schools gathered on the platform for their closing numbers and all sang three selections, "Sing Ting - a - Ling - a - ling," "Santa Claus Is Coming" and "Jingle Bells."

A jolly old Santa arrived and each child in the audience received a bag of candy after which the many and various gifts around the tree, were distributed.

A special vote of appreciation was tendered the music supervisor; the two public school teachers and the pupils of both schools for their presentation of a splendid concert.

The Council deals with problems of major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.*

Mrs. D. M. — I wish my son would get married.

Anthony N. — Why look for trouble? Maybe if I have no problems.

Mrs. D. N.: Tony is 32 years old. Even though I'm his mother, I can describe him as tall, dark and handsome. With a good job as a news photographer, he's certainly be a catch for some young lady.

But nothing happens. This one's too skinny, that one's too dumb, this one's too expensive, that one's got hay fever. He's taken dozens of lovely girls out and you'd think he'd run out of reasons for not getting hitched. But Tony seems to be looking for some creature that's in his mind, but he's not found her yet on earth.

He can't live with me forever. His friends are all married. Why isn't he ready to the future, and then close one eye and pick somebody?

* * *

Anthony N.: Aren't there some girls around that he could introduce? I'm satisfied the way things are. If I were to force myself to marry for my mother's sake, I might be making her happy but I'd be making myself and some innocent girl miserable.

I love my wife and I required freedom. I must be able to up and go when the fancy takes me wherever a juicy assignment calls me. I'd be a terrible husband. I'm not the type.

At present, I have no problems. I'm enjoying most of the comforts my married friends have, plus the freedom of a bachelor. If I'm lonely, my mother shouldn't worry. She knows I make the best of my bad breaks. Really!

* * *

The Council: Despite Anthony's confident boast that he has no problems, they seem to be sticking out like pin feathers in an inadequate thicking.

The Council: His refusal to admit he had "em We all do. Only the dead and the dumb can escape them. His only choice is the manner in which out of problems he prefers.

Next comes the "problem of facing problems" — reminding and resolving them; one by one, with outside guidance if necessary.

We're sorry to stir up the calm seas of Tony's rationalizations, but the seas are calm only because the sun is shining right now on a straight-run man of 32 with a good job and an indulgent mother. Mrs. D. will end up urging her son to look ahead. A good pot roast isn't sufficient storm sweeper.

Tony may well remain single. He can never plunge to silence Mom. He can even hand her that "no problems" line as a shield. But he can't kid himself. Whether he marries or not, his decision must be based upon true self-knowledge. self-understanding and self-acceptance. He must be realize that he's not avoiding problems but merely putting off them for an assortment he can cope with.

In grappling with the pros and cons of marriage for himself, Tony must ask such questions such as these: Am I unconsciously afraid of what is in my temperament? My needs and goals in life? Or is it an inability to give to others? Is it fear of Failure? Or a fear of responsibility? Am I unconsciously impotent? Or is it just that I don't know yet what I require in a mate?

Tony's problems require answers. And until he finds them, "catch" has plenty of problems whether he ever gets "caught" or not.

IVANHOE W.I.

The December meeting of Ivanhoe W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Howard Cook with 20 members and two visitors present.

The president, Mrs. R. Sprague, opened the meeting by singing "Silent Night" with Mrs. Milton Shaw at the piano.

The members answered the roll call with each one reading an appropriate Christmas verse which proved interesting.

Bills were ordered paid and $10 each were voted to the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto and to the Children's Aranda Hospital, Kingston. Also $25 was voted to a fund to send a sick mother and her family back to her homeland, Scotland.

Christmas cards were sung and an exchange of Christmas gifts followed.

Mrs. R. Ellis spoke of the "Window Treatment" course and said the first meeting on this would be held at her home on the afternoon of January 6th.

The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ross McMurray at 2 p.m.

The members each brought a gift for the Retarded Infants' Home at Plainfield and Mrs. Clayton Wright, volunteered to deliver them.

After the meeting closed with a carol, Mrs. Cooke and her assistants served a delicious Christmas lunch and a social half hour was enjoyed.

After the program the president, Father O'Neil was presented with a gift from the League, followed by a exchange of gifts among the members.

The ladies responded to the dining room where a delicious lunch was served by the hostess and a social half hour, was enjoyed by all.

The Experts Say Easiest Way to Use Up Fruit Cake — Make Pudding

By EDNA BLAKELY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Fruit cake can food that doesn't usually last long enough to be classed a delicacy, says Corinne Trotter, director of nutrition for the Bakery Foods Foundation of Canada.

But there are ways to use up fruit cake that make holidays anyover," she adds.

Probably the easiest way to use up fruit cake is to make it into pudding. Place leftover cake in the top of a double boiler over hot water until the cake is moist and thoroughly heated. Serve as it you would a steamed pudding with hard sauce or hot brandy sauce.

The family or company will be sure to gobble up every last crumb of fruit cake if it is made into a trifle. To make this appetizing and attractive dessert is made by placing a large scoop of ice cream on a piece of fruit cake for each serving. Top with a generous layer sauce.

To make the sauce combine ½ cup cream and ½ cup milk, with sugar and two tablespoons water in a saucepan. Cook until thick, stirring constantly. Cool. Add one tbsp. lemon juice, one tsp. grated lemon rind, dash of nutmeg and ¼ cup cooking sherry. Makes 1¼ cups sauce.

TOO GOOD TO LAST

Chocolate fruitties are sure to be eaten up in a hurry. They can be on the fruit cake. Use leftover or be served as a treat in the kitchen. Cut 56 candied squares from fruit cake. Melt dash of nutmeg and ¼ cup cooking sherry. Makes 1¼ cups sauce. pound of sweet or semi-sweet chocolate in top part of double boiler. Using a sharp-lined fork, dip each cube into melted chocolate. Place on a greased cookie sheet and sprinkle immediately with chopped nuts. Let fruitties in refrigerator until chocolate hardens.

Some families, of course, prefer to eat fruit cake as it is and if it is stored properly it will stay fresh up to one year.

For storage up to several weeks, wrap fruit cake in a clean dry cloth and sprinkle with a few drops of brandy, apple juice or cider.

For storage up to several months, wrap the cake in a moist cloth and keep in a covered, airtight metal container. The cloth should be moistened periodically with brandy or apple juice.

FOR LONGER STORAGE

For storage up to one year, wrap carefully in a moisture-proof wrapping and place in a freezer. The cake will keep if the temperature remains at zero.

The secret to easy slicing is to have the cake cold and the knife hot. Refrigerate the cake until it is quite cold. Use a sharp knife with a straight edge and a thin blade. Dip the knife in hot water before each cut and slice with a slow sawing motion.

Light hand will produce crumble-free slices. If the cake is to be iced with fruit, do not attempt to slice too thinly.

If the cake is to be cut a short time before serving, arrange on a plate, cover with a moistened cloth and store in a cool place.

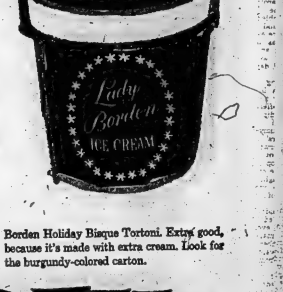
CENTENARY M.B.



CENTENARY. — On Thursday afternoon Centenary Missionary Band held their December meeting at the school with a number of members and M.M.S. members as guests. The meeting was opened by the vice president, Miss Katherine Howard in charge.

The Scripture reading was given by John Mywaart. Six of the Mission Band members sang a Christmas carol.

Mrs. Percy Sutherland, Mission Band superintendent, welcomed the guests and introduced Mrs. E. R. Parrott as guest speaker. Mrs. Townsend described the customs at Christmas in the different countries. This was most interesting and enjoyed by all. The assistant Mission Band superintendent, Mrs. R. Meiburn, on behalf of the Mission Band, presented Mrs. Townsend with a Christmas corsage and expressed thanks for her coming.

The members treated the Mission Band members with candy and cookies.

Cross-Canada Survey

Fewer Turkeys Available But Supply Is Adequate, Prices Higher Everywhere

By WARREN McDOUGALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Probably as many Canadians as ever will have turkey for their Christmas dinner but in most cases they will have paid up to 10 cents a pound more than last year for it.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows that while fewer turkeys are available this year, supply is adequate. And prices are higher everywhere in contrast with last Christmas when over-production drove them down as much as eight cents a pound.

The price variation from province to province is as much as 21 cents, with a low of 49 cents a pound in Saskatchewan and a high of 71 in Newfoundland. If you haven't bought your turkey yet, you can still save as much as eight or nine cents a pound by buying one weighing 18 to 20 pounds or more.

Fears that the higher prices have forced Canadians to turn to other festive birds for the holiday apparently didn't materialize.

"It's tradition," said a spokesman for the British Columbia turkey industry. "People in Canada often will go without something else so they can have a turkey dinner on Christmas."

One reason for smaller production this year is that many producers were driven out of operation. There just wasn't enough profit to make it worthwhile to continue.

While producers have some breathing space this Christmas, many retailers—notably in Manitoba—have shaved profit margins in two or three cents because they are worried about the reaction of customers to the higher prices.

The province - by - province situation:

British Columbia: Retail prices 63 cents for birds up to 18 pounds; 60 for heavier birds—seven to eight cents higher than 1959. Demand remains good.

Alberta: With 28 - per - cent drop in production, prices are up six to eight cents at 53 for birds over 20 pounds and 56 for those between 12 and 16. Supermarket chains were prepared for a price war in the event local processors decided to use turkeys as loss leaders.

Saskatchewan: Production down 25 per cent and prices up five to 10 cents at 49 for Grade B and 57 for Grade A. Chicken and duck prices unchanged from last year.

Manitoba: Hen turkeys up 10 cents and tom turkeys up seven with prices around 53 a pound. Production down 25 to 35 per cent.

Ontario: Prices up to 10 cents higher with Toronto markets selling those under 18 pounds at 59 a pound and heavier birds at 51. At Ottawa, where prices are 55 and 59, there is a demand for geese and ducks.

Quebec: Several weeks before Christmas turkeys were 63 cents a pound and there was a possibility the short supply might force them up to 70.

New Brunswick: Supply is plentiful with fresh birds at 60 and frozen ones around 50.

Nova Scotia: Supply is ample with most popular size, eight to 10 pounds, at 65 cents, 10 cents higher than 1959.

Prince Edward Island: With few home-grown turkeys, prices are up about 10 per cent at 57 cents a pound for larger birds and 63 for smaller.

Newfoundland: Turkeys retail at 71 cents as compared with 59 and 61 last year. The province has a quota on turkey imports from the United States and must rely mainly on producers in Ontario and Quebec, a situation that has pushed prices up.

Business Firms Sponsor Fine Santa Parade

STIRLING — Saturday was a red-letter day in the village of Stirling when approximately 700 children, with their parents gathered along the main streets to enjoy the visit of Santa.

Mr. Maurice Bell led the parade from the Community Hall and a group of members of the Stirling-Rawdon Junior Band followed and contributed gay Christmas music.

Old Santa Claus rode along in a decorated carriage behind a spanking bay horse, driven by Earl Johnson, local baker. The carriage sported a large Christmas wreath at the rear and a huge candy cane, in the whip holster. The parade stopped at the lighted evergreen tree in the centre of the village and here H. C. Bird's truck was filled with bags of confectionery and each child received a gift.

The children enjoyed a free show at the local theatre. The event was sponsored by the Business Men's Section of the Chamber of Commerce of which Mr. Eugene Burrell is secretary-treasurer.

Several of the merchants were on hand to assist in guarding the children and these included Graham Mouch and Robert Halton. A few ladies of the village also gave assistance.

On Wednesday evening special judges will make a tour of the village and choose the best decorated exterior home or store front.

PLAN RADIO PARTY — Don Jackson, department of transport employee at Fort Smith, N.W.T., will team up with ham radio operators throughout the Canadian North Christmas Day for a short-wave Christmas party. Shortwave Holiday Party Enjoyed on Christmas Day By Ham Operators in NWT

By JIM WHELLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

FORT SMITH, N.W.T. (CP)—"CQ—CQ—CQ, this is VE8MJ in Fort Smith, Northwest Territories. Welcome to our northern Christmas party."

This is the call used by Don Jackson, department of transport employee and ham radio operator, on Christmas Day when he joins other Northwest Territories hams on the air for a shortwave holiday party.

Barring interference from the weather or northern lights, ham operators from Hudson Bay to Alaska and from Edmonton to the Arctic coast will join the party to exchange greetings and relay messages to friends and relatives.

The VE8s, licensed radio operators in the Northwest Territories, will be the hosts since the Christmas radio party is their traditional solution to the problem of Yuletide isolation, but guests have been known to join in from as far away as California and New Brunswick.

Many of the VE8s are on the air for some time every day, beating the loneliness of such posts as Coral Harbour, Copper-mine or Fort Wrigley with short-wave talks to friends in the world's bustling cities.

But the Christmas party is something special, turning a day of homesickness and blue notes into fun-filled hours of chatter-ing good cheer.

Some of the operators, such as Don Jackson, have a contact on the "outside" who will join the party to relay telephone calls. Since early November they have kept a list of their northern friends who want to make a Christmas call to loved ones outside.

Their homes will be crowded Dec. 25 with sons phoning their mothers, husbands phoning their wives and single men sending a "Merry Christmas" to their sweethearts.

Priority goes to the high Arctic callers who get through only when the "skip" of the radio waves is just right.

Charlie Overn and Mike Kozens, two of the six white men in Coral Harbour, will be trying to get through to Don Jackson for a chat with their friends in Fort Smith. They were transferred to the lonely Southampton Island post after doing stints with the department of transport here.

Other transport department employees will be calling from Cha Harbor, on the west coast of Baffin Island.

Among the VE8s are teachers, members of the RCMP, mission-aries, northern service officers and others who are temporary residents of the Territories. A few are permanent northerners to whom radio is an integral part of their way of life.

Northport

NORTHPORT — Mr. Fred Kotchapaw, president of the Bay of Quinte Fire Insurance Company, attended the com-pany's annual pre-Christmas banquet, Tuesday noon at the Royal Hotel, Picton.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smith, Lola and Corinne were supper guests on Saturday of Mr. and Mrs. William McCaw, R.R. 9, Picton.

A candlelight Christmas ser-vice was held in the Northport United Church, on Sunday evening, in the church hall.

Mrs. Donald Kotchapaw en-tertained Barbara J. Mills, Cor-inne Smith and Sharon Clow to supper, on Wednesday even-ing in honor of her daughter Marilyn's 8th birthday.

Miss Marie Foster held the school concert on Monday, at Northside Big Island School.

Northport Sunday School are having their Sunday School en-tertainment on Tuesday even-ing, in the W.A. hall.

VOLUNTEERS MARCH — The Cuban government of Fidel Castro has stepped up military preparations while constantly agitating about the possibility of invasion from neighboring countries. Here, units of the Havana University volunteer militia march along the campus in training areas outside the capital. (CP from AP)

Cubans Reported Fearing Invasion Thanks to Way Press, Radio Spew Scares

By JACK BEST
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HAVANA (CP)—The danger of invasion, real or imagined, seems to dominate the average Cuban's thinking. He is kept in a constant state of agitation by the government-controlled press and radio which spew out an increasing torrent of scare propaganda.

The government insists that "counter-revolutionaries" in Guatemala—15,000 is a figure you sometimes hear mentioned—are preparing an attack aimed at toppling the rebel regime of Premier Fidel Castro.

Other hostile elements are said to be plotting against Cuba from Miami, Fla., Nicaragua and other countries in the Caribbean-Gulf of Mexico area.

The country has been turned into an armed camp to meet an invasion that never seems to come. There has, however, been fighting in the provinces. Skirmishes have been reported in the mountains of Las Villas and Oriente, springboards of Castro's own revolution.

In Havana there is said to be a bombing or an outburst of gunfire practically every night.

AIR OF SUSPENSE

The suspense, like waiting for a firecracker to go off, has created a strange sense of unreality in this once-gay metropolis.

"It used to be so idyllic here," said an American woman whose Canadian husband has long been in business here. "Now I wake up in the middle of the night feeling vaguely that something is about to happen."

This feeling of uneasiness is revealed in other ways. Nobody would think—of transacting any but the most harmless business over the telephone. Even foreign embassies assume their phones are tapped.

The regime is reported to have instituted an elaborate spy apparatus. In each city block, it is said, there is an informer who keeps track of people's comings and goings and reports on "counter-revolutionary" activity. Foreign businessmen entrust documents and messages only to those of the best associates and confidential secretaries.

But if there is a sense of unreality in Havana, there is no doubt about the hard facts of military preparation.

TRAIN TROOPS

A shirt-sleeved militiaman conducting a group of foreign visitors from a school at Matanzas, just outside Havana, to a nearby airdrome bristling with guns and olive with ragged-looking trainees remarked:

"It is very emotional. Here you have the little children learning their lessons and half a mile away their older brothers preparing to defend their country."

Preparations for the "invasion" are seen almost everywhere in this island of 6,500,000 lying 90 miles off the coast of Florida.

A Latin - American diplomat said he had heard that Cuba has received 800,000 small weapons from Czechoslovakia. He implied that since the field strength of the army is about 300,000, the extra weapons are for support of operations in other Latin-American countries.

Other estimates of the size of the army range from 500,000 to 1,500,000 but the government itself refuses to say how many there are.

The bulk of those in uniform are militia. They are trained by instructors from the regular army who have received lessons from Czech officers, responsible informants say.

GIRLS IN MILITARY

At a camp a few miles from Marianao, teen-age girls of the Young Rebels Association are in training. Mostly from poor families, they receive education they might not have got under the old regime, and carry on such work as plant culture and fruit farming. Some of the older ones go out to work in steel mills.

They see their parents once a week and are allowed to visit relatives every six weeks. Each girl wears a one-piece, grey uniform and boots. There are some 330 at the camp now but eventually it is planned to accomodate several thousand. There is to be one such camp in each of Cuba's six provinces.

It was just before supper and the women teachers at the camp were undergoing rifle drill in full view of the girls. An official was asked whether the girls themselves, aged 13 to 17, were trained in the use of firearms.

"Not now, but it may become necessary," was the reply.

STIRLING

IOOF Holds Successful Yule Bazaar

STIRLING — On the afternoon of December 17th, Stirling Lodge No. 229 IOOF, held their annual Christmas tree and bazaar, at the Odd Fellows Hall, Charlotte Street.

The banquet hall was decorated with evergreen boughs and a novel arrangement of Christmas favors, which enclosed the tea room with its white gates of entry. The quartet tables were covered with pretty luncheon cloths and centred with red and green lighted tapers set in small containers. The candles were trimmed with artificial poinsettias.

The guests were served the proverbial cup of tea, and an abundance of sandwiches and cookies.

Brother Robert Hulin invited the guests to the tea room and those who served were Brothers Ray Sine, Gorden Richardson and O. Sharp.

Those in charge of kitchen duties and replenishing the plates, were: Brother Charles Carter; Sisters Marion Carter and Hilda Rose; and Mrs. Glenn Clarke and Mrs. Roy Tucker.

The guests were welcomed by Noble Grand Bro. Ben Jones, and Bro. Karl Sine was treasurer, for the tea.

A 13 piece 8 MM movie outfit which included, camera projector, screen, lights and valued at $200, was artistically displayed on a long table and Bro. Glenn Bush was in charge of the ticket sales. At 5 p.m., little Anne Glendinning drew the lucky ticket and the winner was Brother Ray Rose.

The candy booth was in charge of Bro. John Kane and his assistant Bro. Ivan Sine. Here, was displayed boxes of fudge and an assortment of home-made confections, all arranged in cellophane bags.

The farmer's booth which was in charge of Bro. George Carlisle and his assistant, Bro. Stan Thompson was filled with a large variety of small packages of cheese, fresh eggs, potatoes and vegetables, relish, jams and jellies, pickles, and numerous other articles, including knitted mitts.

The bake table was conveyed by Bro. Glenn Clarke and the table was covered with delectable food. Mince pie predominated; with pumpkin a close second. There were tarts and berry, a large variety of cookies, both rolled and decorated, and plain dropped ones with fruit. The angel cakes, chocolate and white layers and fruit loaves, all made a good variety to choose from, for eager buyers. The centrepieces and decorations were fashioned by Sister Joyce Richardson.

Brother Percy Trotter conveyed this successful bazaar and he voiced appreciation to all the members and friends of IOOF who had assisted in making this affair a success.

At the close, Bro. Earl Fox, auctioned off the few remaining articles that were not sold, and the Lodge will realize a nice sum for their efforts.

Andre Gaubiac Ready for Year's Visit to Canada

PARIS (CP) — A stocky, amiable Frenchman goes to Canada for the first time next month on a year-long visit during which he hopes will benefit everyone concerned except the Jesa, lawmaking citizens of Montreal.

Until his retirement last January at the age of 60, Andre Gaubiac was the general-director of its Paris police force.

Together with divisional commander Andre Way of Montreal Yard, he has been invited by Mayor Jean Drapeau to help Montreal reorganize its police force.

"I don't want to know anything about Canada before I get there," he told a reporter. "I won't read a book or a paper. I want to go and see for myself."

REORGANIZED OWN FORCE

Though he has yet to be briefed on Montreal's particular problems, Gaubiac is an old hand at reorganizing police departments.

Two years ago, when the Paris prefecture was harassed by an overspill of political terrorism arising from the Algerian war, he supervised the reorganization of his own force.

"We haven't learned how to prevent crime," he said. "But we have learned how to make more arrests and improve our performance generally with modern methods of identification, communication and transport."

Born in the south of France, Gaubiac saw service in the first World War, later obtained his law degree and joined the Paris force in 1922 as an assistant commissioner.

Not-so-Smart Tax Says Editorial In Daily News

NEW YORK (CP) — The Daily News says editorially that Finance Minister Fleming of Canada has taken "a hasty hack at Canada's tax code" in his budget.

Under the heading of "not-so-smart tax," The News editorial criticizes the Canadian government's action in increasing from 15 to 25 per cent from five per cent the Canadian withholding tax on dividends of American-co-n trolled companies.

"Such a 200 per cent tax increase can only discourage investment in Canada," the paper says.

The News, which has a circulation of about 2,000,000—largest of any newspaper in the U.S.—notes that Canadians "have done considerable worrying about U.S. investment capital rushing into their country.

"They don't keep this money out, and they can't get up enough oil fast enough to develop their enormous natural resources properly; but they do give a good deal about Canada becoming a U.S. 'economic colony'," the editorial says, concludes.

"There must be easier, less irritating ways to taper off any economic implications that may exist between the two countries. We'd suggest that Mr. Fleming look around a bit further and forget this move to take a big bite out of Canada's nose to spite Canada's face."

Only three more days, so here's wishing you all the very best for Christmas and for the coming year.

Every helper here stands for a different figure, and the year is already filled in.

Christmas Dinner With Trimmings In Mess Halls

FRANKFURT (AP) — Canadian servicemen and their families in Germany will celebrate Christmas as a typical Canadian holiday with traditional Canadian ingredients mixed in.

Special arrangements have been made for the men of the 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade at 1 Soest, consisting of the two fighter wings of the RCAF based at Soest, and the garrison near the Black Forest and at Zweibruecken in the Saarland.

Common for all will be the traditional Christmas dinner for the British soldiers in the mess halls to have turkey with all the trimmings served there by their officers and senior non-commissioned officers.

Services on Christmas Eve will be read in the 4th Brigade area by Col. R. C. H. Chisholm; director of chaplains and senior chaplain of the Canadian forces who will spend the holidays with the brigade.

TREES BEAUTIFUL

There are Christmas trees in abundance in the land where the fire custom originated and there'll be one for every Canadian home.

Extra rations of beer and cigarets, donated by Canadian manufacturers, are on hand to be given out to the servicemen.

The Canadians are also planning to help spread Christmas cheer to the needy in their areas.

FORMER CONCENTRATION CAMP COMMANDER ARRESTED — Richard Baer, right, former commander of the Nazis' Auschwitz concentration camp in World War II, is escorted by plainclothes police on arrival at Frankfurt. Baer, 43, was arrested near Hamburg where he had been working under an assumed name. He faces charges of murdering thousands of Jews in the camp's gas chambers. (AP Wirephoto).

Jet Reported As Streaking Off Course

NEW YORK (AP)—A United Air Lines jet airliner was reported in radio tapes released Wednesday as streaking off course toward Brooklyn just before last Friday's disastrous collision with a Trans World Airlines Constellation.

The Constellation was being brought into Laguardia Airport when the approach controller there got the following alert:

"This is Laguardia. I think we've got an emergency. Nobody declared anything, but who is that jet or Air Force-type aircraft that went from Preston toward Flatbush?"

"From Preston (N.J.) toward Flatbush?" the Idlewild controller asked.

"Yes, he's at Flatbush right now," Laguardia said.

"A fast-moving aircraft going where?" Idlewild again queried. "Do you know his destination."

"I don't know," Laguardia replied. "I think he may have—now listen, listen to this! He may have hit one of our aircraft. We're not sure."

An instant later, Laguardia added:

"All right, now we got troubles but we're not sure of it. We lost contact with a TWA, 266 I believe his number is. He was in a collision course with an aircraft, an unknown aircraft heading northeast from Preston toward Flatbush ....."

At that time, the Union supposedly—as it was on the ground controllers knew—was over the Raritan, N.J., "holding" area, awaiting clearance to land at Idlewild.

REPEAT WORDS

The radio tapes also repeated the dramatic words of the Laguardia controller at the instant of the bizarre collision. He cried:

"I think we have trouble here with a TWA Contio. There's something coming in here on—no—no or anything. He might have got hit by another aircraft."

The controller apparently was referring to the Trans World Airlines Constellation on radar as it moved toward Laguardia field.

A collision of the two airliners left passenger ship.

The Constellation plunged to earth on Staten Island, carrying all 73 persons aboard to their death. The United jet went down in Brooklyn, killing 81 persons aboard, plus seven on the ground.

Deputy Minister Retires After 33 Years' Service

TORONTO (CP)—H. C. Rickaby, deputy minister of mines, left his Queen's Park office Wednesday for the last time after completing 33 years of service with the government.

Mr. Rickaby, who joined the department as geologist in 1927, plans to begin his retirement with a world cruise. He and Mrs. Rickaby leave their Cobalt home for Victoria to meet their ship at Vancouver.

Mr. Rickaby, who was born at Orono, and later returned to teach there, was a lecturer in mineralogy at Ife University of Toronto before he joined the department of mines.

Recent NATO Paris Meetings Said 'Just a Waste of Time'

By STEWART MacLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Regardless of what was said at the political level, British military reaction to the recent NATO meetings in Paris clearly labels them a waste of time.

The unofficial opinion among many senior officers appears to be unanimous — that the meetings held just prior to the end of the present American administration, could not hope to accomplish anything.

The officers seem to feel that the new U.S. administration will be in office long enough to have time to study the situation before any decisions are made. —when 15 nations are involved—a truly representative complex there is generally realized, and there is even some feeling that this problem was not approached from the right angle.

Others were a great deal of concern about having 15 fingers on one trigger," said an officer, "but what's far worse is having 15 fingers on the safety catch at a political moment."

The communique from the Paris talks is under heavy military scrutiny in London for it created little excitement. One officer termed it "a row of beans."

The tentative American offer to supply five Polaris - carrying submarines to NATO was viewed as a somewhat nebulous one, and when seen through the mass of complications that may be involved.

Although the Americans suggested 1963 as a possible date for assigning the subs, there are doubts in London over whether it would be possible before 1965, because of existing commitments to the United States Navy.

But even if Britain got the subs, under the tentative plan they would be attached to the American Sixth Fleet and the NATO commander - in - chief would get no say as to where they after war had been declared.

"By that time," said one officer, "what does it matter who has control — why not let the American navy have them?"

From a military point of view there is a feeling that the situation within NATO is exactly the same as it was eight months ago, except for a few minor changes.

But there is also a feeling that the next NATO meeting in Oslo in May could make more progress. By then, it is reasoned, the new U.S. administration will have settled in ready to expound, and support, its own ideas.

Hunt Bodies Of Plane Crew

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Sea and air search continues today for the bodies of seven crew members of a United States Navy aircraft that crashed into the Atlantic off southern Newfoundland Wednesday with nine men aboard.

Two bodies were picked up Wednesday night in the wreckage of the plane—a P2-V Neptune out of Argentia, Nfld.—17 miles south of Cape Pine on the peninsula community of Cape Race.

The U.S. freighter American Clipper discovered the wreckage after finding an empty life raft and a life preserver during search operations.

Cause of the crash was not determined.

Iron Out Dispute

ORILLIA (CP)—A dispute over the suspension of fireman Robert W. McDonald was "ironed out" at a meeting of the town police committee Tuesday night, acting chairman Robert White announced Wednesday.

Although Mr. MacDonald was still under suspension Wednesday morning, he is due for reinstatement at any time.

He was suspended from the force Saturday for refusing an order given by department Lieut. Robert Shropshire to remove garbage from the upstairs apartment of Constable MacMillan while Mr. MacLeish was in Toronto and Mrs. MacLeish was asleep.

Reaction to Budget Ranges From Quiet Praise to Great Disappointment for Labor

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reaction to Finance Minister Fleming's "hole - in - the - bucket" budget ranged from quiet praise to insistence that it fails to get to the root of Canada's economic problems.

Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan said Wednesday the budget fails to get at the seat of Canada's economic troubles. British Columbia's Premier Bennett said the budget shows the government misunderstands those troubles.

However, in London, Ont., President Joseph Jeffrey of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce praised the budget as "a step in the right direction" because of the help it gives to industry.

Maritimers were happy about Mr. Fleming's proposal to double the depreciation for one year on industries that will establish in depressed areas.

Ontario Conservative Premier Frost said Ontario's $320,000,000 development program set for next year will be put ahead because the province will not be able to borrow in the U.S. Both he and Trade Minister Boomer of British Columbia said the restrictions on foreign borrowing must be accompanied by more strong opposition to U.S. trade moves.

On the municipal level, Chairman Fred Gardiner of Metropolitan Toronto said Metro may have to defer some projects for a year.

He said Metro has done 40 per cent of its financing in the U.S. and many of the loans were.

Provincial Treasurer Woodrow Lloyd of Saskatchewan said his province will be among those to who will have to pay more for foreign money.

President Claude Jodoin of the Canadian Labor Congress said it was "a great disappointment" that there was no general tax relief to stimulate the economy.

President Charles Brooks of the United Auto Workers, Local 444, (CLC) Wednesday says he will see how far the federal government will go in its "Canada first" program. He said the budget proposals agree with his local's brief to the Bladen commission on the auto industry which recommended developing an all-Canadian car industry.

Mr. Brooks said federal and provincial members of Parliament will be invited to a meeting in Windsor during the Christmas parliamentary recess.

"We plan to ask the local MPs in both governments to further their budget action by making the initial capital available to establish or assist in establishing appropriate industries that Canadians would invest in.

"The same kind of assistance could also be given to Canadian companies now fighting for survival."

The National Federation of Canadian University Students said it is pleased with the budgetary measures providing relief for some university students and their parents.

"However, it must be stressed that this move only provides relief only for students earning more than $1,000 in a summer—a very small minority. Direct assistance in the form of bursaries is still very much in need."

White Christmas Out for Airmen Based in France

METZ, France (AP) — For Canada's 12,000 airmen in this area, this probably won't be the white Christmas they are accustomed to back home. If the weather follows its usual pattern, "a cold, damp, and most likely foggy, day is in store.

For many of the men of the RCAF's 1st Air Division, standing guard as part of the NATO forces, Christmas will be like any other day except for a meal on the main on the alert and radar and supporting ground crew will take up their shifts as usual.

The main difference will be the gifts from home and a special turkey dinner in the mess hall served by their commanding officers.

Most of the division's married servicemen—about 75 per cent—will be able to stay home with their families.

In London, the day will probably begin with church services. Then there will most likely be turkey, with wine and champagne.

Visits to and from French friends will probably be made in the afternoon.

PARTIES SHARED

"There's a lot of mixing between our people and the French," said Wing Commander Don Hodds of Calgary, "and at time one of our men leaves France, he usually speaks the language. Flight Lieut. Ted Metz gave a pre-Christmas ball, and many of our men were present.

"Our mess halls sometimes give Christmas parties, and it is of course invite French friends to them."

But numerous leaves were requested by the men stationed at Metz, Cros Trecaux and Nancy-Ville. Favorite leave centres are Paris, the south of France, French, Swiss and Austrian ski resorts.

Airmen and their families have joined to raise funds for Christmas parties, with most of the money going to orphanages, old people's homes and refugees.

No Santa Claus In Castro's Cuba This Christmas

HAVANA (AP) — No, Marie, there is no Santa Claus—not in Premier Fidel Castro's Cuba.

Santa vanished along with Christmas in the United States, another victim of Castro's Communist blizzard.

The more typically Cuban gift-bearers, the three kings, arrive January 6. Then Cuban children will awaken to find toys from Russia, Czechoslovakia, Communist China and other Iron Curtain countries.

The displacement of Santa by "Uncle Nikita" is evident. Many Cubans will sit down Christmas Eve to Russian caviar, not the Soviet Union.

But for most Cubans, it won't seem like Christmas without Santa. Instead of roast turkey — pork — garnished with rice and black beans.

SHORTAGE THE SHORTAGE

Shoppers report lechon scarce. An underground newspaper explains the shortage:

"For the first time the Cuban people will celebrate Christmas. Gentlemen, how good communism is!"

Black beans also are hard to find. There are no apples and grapes are very scarce. But the government promises Czechoslovakia will send more fruit for the holidays.

In addition to food shortages, bitterness and personal unhappiness hang heavy over this second communist Christmas.

On the night before Christmas 1958, Batista fled into exile. And soon—not an anti-Castro Cuban is safe in his celebration. They have quietly adopted a protest policy of non-observance, except for a few or two for the kids.

The mass exodus of Cubans to the United States in the Castro era has left many families broken for the holidays.

Possibly searing the lack of Christmas spirit, the government-run newspaper El Mundo says Christmas' festivals will be held at various times outside Havana as usual.

ASKS DAIRY HELP

OTTAWA (CP)—Pierre Cole, president of the National Dairy Council, called Wednesday for "far-reaching government policy changes" to "rehabilitate the $1,000,000,000 - a - year Canadian dairy industry." Mr. Cole said in a year-end statement that heavy surpluses hang over the market as a result of declining consumption of butter and whole fluid milk, "which account for 82 per cent of all milk processed in Canada."

28 Students Die In Philippines' Plane Crash

MANILA (AP) — A Philippine airliner carrying college students home for Christmas crashed before dawn today moments after taking off from Cebu. It carried 28 of the 31 persons aboard to a shocking death.

The nine survivors suffered burns, fractures and cuts. One woman was quoted as recovering from the wreckage in critical condition.

Most of the 34 passengers were college students in Manila en route to their homes in the south Philippines. The flight had originated in Davao on Mindanao Island its destination.

The twin-engined DC-3 plunged into a rice field and witnesses said they heard an explosion.

The engine suddenly stopped," said Rose Vera Cruz, 22, one of the survivors among those fastened myself with the seat belt. Then I remember nothing more."

Just 29 days ago another DC-3 of the same air line on a night flight crashed in the mountains on Mindoro Island, south of Manila, killing all 33 on board.

Col. W. O. Morris Dies in Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—Col. William Otter Morris, 75, of Toronto, born at a beleguered North West Mounted Police outpost during the 1885 Riel uprising and descendant of a famous family in earlier life, died Wednesday at Sunnybrook Hospital.

Col. Morris was born at the Battleford, Sask., garrison commanded by Lieut.-Colonel Herbert W. S. Morris, on the day the rebel forces relieved the siege of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada.

He commanded the 75th Battalion during the First World War and was a former commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross between 1911 and 1923 and, was decorated by the Serbian government. He was also a former president and prime as winner of the Dominion rifle championship. He had been a member of the Toronto Curling Club since 1933.

NOW IN COUNCIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Feb. McGregor, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for York East, who has spoken in the Commons only once in 35 years, was given an honorary post Wednesday which isn't likely to call on him to be any more vocal. Prime Minister Diefenbaker had his sworn in at Government House as a member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada.

Engineer Denies Striking Man

TORONTO (CP) — A scuffle broke out Wednesday between a citizen and a city engineer during a hectic board of control meeting.

Thomas Watkins said he was struck on the arm by John Argo, consulting engineer employed to advise the city on construction projects. The engineer denied striking him.

The scuffle climaxed a meeting at which an inquiry into alleged proposals aimed at overcoming water woes and fire discrimination was given a new lease of life.

SEARCH FOR GAS AND OIL — Making its own road as it goes, an oil seismic party heads into the mountains near Inuvik, Alta., to study underground rock formations. Western Canada Oil Industry Had Good Year in 1960 Despite Gas Competition

By DENNIS ORCHARD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CALGARY (CP) — Western Canadian oilmen continued to hold down production in 1960 but it was a good year for the industry's younger brother, natural gas.

While the crude oil picture did not show much change, the future of natural gas opened in spectacular dimensions when the national energy board in Ottawa approved two projects for the export of gas to yawning United States markets.

Trans - Canada Pipelines Limited received the go-ahead to export 204,500,000 cubic feet of gas daily to markets in the U.S. Midwest.

Pacific Gig and Electric Company Limited of California, together with a number of Canadian allies and subsidiaries, got the green light to send 400,000,000 cubic feet daily to California and Pacific northwest states.

The first contracts for the latter project were let in September and Alberta contractors set to work on the Canadian sections of the 1,400-mile pipeline.

BOOST EXPORTS

One source said approval of gas projects by Ottawa and Washington would mean an increase of 600 per cent in natural gas exports to the U.S. by 1962.

The long-range outlook for oil producers remains bright but for most of 1960 the industry in Western Canada ran about 50 per cent of capacity — producing about 500,000 barrels daily.

Alberta's estimated oil production for the year was 131,700,000 barrels of crude, a shade better than the 1959 figure.

Saskatchewan oil production was up about seven per cent from 1959 and for the first time was expected to pass the 50,000,000-barrel mark for a 12-month period.

Manitoba crude production was estimated at 4,720,000 barrels compared with 6,000,000 in the record year of 1957. Officials expected production levels to be maintained.

Oil production in British Columbia was headed for a record 950,000 barrels but the accent there was on natural gas.

Nearly $100,000,000 was spent in B.C. this year go oil-gas exploration, pipelines and processing plants and indications are that twice as much will be spent in the province next year.

LOOK TO MONTREAL

Domestic warfare was waged between Canadian - owned independent oil companies and the "majors" — international companies such as Imperial Oil, Texaco, Shell and British-American.

The latter, with interests in such troubled areas as Venezuela and the Middle East, were anxious to keep their products moving from all fields.

The independent, with fields entirely in Canada and mostly in Alberta, sought assurances of greater domestic markets for their crude oil.

With eyes on the lucrative Montreal market — now served mostly by imported oil—some of the independents asked for an Alberta - to - Montreal pipeline. They wanted Canadian refineries, as far as possible, to take Canadian production.

Two other developments, both in Alberta, suggested new directions for both the oil and natural gas industries in the next few years.

The Great Canadian Oil Sands Limited, a New York - based company, asked the Alberta oil and gas conservation board for the right to develop commercially the Athabasca oil sands in northern Alberta. The board deferred its decision until June, 1962. The sands are believed to contain more than 300,000,000,000 barrels of oil.

DRILL IN ARCTIC

The second development was a series of hearings before the conservation board asking approval of projects to gather and export natural gas byproducts from Alberta fields. Four companies with overlapping proposals committed themselves to investments totalling $200,000,000. The board has not yet made a decision.

Still another field of possible development was in the Arctic where geologists estimate there are 500,000,000 barrels of recoverable oil. There is talk that the first wells may be drilled next summer in several islands of the Queen Elizabeth group. More than 40,000,000 acres of territory in the far northern islands are under federal permit.

Kennedy's Cabinet Ideally Suited to Modern Views

By DAVID ROWNTREE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

John Kennedy has picked a cabinet that seems ideally suited to meet the president-elect's ideas into practice.

There seems little doubt that Kennedy plans to be a captain who sticks close to the bridge in piloting the ship of state. His cabinet men for the most part will be administrators rather than grand policy makers.

Kennedy may have decided to emphasize conservatism and administrative ability in his cabinet selections in acknowledgement of his slim popular vote victory.

But it has been noted that President Franklin Roosevelt found it useful to have able but unexciting men for the job of guiding new ideas into practice. And Kennedy has served notice that despite the narrowness of his election, he is going to be a strong president.

A number of democrats were dismayed when neither Adlai Stevenson nor Wilmot Hobbs were named secretary of state. Both seemed to be talking about foreign affairs in much the same way Kennedy did during the campaign.

WAS COUNTED OUT

Fulbright, a senator from Arkansas, was counted out because of his support for racial segregation which would hinder Kennedy's plans to make Africa a prime area of U.S. concern for the next few years.

Stevenson's being passed over could be explained either because his selection would offend ultra-conservatives in the U.S. or because his views are farther to the left than Kennedy's.

Many economists believe the main reason for the president-elect's desire to hold the chief reins of government in his own hands and thus by implication to diminish the importance of his secretary of state.

His choice of two impeccable Republicans with impressive academic and business qualifications for the second and third ranking cabinet posts, the treasury and defence, appear designed to answer election-campaign criticism that he would weaken the country's defences and embark on unsound financial policies.

But with Douglas Dillon, president-secretary of state and a former Wall Street banker, accepting the post of secretary of the treasury, the business community may in time realize that Kennedy's election doesn't represent a sudden swing to the left in politics. A similar argument can be put forward about the acceptance of the defence position by Robert McNamara, president of the Ford Motor Company.

With the team complete, the next concern is what Kennedy will ask it to do after he moves into the White House Jan. 20.

Murderer of Thousands of Jews Demands He Be Treated as Officer

FRANKFURT (AP) — Richard Baer, bandoffest and demanding treatment as an officer, was brought here yesterday to face charges of murdering thousands of Jews in the gas chambers of Auschwitz concentration camp.

Baer, 59-year-old former master of the Nazi dead, was Auschwitz' last commandant.

Some 2,000,000 persons were exterminated at Auschwitz, Poland. Jews were taken to Auschwitz as part of the Nazi "final solution" of the "Jewish problem."

Adolf Eichmann, run down by Israeli agents in Argentina earlier this year, now is awaiting trial in Israel for allegedly directing the extermination of some 6,000,000 Jews under the Nazis.

Baer, who commanded Auschwitz from May, 1944 to January, 1945, succeeded Rudolf Hoess who was sentenced to death and executed after the war in Poland.

German police arrested Baer Tuesday at Dassendorf, near Hamburg, where he had been working as a master lumberman under an assumed name.

"I am an officer," he asserted when arrested. "Treat me accordingly."

He was manacled and with a heavy guard put on a train for Frankfurt.

State attorney Heinz Wolf said Baer is charged with murdering Jews in the camp and also during a retreat from the camp in January 1945 as Soviet armies approached. He did not say when Baer's trial will start.

Authorities learned last October that Baer was alive and offered a 10,000-mark ($2,380) reward for his capture.

More than 100 tips poured in from all over Germany, Wolf said, and investigators checked out each one.

It was learned a master lumberman named "Neumann," who lived at Dassendorf on the Prince Bismarck estate, might be Baer. Samples of Neumann's handwriting were obtained and sent to the allied document center in Berlin for checking.

This disclosed "Neumann's" true identity, which he at first denied when police approached with guns drawn.

He was taken to the shack where he had been living and his wife, who for years lived in the Hamburg suburb of Bergedorf and maintained Baer was dead, stepped out.

"Oh, daddy, what's happened?" she said.

At this, police said, their prisoner said: "All right, I'm Baer."

"Lines on Life"

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Speak to parents and you will soon get the impression that something has gone wrong with the modern child-rearing. What can you do with them?" . . . this seems to be the universal agonizing wail of embattled fathers and mothers. But if something has wrong with our children is there not the "tainted" possibility that something has, in the first instance, gone wrong with our parents? Are we parents really communicating? Perhaps we are really not saying very much! Is not much of our difficulty as parents born of the fact that children are really hero-worshippers, who must stop worshipping the hero when he no longer serves as the model for their lives? Are not many of our problems which exist between parents and growing children in our society, the result of parents who have lost contact with the potential and the psychological need of our children? We clothe them, we feed them, we feed them! But do we inspire them? Is there much shame in that they would like to emulate?

It is not unusual to see a little girl of four or five to say that when she grows up she is going to marry her daddy, or a boy to think similarly regarding his mother. As our children grow older and are drawn away from the binding circle of intimate family-life; when they begin to take new flights with new-grown wings beyond the home into the wider-world — do they still find in us, their parents, the pattern of life, worthy of emulation? Not too often.

And why not? Principally, because most of us shut the world out of our view and our self-imprisoned. While our children are growing and outgrowing, we are declining, grinding away at our narrow little pre-occupations. Our children are being taught how to read, to think more clearly, to meet the larger world outside; and we have reached our peak and are trying to maintain our status quo. It is true that some few children suffer an inferiority complex all their lives because they never feel that they have quite reached the achievement or can as easily maintain the level of living which one or both of their parents have done. It is also a spectacle indeed, to behold children of great men, forever living in the shadow of their parents. But, far more common and far more tragic is the reverse situation; when our children grow up, when their interests no longer serve as the heroes and pattern for their lives.

When what we have to say to our children is something that can be heard, something that evokes response, we are on the way toward moulding a life-long relationship that can never be transcended by any other authority. Sometimes, as parents we wonder why our children rebel against our authority and yet seem quite prepared to follow the dictates of others — of friends, teachers, neighbors. "Why does my child, said one father recently, "why does he listen to his Scout leader, and not to me?" "Well" came the reply, "what have you done with him lately?" We do not lead our children merely by asserting authority. We lead them when we coerce least; we lead best when we participate in the life of our children — when, instead of only doing things for them — we also do things with them. How do you participate best? and when evoke the best that lies dormant within them, at such an age when they themselves would like to be.

Negro Singer Not Wanted Says Liberal

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC said Wednesday the voice of Negro singer Paul Robeson will be beamed across Canada Christmas Day.

Orlas J. Godin (L — Nickel Belt) asked Prime Minister Diefenbaker in the Commons Tuesday to take steps to prevent the American singer from taking part in the marathon program.

The previous day Mr. Godin described Robeson as an "international Communist."

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Mr. Godin's request came "strangely from the (Liberal) opposition, who on so many occasions in righteous wrath have suggested there should be no interference, even in the slightest degree, with the freedom of the CBC to do as it will."

Robeson, a CBC official said Wednesday will sing Christmas songs for 30 minutes in a marathon program lasting from 12:15 p.m. EST Christmas Day to 5:30 p.m.

New Program

TORONTO (CP) — An emergency unemployment program to exert pressure on the government and step up job re-training was announced Wednesday by the United Steelworkers of America.

Larry Sefton, director of the 85,000 - member District 6, instructed all locals in the district from the Quebec border to the West Coast to establish special committees on unemployment.

The committees would approach all levels of government for increased public works, Mr. Sefton said. They would call communities conferences on unemployment and press for legislation for a 40-hour work week and higher minimum wage.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARRIER, Sports Editor

Well, we thought we had heard practically everything in the world of sport, but this one takes Aunt Nancy's bustle.

Kay Ambrose, a set designer for the National Ballet of Canada, says wrestling and the ballet have an affinity.

In other words, Miss Ambrose thinks the gravel-tonsiled crowd that delights in watching Yukon Eric make human hamburg out of Ivan the Terrible, should be right in there with the ankle and armine set when the ballet comes to town.

Hockey fans, too, says Miss Ambrose would make fine aficionados of the ballet.

Two of her greatest friends are "Rocket" Richard and Jean Beliveau and they just love ballet." And ballet loves them too, she claims.

"It is all a matter of motion. We are interested in body motion and we are continually discovering an affinity between ballet dancers and hockey players. I have a whole scrap-book of these fellows tearing each other's pants off," she said.

Come, come, Miss Ambrose. I think the affinity ends there. I cannot picture ballet dancers doing such terrible things to one another. And right in full view of an audience? Wow!

"This is what I mean," Miss Ambrose said to a reporter, producing a sketch of the Rangers' Camille Henry shooting on goal. Alongside is a picture of a ballet dancer executing an "arabesque penchee avec pile."

She said Doug Harvey starts his rushes with "pas de bourree sur les pointes." The Rocket, she claims, owes much of his brilliance to "dans tendu les positions de corps." You won't see much of that in the district junior "B" league.

She thinks Carl Brewer would look "just marvellous" in a pair of tights skating for an ice show. Gordie Howe looks as if "he's out for a stroll."

When in a National Hockey League city, Miss Ambrose gets a rinkside seat and keeps busy tracing in a sketch book that affinity between the eggbeat and a bodycheck.

But this alleged affinity between the ballet and wrestling (the pro style) gets me. I cannot, with the wildest stretch of imagination, visualize the Mighty Jumbo and Big Humphrey kicking up their heels in a pas de deux.

And I would like to know the ballet nom-de-plume for that heavyweight bout staged a little while ago between Gordie Howe and Lou Fontinato when the big Red Wing parried Lou's echnozzle neatly and colorfully under his left bar.

The only connection between ballet and wrestling that I have seen was the colorful Ricki Starr, who was an honest-to-goodness ballet dancer. Ricki wrestled here a couple of times a few years ago and was a popular hit overnight with his extreme grace and agility.

It could have been the "Dying Swan" act that Ricki and Flug-ugly Lou (The Lear) Henning staged, but any resemblance between Henning and a dead swan after the bout was over was purely imaginative.

Miss Ambrose loved her wrestlers from the fortieth row back until one night she happened to see Antonino Rocca in action. Rocca sometimes trains with ballet dancers.

"I love to watch Mr. Rocca's flying knee scissors," said Miss Ambrose. "When well done it is quite an enjoyable as some moments in Les Sylphides."

"Perhaps I should have told the Edmonton Eskimos a couple of weeks prior to the Grey Cup the secret of the Ottawa Rough Riders' Ron Stewart's elusiveness," sighed Miss Ambrose.

You guessed it, "Ballet. He started it when he was twelve years of age," said Miss Ambrose. For her the Grey Cup was decided when she heard Riders and Stewart would compete.

Earn Tie With Hawks

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach Alf Pike of New York Rangers removed his goaltender in favor of an extra forward against Chicago Black Hawks in the National Hockey League's only game Wednesday night and it worked for a 3-3 tie.

Rangers were trailing 3-1 when Chicago defenceman Al Arbour was given a minor penalty at 18:18 of the third period. Pike removed goalie Lorne Worsley, giving the Rangers six attackers to Chicago's four. At 19:23, Andy Hebenton fired a 30-footer out of a melee of players in front of the Chicago net and beat goalie Glenn Hall for the tying goal.

The tie gave the fifth - place Rangers 28 points to tie them for standings, leaving them seven points behind the fourth - place Black Hawks.

The Hawks have won only once and tied three times in their last 19 games.

Hebenton's goal was his first in six games and his 13th of the season.

TOOK A BAD HOP

New York's other goal came at 16:42 of the first period when Johnny Wilson's 85-footer took a bad hop and caught Hall high in the net.

Hon Murphy and Earl Balfour scored for the Hawks. Murphy's goal came at 9:59 of the first period when he took a pass from Ted Sloan, directly after a face-off, and slapped the puck behind Worsley.

The Hawks were shorthanded when Balfour, a defensive specialist, backhanded a shot into the third goal of the season at 13:06 of the second period. Bill Hicke and Dollard St. Laurent broke away from the Rangers and swooped in on the goalie but Balfour taking St. Laurent's pass and getting behind defenceman Bill Gadsby for the shot.

Referee John Ashley handed out 13 penalties, including misconducts to Chicago's Murray Balfour and Pierre Pilote in the second period.

Hall made 28 saves while Worsley stopped 23.

The Hawks have another game coming up tonight against the Bruins at Boston. It is the only game scheduled in the league.

Senior Hockey

CHATHAM (CP) — Chatham Maroons retained their unbeaten streak in the Ontario Hockey Association senior league since their return from their 21 - day tour of Russia and Sweden, as they defeated Stratford Indians 5-2 Wednesday night.

Maroons tallied one goal in the opening period, and were never headed in the game. They added two in the second and three in the third. Stratford scored in the second and third periods.

Playing coach Ted Power and linemate George Aitken led the win with two goals each, while George Mantgaze added the other. Mickey Roth and Butch Graham scored for Stratford.

Maroons remain in second place in the league standings, three points behind league leading Windsor Bulldogs who have 25 points. Bulldogs have played three games more than Chatham.

Chatham has now won three games and tied two since they returned from their overseas trip less than two weeks ago. Stratford forward James "dusty" Aldis suffered a fractured wrist when he fell into the boards in the first period.

The game was played before 727 fans.

Eagles, Packers Game

Will Be 60 Minutes Head-Knocking

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — "It will take 60 minutes of hard head-knocking."

This isn't suggested treatment for a juvenile delinquent, but Philadelphia Eagles' figuring on what it will take to beat Green Bay Packers for the National Football League crown here Monday.

The observation came Wednesday from Marion Campbell, six-foot-three, 250 - pound defensive end with the Eagles.

Campbell's job will be to help contain the Packer offensive. He said the Eagles must pursue the ball carrier and tackle in a gang to stop Green Bay's crunching ground attack.

"If we do, I'm sure we can come out the winner. It will take 60 minutes of hard head-knocking."

The battle starts at 11:45 a.m. EST and will be carried on the CBC Dominion television net-work.

Campbell said the Packers, champions of the NFL's western division, have powerful runners in Jim Taylor and Paul Hornung but that the club isn't any more of a running threat than Cleveland Browns.

"Taylor will go over you rather than around you. But if we pursue and gang tackle like we did against Cleveland in league play, I'm sure we can come out the winner. By pursuit I mean reading the play and going to the ball — getting all the linemen there."

Defensive tackle Ed Khayat said: "As good as Taylor is, I don't see where he's any better than Jimmy Brown of Cleveland and we did a good job on him in the second game. And we stopped John Crow of St. Louis pretty well."

When Cleveland defeated the Eagles 41-24 in the league opener Bobby Mitchell and Brown racked up a total of 309 yards. But when Philadelphia beat the Browns 31-29 in a return game, which sent the Eagles on their way to the eastern conference crown, Mitchell and Brown were held to 181 yards.

Heard This Before? You're Right

NEW YORK (AP) — The date and site for the third Floyd Patterson - Ingemar Johansson heavyweight boxing title fight may be announced today. The likely site is either Miami, New York or Los Angeles between March 15 and April 2.

"This time we'll definitely and positively name the date and site," Humbert (Jack) Fugazy said Wednesday. He is managing director of Feature Sports Incorporated, which holds the contract for the rubber bout.

"If you think you've heard this before, you're right. Fugazy has said this a couple of times in the last few months.

Junior Macs, Petes Tie

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Peterborough Canucks clung to a tie for second place in the OHA Eastern Junior "B" league here last night when they overcame a 4-0 deficit to grab a 4-4 tie with the Belleville Macs.

Meanwhile in Kingston, Whitby Millrenest romped up to the Canucks by defeating Kingston Frontenacs 11-9. The co-leaders and Canucks now have 18 points, the Macs have ten and Kingston eight.

Last night's tilt here was the third overtime game between the two clubs this season. The initial game 6-4 in Peterborough.

The Macs appeared to have last night's game wrapped up when they took a 4-2 lead in the first period, upped the count to 4-0 half way through the second but then started scoring.

The Canucks found their scoring eye, got the lead to 4-3 by the end of the stanza and potted the only two goals of the third to end at 4-4. The teams fought through a scoreless ten-minute overtime bout.

Warned by the OHA about fighting and brawling the clubs received hockey last night, ever by dividing eight minor penalties with no less then three of the Mac's Four costing them goals.

Neither club played up to par with passing going astray most of the time, shots missing the nets, and the majority of the plays ending up in scrambles. Both goalers, Moreau and Goddard, came up with some brilliant saves as the visitors held a 30-27 shots on goal edge.

Don Forsythe spearheaded the Belleville attack with two goals, his fourth and fifth in two games, while Roger Smith and Gary Hall bagged the others. Hunker garnered two assists, Larry Waverly, Doug Moreau, Bill McCabe and Bucky Ebbet one a-piece.

Hard-shooting Ronnie Naud triggered two goals for Peterborough with Wayne Milburn and Jeff Nichols getting the others. Great Nichols drew two helpers, Pete Morris, Gerry Dalliday and Rick Eckert one each.

Smith's shot from far off to the side of the net gave the Macs a 1-0 lead at 9.39 of the first. Forsythe, following the same pattern scored his first week. scored a pair of quickies at 12.33 and 12.34, from in close, to make it 3-0. Hull clicked on a goalmouth passing play with McGuire and Ebbet at 14.56 to make it 4-0 in the second.

Naud's 30-foot slap shot got one back for the Canucks at 12.48 and Milburn made it 4-2 while Canucks was in the sin-bin at 15.37.

Next, Naud and Smith drew penalties in the third and Smith was still off when Naud cut the lead to 4-3 at 12.05. Moreau helped one of the visitors a few seconds later and while Hull was serving his penalty, Nichols wound up the scoring with a gar-rifle blast high in the net at 17.37.

Both teams came close in the extra heat and Paul McGill of the McFarlands was knocked out when sandwiched by a couple of Canuck defencemen at 4.38. He skated out later to accept the Leader Club's first star. Don Forsythe and Billy McGuire drew the other stars.

Hockey Hints

By Lloyd Percival

"TOU CAN'T ALWAYS SHOOT"

Most N.H.L. coaches tell their players that whenever possible they should shoot when they gain possession of the puck in the goal scoring zone or have a chance to go in one goal during a rush. The reason for this instruction is that the coaches know many chances to score are lost when the player tries to go in too close. He either gets checked or has his shot blocked.

But there are times when for one reason or another the best play is for the puck carrier to try to "deke" the goaltender. The coach hopes the player concerned can recognize this situation can come up with an effective play when they just shoot and hope for the best.

One of the most effective "dekers" in the N.H.L. is Andre Habenton of the New York Rangers. When Andre is too close to the goal for an effective shot because the angles are covered he will fake a shot to freeze the goalkeeper or cause him to come out. Then Habenton will shift to the side and slide the puck behind the goalkeeper. The young player should practise this move since it is very effective against a goalkeeper who frequently tries to slide out into the puck. For more hints about goal scoring tricks send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10c c/o Hockey Hints, 80 King St. W., Toronto for my bulletin "Shoveth Has The Touch".

Int. League Interested In Hamilton

HAMILTON (CP)—The International Baseball League is interested in moving into Hamilton if other developments fall through, league president Tom Richardson stated here as he swung Wednesday.

Richardson was replying to a suggestion that Hamilton be considered by the league if negotiations to transfer Montreal's franchise to Syracuse, N.Y. fail. The suggestion came from Art Mullin, former president of Hamilton Cardinals of the Pony League and George Goodrow, president of Hamilton Cardinals of the Intercounty Senior Baseball League.

If Montreal developments fall through, "I will visit Hamilton early in the new year and will discuss the general situations as well as stadium possibilities at that time," Richardson said.

Negotiations started when Los Angeles Dodgers of the National League decided to drop the operation of Montreal Royals, their International League farm club. Since then, the league has decided to keep the franchise in Montreal one year if a suitable group can be obtained to operate the club.

Hamilton controller Jack MacDonald said Wednesday, that Hamilton has "one of the finest baseball parks in the country" and its seating capacity could be greatly expanded.

The law of averages caught up with Portland Buckaroos Wednesday night and Seattle Totems were there to be in the victims' chair. They edged Buckaroos 4-3 to cut Portland's winning streak at eight games.

Victoria Cougars shut out the last-place Winnipeg Warriors 3-0 and Spokane Comets beat Edmonton Flyers 4-2.

The Comets' win enabled them to move one point ahead of the sixth-place Flyers and one behind fourth-place Seattle. Totems are only one point behind Portland, but Buckaroos have five games in hand.

Marc Boileau spearheaded Seattle's attack Wednesday night with two goals, including the winner. Bill MacFarland and Tom McVie got single. Gordon Fashoway, with two, and Ron Mathews were the Portland marksmen.

The Cougars got their second straight victory over Winnipeg by taking a 1-0 lead in the first period and scoring twice in the third. Gerry Goyer scored twice and Doug Anderson once.

Del Topoll, Forbes Kennedy, Ray Bell and Dick Lamoureux scored for Spokane while Bob Solinger and Brian Smith replied for the Flyers.

Dennis Riggin blocked 33 shots in the Edmonton goal while Gerare Maniago kicked out 20 at the other end.

Bears, Giants Grid Clubs

Seek $25,000 From Toronto Trio

TORONTO (CP)—A writ was filed Wednesday by two National Football League clubs, seeking $25,000 from the promoters of an exhibition game at Varsity Stadium last Aug. 15.

The teams are New York Giants and Chicago Bears. Playing the first game involving two NFL clubs outside the United States, they drew only 5,401 spectators to see the Bears defeat New York 16-7.

Promoters of the event were further Sol Hart, businessman Mike Carroll and Jack Churchill, a sports writer and broadcaster.

The writ maintains that the two clubs have received only $25,000 from the promoters, half what they were promised for the game.

PROMOTERS LOST MONEY

It was estimated at the time of the game that the promoters lost $50,000 or more. They had expected a crowd of some 25,000 in the 37,000-seat stadium. Instead, gate receipts totalled about $50,000 and t'e estimated expenditures were some $75,000.

Carroll's office said Wednesday that he is out of town until Friday and there was no answer at Hart's business office.

Churchill, a wailer for the last few years, said he did not know where he would find the money to settle the claim.

"The game just about cleaned me out," he said. "I'm broke."

He blamed the poor attendance on "poor quality exhibition games put on by Toronto Argonauts. He said the fans thought this was "just another exhibition game and didn't bother to come."

HAS NO MONEY

"Our lawyer explained our financial situation to them (the Giants and the Bears) — we haven't any money. I don't know what will happen now."

"We are normally paid the day after the game," said Ray Walsh, general manager of the Giants, "and we have given them as much leeway as we can."

The men had formed Exhibition Football Enterprises Incorporated to promote the game, and report at the time said the teams were guaranteed $25,000 each or 1-3 per cent of the gate. Tickets sold for up to $10 each, with a low of $3.

Football executive Joe Ryan, who helped promote the game, said Wednesday he was with the firm "only in an advisory capacity" and had no financial connections.

Ryan, who maintains a home in Toronto, is an executive of Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Interprovincial Football Union.

Squirt Team To Play In Trenton

The Belleville Minor Hockey Association's Squirt division met last night and selected a team to represent the city in the Squirt hockey tournament being held at Trenton on Monday, December 26.

The tourney will be held in Trenton's Community Gardens and the Belleville team will travel to the game by bus. The bus will leave the Belleville Arena at 12 noon and the players are warned not to be late.

M. Acquafredda and B. Relyx were named team coaches. Following are the names of players who will make up the Belleville team: goalies John Meens, Bob Mitchell, Black Hawks; S. Browne; Greg Bartrik, Barons; and Bob Gibson, Frontienes; defencemen, Slapkastaxes, Browns; J. Cain, Leafs; Alan Jones, Rangers; Wayne Storms, Royals; and Pat McKenzie, Black Hawks; forwards Bob Hewitt, Rangers; Mark Acquafredda, Canadiens; Gary Sero, Bruins; Bob Mulvihill, Canadiens; Ted White, Red Wings; Bob Mitchell, Black Hawks; S. Sharpe, Barons; R. Lambert, Flyers; T. Burley, Leafs; Gary Hannah, Flyers; Brian James, Rangers; B. Locke, Red Wings; D. Romanus, Bruins; R. McLean, Royals; Joe Seymour, Black Hawks; J. Yancy, Macs, and Steve Moore, Macs.

Brundage Idea Pooh-Poohed By Many

LONDON (AP) — Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, explains arguments from many sides Wednesday on his proposal that gold medal winners should not be allowed to defend their titles.

Brundage wants the proposal discussed because he thinks it would be a means "of opening the games to more people and diminishing the chances of athletes making a career out of sports."

Jack Crump, secretary of the British Amateur Athletic Board, described the proposal as "nonsense." If it is Brundage's plan to depersonalize the games he is right off the track.

Don Thompson, the Briton who won a walking gold medal in the Rome games, said: "What an incredible proposal. So much of the excitement of the games is seeing whether a champion can repeat."

From Innsbruck in Austria, president of the 1964 Olympic winter games: "It would wreck the Olympic idea and make future Olympic games a farce," said Andreas Stelzer, president of the Austrian Ski Federation.

Sees Further Expansion By Majors

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Ford Frick Wednesday predicted major league baseball will have expanded to 24 teams and perhaps three leagues by 1964.

"The only thing I'm afraid of," Frick was quoted as saying in a Daily News story by Dick Young, "is they may try to do it too fast. You know how these baseball fellows are; it takes them a long time to get started, but when they do, they want it to keep moving."

The commissioner said he heard the American League, which only recently removed obstacles to expansion to 10 teams next season, has a faction which favors expansion to two six-team divisions in 1962. That's the year the National plans to expand to 10 from eight teams.

Expansion to 24 teams by '64, either as three eight - team leagues, or with two 12 - team leagues, split into six-team divisions—could bring a return to the 154-game schedule.

Sign Pro Contracts

By WILL GRIMSLEY

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Promoter Jack Kramer Wednesday signed two of the United States' top tennis players, Barry Mackay and Earl (Butch) Buchholz—and ridiculed charges that he was a wrecker of Davis Cup tennis.

"Mackay and Buchholz knew they had contracts with me regardless of whether they were to get in the Davis Cup," Kramer said.

"Instead of putting pressure on them to sign Interstate finals, this should have made them more relaxed knowing their future was assured."

The Sydney Telegraph had said Saturday by Kramer "privately have contributed to the American surprise loss to the Italians at Perth. Similar reluctance of other stars are blamed for Australia's loss of the Davis Cup in 1958 and the United States defeat in 1959 when Alex Olmedo was the target, the paper added.

"If they want to blame me for these setbacks let them — my back is strong and my skin tough," Kramer said, "but it's an stupid reasoning."

Mackay and Buchholz signed agreements promising each at least $50,000 in three years.

They launch their professional careers Dec. 31 at Christchurch, New Zealand, as part of a 4-man troupe playing a world series of roadshows for a $125,000 purse.

"It's good for the first time," said Buchholz, who at 23 is the youngest player even to join the tour. "We have been taught to be honest and it is always a very uncomfortable and dirty feeling for us to take part under the table as we do as amateurs.

"What is wrong is that amateur tennis authorities know things are not right among and they close their eyes to them."

OPPORTUNITY

Mackay, 25, University of Michigan graduate, said he believes professional tennis offers the only realistic avenue for a future bent on playing the sport on a big-time competitive basis.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., Wednesday, Edward A. Turville, first vice-president of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association, said "I'm pleased they are turning pro. One day individual feels he should be able to make his living out of amateur tennis that is the day he could either turn pro or turn in his racket.

"Our interest in the USLTA is not in two players but in the 6.3 million who play for pleasure."

Total Offense Title Goes To Baltimore

NEW YORK (AP)—Baltimore Colts led the National Football League in total offense for the third straight season although they finished fourth in the western conference.

The defending champion Colts gained 1,289 yards rushing, and 2,966 passing for a total of 4,255. St. Louis was second with 4,167 yards and Pittsburgh third with 4,046.

Green Bay Packers, who meet Philadelphia Eagles in the championship Monday at Philadelphia, were fourth in yardage with a 025—2,126 rushing and 1,875 passing. The Eagles were forth with 3,950 yards from which 1,824 came by passing. Cleveland was fifth with 3,916.

St. Louis won the rushing title with 2,356, followed by the Packers with 2,150.

PERSONAL HONORS

The passing leader was Baltimore with 2,956, followed by Philadelphia's 2,816, Pittsburgh 2,422, Green Bay's 2,126 and Dallas 2,104.

St. Louis had the best punting average, 44.9 yards.

Cleveland Brown's last game surge against New York Giants gave them the scoring title with 382 points. Green Bay was next with 333. San Francisco 49ers allowed the least points, 205.

On ground defence it was the Giants again leading the field, allowing only 2,212 yards a rush. The Giants and San Francisco shared pass defence honors. Each allowed rivals only a 47.8 completion percentage.

U.S. Officials Say

Tennis Amateurs Unpaid

NEW YORK (AP) — United States tennis officials took issue Wednesday with a statement by former Davis cupper Earl Buchholz that amateurs in the game are paid performers.

"I know of no cases in this country where players are paid under the table," said George Barnes, president of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association.

"I feel sure that Mr. Buchholz is referring to world tennis and not to tennis in the U.S. if that is so, then he is correct. Other countries do not observe the amateur rules as we do."

Buchholz, from St. Louis, and Barry Mackay of Dayton, Ohio, turned professional Wednesday by signing with Jack Kramer's troupe. Kramer is reported to have tied $50,000 for a three-year record. They starred on the U.S. team beaten by Italy in the Davis Cup Interzone finals in Australia.

UNDER SUPERVISION

Barnes said Buchholz and other U.S. Davis Cup players were under supervision of team captain Donald Freed while in Australia.

Barnes said Buchholz "received no money other than the expenses that are approved by the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association."

Edward A. Turville, USLTA vice-president said Mackay was supported by the USLTA since he graduated from the University of Michigan and "owes him a respect for the organization that made it possible for him to rise to a position worthy of recognition by the pro group."

"Virtually the same applies to Buchholz. What organization provided him the opportunities to enter Davis Cup play? What organization gave him a chance to go to Wimbledon and Australia? It was the USLTA which paid their way."

Harold Lebair of New York, treasurer of the association, said "unfortunately there are enough dishonest players and officials to cause the press and the public to become very skeptical. There isn't the least doubt in my mind that certain dishonest players have accepted remuneration from dishonest promoters of tournaments and that such remuneration permissible under the rules."

Fish Map Will Help, Not Land 'Em

OTTAWA (CP) — A new-type map designed mainly to help the sport fisherman in his search for where the big'ones bite has been issued by the federal surveys and mapping branch.

The first map issued is of the Sio. Agathe area, 50 miles northwest of Montreal. Maps of other Quebec areas and some in Ontario and Western Canada also are being planned.

E. D. Baldock, chief cartographer of the mapping branch of the mapping branch of the mines department, said Wednesday the new-type maps will be perfect for fishermen, hunters, hikers and skiers.

Asked whether the maps pinpoint good fishing spots, Mr. Baldock said: "We're not sticking our necks out like that."

Copies of the new map and others as they are produced may be obtained from the map distribution office of the mines and mapping surveys department in Ottawa or from agents of the department across Canada. The price is 25 cents.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

A couple of years ago hockey coach Scotty Munro was tagged as a screwball when he tried to name Jim Pie as his successor after he was suspended for socking a game official. Now, he is playing around with gadgets.

Owner and manager of Estevan Bruins of the Saskatchewan Senior league, Scotty has come up with a one-way spotter-to-coach shortwave radio communication. They used it for one game, the Bruins won—and Scotty now is thinking about going further into this electronics business.

He might install a small receiver and speaker in the shoulder gear of the team captain so that the spotter can talk to him and what he's on the ice. Scotty may as well forget it right now, because it probably won't work.

Football coaches in Canada and the United States command-nicate with press-box spotters by telephone. That's as far as they go although at one time Coach Paul Brown of Cleveland Browns of the National Football League tried to wire his quarterback for sound.

RADIO INTERCEPTED

The gadget became the laughing stock of the league and eventually was discarded by unanimous vote of NFL clubs.

The operation became a joke during a Cleveland - New York Giants game when the Giants intercepted Brown's orders to his quarterbacks. The Giants had a coach stationed on the sidelines with an interceptor set and he merely relayed the Cleveland plays to the New York defensive team.

That was one big bug. Another, Brown found out, was that the roar of the crowd drowned out his voice in the quarterback's helmet receiver.

The idea of wiring the signal-caller for sound intrigued some Canadian football officials, but it was no dice in Canada. It was against the rules.

Last year, an IBM machine played for dear old Rutgers. A real live quarterback still called the signals and the tackles tackled but the computer put its electronic eye on them all the time. It graded them on how they were doing.

Rutgers Coach John Stiegman said the machine helped him think. Every play of every game was minutely analyzed by Stiegman and his staff from motion-game pictures and the data was stuffed into the computer.

It didn't solve much.

"After all," Stiegman said later, "a coach always has to worry that a fullback doesn't break a leg during the game or flunk out. There's nothing a machine can do about that."

Would Limit Tokyo Games To 18 Events

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese Olympic Committee today voted to limit the 1964 Tokyo Games to 18 events in keeping with International Olympic Committee policy to restrict the games to manageable proportions.

The Japanese Games' list will be submitted next June to an executive meeting of the IOC which must give final approval. The committee will meet in Athens.

The Japanese list contains the same number and variety of events as took place in Rome this year except that the modern pentathlon and canoeing have been dropped. Volleyball and boxing have been added.

The other 18 are track and field, swimming s'd diving, cycling, basketball, field hockey, water polo and rowing.

In addition to the modern pentathlon and canoeing, archery and handball — two other approved events — were dropped from the Japanese list.

The Japanese committee said the four events were omitted because: 1. They are not popular in Japan; 2. They are not very popular in Europe or Asia; 3. There appears little prospect they will become popular in Japan, as host nation, in the future.

Barry Sullivan Brings Back Thriller on CBS Steel Hour

By CYNTHIA LOWAY

NEW YORK (AP)—Television star Rod Cameron, who has appeared in a long list of specialized adventure series during the last few years, was asked in an interview how he moved so easily from one part to another.

"I just change my hat," replied Cameron.

Barry Sullivan doesn't change hats at all—or easily as Cameron, but he has survived two changes of "agency." As Harbor Master—neither of which seemed very great stiff in the business. Now he is playing the leading (marshal's) role in a western called The Tall Man.

Dec. 28, however, Sullivan will be putting on his Mac Called 2 hat again to ran evening, the lead in a play called on CBS' Steel Hour drama, Operation Northstar.

WANTED CHANGE

"I wanted a change of pace and a change of scenery," explained Sullivan, "and I knew I would be back last August when I arranged to have 30 days off now to do the play...It's good for an actor to get to New York and have a chance to work with New York actors. And it's good to be wearing a necktie again."

Sullivan is a versatile performer—he toured with Belle Davis recently in a reading of Carl Sandburg's writings—and has no difficulty getting good parts. So after his experiences in two hats, he figures he can assure he would never get mixed up with another.

"But I have three children," he said, "and the money is a factor. For another, I've discovered that in television, a performer can be in one pore show after another—and still survive without injury to his reputation. It's different in the theatre or motion pictures—there is so much television and it is so immediate—that people know that you've been appearing and they know if they like you, but they tend to forget how good or bad your show was."

A company manufacturers has bought time on 185 TV stations on which to show Mister Ed, a comedy series starring Vancouver-born Alan Young and a talking horse.

Writer Lists Ten Stories Best in Hollywood in 1960

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Oh, it was quite a year!

Any year is bound to bring a lion's share of gimps and surprises from Hollywood. In 1960, it was more so. Rarely has a year's events seemed so varied.

Here are the 10 stories that seemed the most newsy and—or significant to this reporter during 1960:

1. The death of Clark Gable, one month in recent years received such world-wide prominence.

2. The movie strikes. The film industry seemed in grave danger of extinction awhen hit by strikes of writers and actors which ended in compromise.

3. The Desilu schism. TV's most famous team came to a personal and corporate division when Lucille Ball divorced Desi Arnaz.

4. The Monroe - Miller split. Marilyn Monroe was seldom out of the news, and her marriage to playwright Arthur Miller was rumored in danger of a backstage romance with Yves Montand. The marriage shattered, but the Montand issue remained unsettled.

5. New moral attitudes. Hollywood films were bolder and frankier in 1960. This brought a wave of reaction from Roman Catholic bishops and Protestants alike.

6. Ben-Hur wins big race. The chariot race was nothing compared to Ben-Hur's triumph in the academy sweepstakes. A record 11 Oscars.

7. The squared - off triangle. Debbie Reynolds wed Harry Karl quickly, she was formerly married to singer Eddie Fisher, now husband of Elizabeth Taylor.

8. Liz's ailments. Few toothaches earned as much coverage as Liz Taylor's, which delayed filming of Cleopatra.

9. Hollywood's "runaways." The most significant business development was the rise of production overseas because of tax laws.

10. Million-dollar wedding. Starlet Jill St. John supplied the Cinderella tale of the year by marrying heir Lance Reventlow, son of Barbara Hutton.

At the Belle

Gene Stratton Porter's Color Film "Freckles" and "Walk Tall" Action Color Films.

Adventure and stirring drama in the wild timber country when lumber thieves were a menace is brought to the screen in the De Luxe Color production of "Freckles" from 20th Century-Fox, opening today at the Belle Theatre.

In refreshing contrast to the science - drama presentations of the atomic era, the story goes back to the natural beauty of the Limberlost, when lumber barons fought to protect their property from bands of outlaw lumber-jacks. The gallantry of 20-year-old Freckles, orphan from Chicago, whose left hand is missing, in protecting the forest alone for his employer is known throughout the world.

Gene Stratton Porter, the author of the novel, "Girl of the Limberlost," "The Harvester," "Laddie" and "Freckles," became, during her lifetime, the largest selling writer in American history. The romantic interest of the story is in the capable hands of Martin West and Carol Christensen.

"Walk Tall" - Action, Color Film

Outlaws, U.S. Cavalry and the Shoshone Indians who lived the drama of the opening of Dakota Territory, live history again in the adventure-packed "Walk Tall," starring Willard Parker and co-starring Joyce Meadows and Kent Taylor. The De Luxe Color western from 20th Century-Fox is the co-feature attraction today at the Belle Theatre.

Complete performances daily begin at 2.00, 7.00 and 8.25.

Astrological Forecast

Friday December 23,
By CARROLL RIGHTER

General Tendencies: A wonderful day for whatever is of a spiritual nature as well as for gaining the good will or all by an understanding attitude. Also very good for any shopping that you wish to do and for celebrating the nativity or the Prince of Peace by whatever means are available. Out and see those you like the most tonight. Be gay.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — You can now finish whatever important tasks are awaiting you in an efficient manner. Also be of service to those who have been good to you. Evening is then just fine for any social affairs you want to attend. Be charming.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — By being active in usual outside today, you can make some excellent new contacts that will bring greater success in the future. Get together with good friends this evening and you can also add to your present circle of friends.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Any civic duty you perform today can lead to better things in the future. You can be of real help to a great number of people, so be sure to put your tact and tenacity into the work. Increase prestige — Expand.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — There are many splendid ideas you can follow today and make adjustments necessary, if you will get into a higher realm of consciousness. See things in their proper light and you will find there is no limit to the heights you can climb.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — you now know exactly what to do to bring happiness to the one you truly love, but you must concentrate awhile and permit such to come through naturally. A smile will literally work miracles. Dress very nicely.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — The ideal day to learn what your true relative position is with persons important to you. In certain you can do some lovely piece with the right stenographer, with partners so that they are relaxed. Come to a fine understanding.

Libra (Sept. 24 to Oct. 22) — A day to be of service to persons to whom you owe allegiance, and to those who can benefit by example. Be a pillar of light and efficiency and God will bless you.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — If attuned properly in the spiritual sense, you arise feeling very joyful and be most helpful to others. Also, this can be one of the most productive days in the long while for you. Be active day and evening. Smile.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Important you do what is needed for you to succeed in the sure all of your property matters are in best order. P.M. get house ready for the holiday. You work happily with those about you at home.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — You can now find the gifts you want. Get an early start then out so that all loved ones will be highly pleased. Also a good day to garner important information you need. Don't waste a moment.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — A day for being practical and making big headway. Find just the right duties that will give you an abundance, and to spare, in the early future. It would be well tonight to start a better bookkeeping system for yourself, too.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — You can find the right outlet for your capabilities now and the right people will be glad to listen to you. Go out boldly and show your appreciation for your good friends. Have a wonderful time. Get home by midnight.

If your child is born today . . . he, or she, will be one of those marvelous children who will have a tremendous insight into both the spiritual and material things of importance in life. Hence, it is important you share no expense in educating this youngster, since the man or woman of the future is in this chart and there is fame and fortune here — if you are understanding and wise.

Stirling

STIRLING — The Stirling-Rawdon Junior Red Cross under the direction of Mr. Maurice Bell gave an interesting program of music in Stirling theatre on Sunday evening. The Stirling Choir and Stirling District High School choir sang several selections under the direction of Mr. C. Hay-Ellis.

Mrs. Harry Smith won a turkey given away on Chantel's in Kingston. She guessed the correct time and her ticket was the one that was drawn.

Jack Wright, Mill Street and Mrs. Ted Clarke each won cash awards in the fish contest. The former was for his big trout and the latter for $10 in the mascot competition.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Hadley, Messrs. Harold Pitcher and Delmer Badgley arrived home on Friday evening, from a delightful trip by plane, to England and Scotland.

Mrs. Ivan Bonter entertained the Ladies' Aid at her home in the village after spending some time with Mrs. Bonter's daughter, Mrs. Hagerman, Carmel.

Mr. and Mrs. Merl Wilhelm who lost their home along the Trent River known as "The Rainbow Fishing Lodge" in the fire late in August have now completed the building of their home. On Saturday afternoon friends gathered to tender an "All at Home" to all the kind friends who had given them assistance. A large number of friends from River Valley and nearby points spent the day to wish the family.

BAND PRESENTATION

Stirling Citizens' Band, which was organized in 1928 held a special meeting last week and disbanded. They agreed unanimously to donate their musical instruments and $700 in cash to the "Stirling-Rawdon Junior Band." The formal presentation took place on Sunday evening at the concert in the theatre when Maurice Bell has been the leader of the Citizens' Band since 1936. The president r was Mr. Frank Hazlett and the secretary-treasurer Mr. Jack Bush.

ELECT OFFICERS

Rt.-Wor. Fred Bateman, past Grand Master of Ontario East Orange Lodge will install the new slate of officers for Stirling L.O.B.A. No. 110. The Worshipful Master is Bro. Russell Rupert. The election of officers was conducted by Bro. Donald Rodgers.

INSTALL NEW SLATE

Sister Gladys McAdam a past W.M. conducted the election of officers for Stirling L.O.B.A. No. 655 and installed the new slate for 1961. The new Worshipful Mistress is Sis. Leona Twiddy. At the close of Lodge all enjoyed an exchange of Christmas gifts.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour followed.

CATCH GIANT SHARK

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP)—A 6,000-pound, 24-foot long shark was towed slowly into Balboa Bay Wednesday, caught in the nets of a commercial fishing boat. John Fitch, director of the California Marine Laboratory, identified the specimen as a basking shark, a harmless variety that feeds on shrimp and small fish.

Wellington

WELLINGTON — Mr. Stanley Broadbridge of McMaster University, Hamilton, spent the week-end at his home on Saturday to spend Christmas holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Broadbridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Willsen Adams wife Tuesday evening supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bovey, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Greer, Deborah and Terry and Miss Barbara Elliott of Belleville were Tuesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Armstrong Tweed.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Webster and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wilbe were guests at the Webster—Bing wedding which took place Saturday afternoon, in the Memorial United Church in London. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morley Webster and the granddaughter of Mrs. Hubert Webster.

Just over 100 children of the village and community gathered in the town hall Saturday afternoon, where the Canadian Legion Branch 190 presented them with their annual Christmas treat. Some lovely Christmas trees were thrown before Santa Claus made his appearance and handed out a bag of candies to all the children. This has been an annual event by the Legion for several years.

and Richard, Mr. Sam Plume and Richard, Mrs. Sam Plume of Ottawa and Miss Cherabelle McPaul, of Toronto, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Doug McPaul.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Tripp attended the "At Home" on Saturday evening at Glenlyon, in honor of the parents Mr. and Mrs. Gerfield Gibson, at Glen Miller, their 35th wedding anniversary.

How To Make An Intelligent Decision

The agonies of making up our minds are often magnified because we go about it so ineffectively. Here's a guide, in January Reader's Digest, to help you avoid foolish decisions. You can discover the vital element which every big decision requires. Get your January issue today — 50 articles of lasting interest including two full-length book condensations.

END HIGH SCHOOL

of the U. of T. itself. Enrolment now at about 15,000—is expected to jump to 25,000 by 1970 with almost half the new students in the Arts and Science faculties.

The federated university's present four arts colleges cannot be expected to retain their vitality and integrity under such an up heave, he said, and the answer to the problem seems to be a series of residences established on the outskirts of the university.

On the question of colleges, somewhere in Ontario, he said there is no reason why institutions in less populous areas should aspire to the full panoply of a university."

The province needs colleges that will cultivate intensively and imaginatively the rich garden of education without piling for bigness and demanding acres of the profession schools."

NEEDS GRANTS

For such a network of colleges and professional schools, provincial grants will be needed on a differing levels of cost rather than on the present per capita system, Dr. Bissell said.

Endorsing a recent suggestion by Prime Minister Diefenbaker, Dr. Bissell called on university graduates to act as lay ambassadors in spreading modern techniques and Western democracy to underdeveloped countries.

RCAF

does not flash alerts on unsubstantiated information.

Air Marshal Slemon's part in the incident was not disclosed until today.

It is understood that he did not want any public mention of his part.

It is also understood that Gen. Foulkes, who is away at the time, was so impressed by his deputy's calmness that he immediately reported it to the Pentagon and Ottawa.

FLAWED SPOTTING

There have been other scares at NORAD headquarters but they have proved to be false alarms.

The latest was when unidentified planes in the air defence system were flying such courses as to make it appear they were actually developing from two or three directions.

The Oct. 5 incident is believed to have been the first missile scare.

Slemon noted so quickly that no missiles were in any silo-missile or bomber bases of the U.S. Air Force's Strategic Air Command.

The incident was caused by radar reflections from the moon. The Thule radar picked up signals which it had sent out itself and which bounded off the moon 500,000 miles away.

U.S. MAKES

culties in balancing their international payments. The U.S. is concerned over a decline in American gold reserves caused by larger movement of dollars out of the country than the amount coming in.

American investment in Canada amounts to some $16,000,000,000 about four times the Canadian investment in the U.S.

Fleming took action to terminate one section of the Canada-U.S. tax agreement by increasing the Canadian withholding tax on dividends of American - controlled companies to 15 per cent from five. He also slapped a 15-per-cent withholding tax on profits back to parent companies on American-controlled branches operating in Canada.

U.S. treasury officials said the American government has no power at present to retaliate against Canadian branches in the U.S.

One possibility is that Congress may be asked for legislation in this field.

AGRICULTURE

research to ascertain which of the possible ventures for co-operation are likely to be most profitable and beneficial.

It also recommended that renewed efforts be made to encourage more extensive use of provincial marketing boards might be established.

Among other recommendations:

That the Ontario government co-operate with the federal authorities in the purchase and withdrawal from agricultural production of sub-marginal land, which could be used for reforestation or the establishment of small industries.

That the Game and Fisheries Department provide for more greater control in the issuance of firearms and hunting licenses.

That the cost of farm truck licences be reduced.

SNAP ELECTION

crease will make the tax the same as Ontario's.

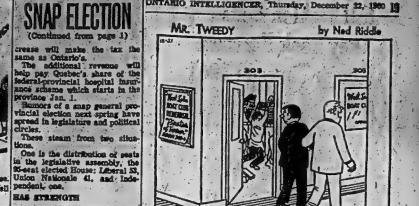
The additional revenue will help pay Quebec's share of the new provincial hospital insurance scheme which starts in the province Jan. 1.

Rumors of a snap general provincial election next spring have persisted in legislature and political circles.

These stream from two situations.

One is the distribution of seats in the next legislature, namely, 95 seat elected House: Liberal 53, Conservative 41, and Independent, one.

HAS STRENGTH



The other is the strong position of the Union Nationals party in the legislature council—provincial upper house.

All private and government measures passed by the elected members of the Assembly must be passed by the upper house before becoming law. But the Union Nationals has 17 representatives in the 24-seat House. Several have six members and there is one Independent.

It is feasible for the upper house to pass legislation approved by the Conservative majority of the legislature, but the trigger is normally not pulled.

One fairly recent instance was in 1945 when the Liberal majority at the time blocked a retail sales tax on luxury goods. Approved by one House and rejected by the other, the measure died.

If such a situation arose now over the proposed tax increase it is not clear just what the government would do. One possibility is the calling of an election.

"Now that you've decided to become a member, let's go in here and discuss your initiation ceremony."

British Tighten Belts As They Look Forward To Rough Times in 1961

By DAVE OANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—The British people appear to be in for a period of belt - tightening as they head into 1961.

As 1960 drew to a close, the nation was delicately poised on the rim of what appeared to be a downturn in economic activity. The signs that emerged in the cool months were a source of grave and scarcely - concealed concern for both industry and government.

Exports dropped in an alarming rate; imports remained relatively stationary or showed a slight tendency to rise.

Economic expansion appears to have stopped. Production already has levelled off and the productivity of workers has started to drop.

The slackened output has not so far been reflected in increased unemployment but this is feared during the early months of 1961.

Among those taking a gloomy view of the nation's future is the National Institute of Economic and Social Research, an independent organization financed by the Ford Foundation.

WORLD TRADE SLOWED

"It is increasingly clear that the United Kingdom economy is moving into a difficult period," says the highly - respected Institute in its latest review.

What worries many economists is Britain's seeming inability to maintain her position in world markets. The research group takes the view that British exports will rise only when world trade expands fastenough to offset the fall in Britain's share.
